An interview with James F. Joy of Detroit printed in a late number of the Free Press, contains some information which will be of interest to Tecumseh. We suggest that some concerted effort should be made at once to control this business and shape it for Tecumseh's benefit.

"I do not know that there is any movement to bring the Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinac road to Detroit," said James F. Joy, "but if it desires to come it will find a ready welcome from the Union Depot Company."

Maj. G. M. Anderson, the well-known railroad builder, was asked why the road did not come to Detroit and said:

"Because Detroit has offered it no inducements, I suppose. It was created by local aid along the line, and, if Detroit would secure it she must give it some encouragement, as Toledo did. The road now runs to Addison, Mich., where it connects with the Michigan & Ohio, which is a part of their system, and runs from Toledo to Allegan. If they were to build either from Dundee or Tecumseh into Detroit it would not only make their own road more valuable, but would be worth a million dollars to Detroit. The territory from Dundee to Allegan, through which the road passes, hasn't an equal anywhere in the state for products. The road passes through Dundee, Tecumseh, Addison, Hanover, Homer, Eckford, Marshall, Ceresco, Battle Creek, Augusta, Richland, Cressey, Montieth and Allegan. In all that country not one dollar in a hundred comes to Detroit, but is diverted to other points. By building that piece of about forty miles from Dundee, Detroit would secure one of the most valuable roads in Michigan. In coming to Detroit it would occupy the territory between the Wabash and Lake Shore, which is the Fayette branch from Grosse Isle, west, and it would give the Ann Arbor road a very short line to Detroit, not more than ten miles longer than the Lake Shore, and thus give us another road to Toledo and Cincinnati. Citizens of Detroit ought certainly to take hold of this. I've no doubt it could be secured by a subscription of $200,000, and it would certainly be worth $1,500,000. A soldiers' reunion is a good thing for a week or two, but a railroad working night and day the year around is a much more permanent adjunct to the city's prosperity."

DEATH OF JOEL CARPENTER

The Hon. Joel Carpenter, of Blissfield, died suddenly last Thursday morning, of heart disease, at the breakfast table, while surrounded by his family.

Deceased has been troubled for some time with his heart, and Wednesday an attempt to leave the house to go to the village, brought on a fainting spell, and he had to be carried home.

That morning he arose as usual, and was eating breakfast, when without warning he dropped his head on the table and was dead.

HON. JOEL CARPENTER

was born at Potsdam, New York, September 3, 1818. He was a direct descendant of the Carpenters of Surrey, England, through William Carpenter, who settled in Massachusetts, in 1638.

He attained an education, in St. Lawrence academy, and September 15, 1838, at the age of twenty, he left his father's house, and arrived in Blissfield, this county, on the 23d. He taught school at Deerfield, and on the 10th. of June, 1839, entered the law office of Halsey & Greenly, in Adrian. He was admitted to the bar Apr l 9. 1842.

He afterwards went into the mercantile business, but in 1858 sold out and entered the law profession again.

He has been supervisor and postmaster at Blissfield, enrolling officer and deputy U. S. collector during the rebellion, was state senator for two terms, beginning January 1, 1859. He introduced and secured the passage of the first general insurance law ever adopted in the state, and in company with Royal Barnum, of this city, organized the Michigan State Insurance Company.

He was a warm Republican, and attended as a delegate the great Free Soil Convention at Buffalo, in '48, and the first Republican convention, "under the oaks," at Jackson, in '54.

He was several times married, his last wife and two children surviving him. His son, Clement D. practices law at Toledo, and Carrie F. resides at the old homestead.

The funeral services were held last Sunday afternoon and were very largely attended. The special train from Adrian took down over fifty passengers.

CAUSE OF RHEUMATISM.

The supreme importance of purifying the blood and restoring the liver and kidneys to healthy action, has been a subject of great study, the results of which have enabled us to present to the afflicted, Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. By cures unprecedented, it has proved its right to the title of "The Greatest Rheumatic Remedy ever discovered."

OBITUARY.

Abbie Hall Comstock was the daughter of Jared and Catharine Comstock. She was born in Farmington, Ontario Co., N. Y., Oct. 9th, 1826. When she was 9 years old, in 1835, the family moved to Michigan and found a home in Raisin Valley, in Lenawee County. She was a pupil at the Graham School of Rev. Wm. Patchen, now of Franklin, Mich., and finished a liberal education at Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio. On June 7th, 1855, she was married to Rev. Robert Bruce McBride, who had for two years been pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Howell, Mich. His ministry at this place was terminated only by his death, in the prime of his life, in 1861. Both Mr. and Mrs. McBride are held in most affectionate remembrance by members of that church, who welcomed the young pastor and his wife at their first coming, who sustained them in their faithful labors afterward, and who still live to testify in regard to their unwavering attachment to them both. For some fourteen years after her husband's death Mrs. McBride remained among these loving friends at Howell. In 1875 she came to Tecumseh with her daughter Metta, her only surviving child, where they have ever since remained. In 1883 mother and daughter severed their connection with the church at Howell and united with the Presbyterian Church at Tecumseh, identifying themselves in sympathy and interest with the work carried on by this organization.

Most of the years spent here have been to both years of trial, through the failing health of the mother.

The character of Mrs. McBride was a strong and decided one. Happily the cultivation of intellect and heart went on hand-in-hand in its development. She became a Christian early in life. As years went on, after a few brief ones of happiness, her Lord saw fit to take her through sore tribulation, first in the loss of her husband and a child, then in the loss of health and strength, and finally in the endurance of unusual and protracted bodily suffering. But the suffering was bravely borne. Her faith grew brighter to the last, until it came forth as gold tried in the fire. Her sickroom was ever, save when the waves of pain rose highest, a cheerful spot to visit. When able to receive her friends at all, they were treated to pleasant words and smiles of welcome. The weary years of confinement and of constant suffering gave opportunity to friends and neighbors for the expression of sympathy and for the thoughtful remembrance of the patient invalid. This opportunity was nobly improved even to the last; not only in the heroic and tender ministry of the devoted daughter, but in the kind messages, and kind gifts and kind calls of friends, near and far. The tongue that is silent and the heart that is still acknowledge through the writer of this brief memorial, notice thankful appreciation of all this kindness. In the quiet cemetery of the Friends' meeting house, midway between Tecumseh and Adrian, sleeps peacefully the body, whose freed spirit has gone home to God. W. H. B.

Frank G. Mills was born in Macon, Lenawee County, Mich., May 3d, 1859, and departed this life Friday evening, Jan'y 16th, 1891, nearly 32 years of age. The funeral was on Tuesday, Jan. 20th, at the residence of his father, Isaac C. Mills, Rev. J. M. Getchell of Tecumseh officiating. The attendance was large, for the friends and neighbors knew how long he had been ill and of his manly career and manly ambition and last of all, sweet submission and patience.

From early youth he was never strong, but with will he lengthened his days and entered into business pursuits with vigor and determination to succeed. In the fall of 1883 he had a severe attack of pleurisy, but made effort to reach his father's house after much suffering, and from this he never fully recovered.

While in Louisville, Ky., in 1885, he had several hemorrhages of the lungs. After some months he was advised by physicians to go to Texas, where he resided until last August. While in that State he married Miss Molly Shropsire, of Austin, who with their little son Carl came with him last fall to his father's house in Macon.

For them he hoped to live and struggled for life, but at last was physically unable, and then with gloomy forebodings awaited the event which at last came and removed him from the scenes of earth. He enjoyed the full vigor of his faculties until the last, and reasoned as to death's coming in such danguage as those who loved him will never forget. Lingering as he did upon the border line between two worlds, he spoke words concerning his going blessed in their trust, beautiful in their love, and heavenly in consolation, victory and peace.

His decline was gradual until mortal life was extinguished as a candle burns out and silently expires. He met the death angel without a shudder or a fear, with hand clasped in the hand of her who was his wife and the mother of his child.

Such a going as his was not dying. It was, as Longfellow says, "transition," and fond memories of him will forever be in the hearts of parents, brothers and sister, relatives and friends. He was loving and dutiful as a son and brother and friend, affectionate and tender as a husband and father, all of which in its fidelity was, and is, glorious, deep and holy and immortal. He awaits the loved in that eternal realm, where more than mortals dream all that is good, all that is beautiful, all that is divine, is forever blessed and true.

"Who did you say was to be the next President?" 'Oh! I don't know and don't care. I'm not looking for Presidents—I'm looking for a bottle of Salvation Oil. It kills pain every time." 25 cts

One of our most estimable citizens may be thankful for the introduction of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, for its timely use has saved his life. For incipient consumption it is a certain remedy. Price 25 cts.

"Who said Hood's Sarsaparilla?" Thousands of people, who know it to be the best blood purifier and tonic medicine.

OBITUARY.

Parmelia Raymond, the daughter of Rufus Raymond, was born in the State of New York, on the 27th of Dec 1814. She was one of a family of 13, of whom but four survive. While she was still young her parents removed to Michigan and found a home in Raisin township, on the farm now owned by A. Macham. On Feb. 21st, 1841, she was married to Mr. John Rector, of Ohio. At his home she performed with loving fidelity the part of mother for his two motherless children, winning therby an answering love. In 1858 Mr. Rector left Ohio and came with his family to Michigan, having purchased the homestead of Mrs. Rector's father. Here they remained until 1866 when they removed from Raisin to Tecumseh. In their Tecumseh home, surrounded by their children and their familes, Mr. Rector was first called from earth, at the close of the year 1887 and now, Mrs. Rector has been called to follow him. The four children who survive are Frank C. Rector Mrs. R. B. Gillespie, B. J. Rector, and Mrs. A. Macham. Mrs. Rector's last illness was a protracted one of thirteen weeks. Through all her sickness she had every service and kind attention that loving hands and hearts could devise. For the last five weeks she was tenderly cared for by Mrs. Bailey, one of the two children of Mr. Rector's former marriage.

Not only those who lost a mother, desire to weave a chaplet, that shall testify to their appreciation of her worth, and lay it upon her grave; but a large company of acquaintances and friends ask the privilege of joining them in a tribute of respect for the one they have known so favorably and so long. Once more are we reminded that the fathers and mothers who endured the hardships of pioneer life, and prepared the way for the comforts of the present time are fast passing away. It becomes us to keep their memory green. W. H. B.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

A large number of pupils will take the monthly examination to-morrow. Several new studies will be commenced next Monday.

The school flag floated over the union building last Monday, to commemorate the admission of Michigan into the Union, Jan. 26, 1837.

The question, "Resolved, That Hamlet was insane," was debated by the Shakespeare class last Friday, and decided in favor of the negative.

The chemistry and book-keeping classes, which will begin work next Monday, will be very large.

We regret that some scholars think more of their skating than they do of their books.

Mrs. Perry, formerly Miss Kinney, who taught the Freshmen four years ago, gave us a call last Tuesday morning. We were all glad to see her again.

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

Dr. E. N. Palmer, of Brooklyn, was in town Sunday.

Mr. & Mrs. John Bowins, of Cayuga, Canada, are visiting their daughter, Mrs. Grant R. Sutton.

George M. Sutton had a hand very badly bitten by a hog one day last week.

Gardening on paper may begin now, for the annual floral guides and vegetable catalogues are arriving.

The F. B. church society, of Iron Creek, will give their pastor, Rev. M. D. Mack, a donation at Mrs. H. T. VanValkenburg's on Monday evening, Feb. 2nd.

The Ariel-Thomas Combination give an entertainment, at Arbeiter Hall, on Wednesday evening, Jan. 28th. The proceeds will be devoted to the High School funds.

Last Friday night, Vinnie Witherell, son of Dudley Witherell, a resident of the south part of the township, had the misfortune to have his leg broken by the kick of a horse. In attempting to rest his foot upon the ground, the bone protruded through the flesh, causing a great loss of blood. Dr. Conklin was called in attendance upon the case.

TECUMSEH AND FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB

THE TECUMSEH HERALD

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 29, 1891.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Isn't this nice January weather?

Jud DePuy, of Detroit, spent last Sunday in town.

Dr. Snyder has a new advertising card in this week's HERALD.

C. W. Dickinson visited his old home, Waterloo, Ind., last week.

Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Hathaway, of Addison, were in town last Monday.

Will Ingersoll has commenced reading a course of law in J. W. Wightman's office.

Jno. W. Beland, of Petersburg, was calling on Tecumsen friends Tuesday and Wednesday.

The ice crop has been mostly gathered, and there never was a better one in this section.

Hon. J. D. Shull took advantage of the legislative recess the first of the week to spend two or three days at home.

Charles Joslin is taking lessons in vocal culture in Detroit. He has obtained a position in the choir of the Church of Our Father.

J. H. Smith is in Grand Rapids this week in attendance upon the Masonic Grand Lodge. The new Masonic Home was to be dedicated yesterday.

Dr. H. B. Catlin, of Grand Rapids, was in town over Sunday. His stay was altogether too short to satisfy his friends. He is working into a fine practice there.

Albert Orr, who is now telegraph operator on the Wabash at Kunkle, Ohio, was in town a day or two last week. He is well pleased with his present position.

Will Blood has moved his family back to Tecumseh, as he has obtained work in the Tiffany Iron Works. He has rented Geo. Spafford's house and George will board with him.

Dr. and Mrs. George Howell gave a reception to a few of their personal friends on Friday evening last, and the fortunate guests present were most handsomely entertained.

Thanks to Dr. Snyder for a copy of the Watertown, South Dakota, Journal. It is an ably edited paper the size of the HERALD and contains a vigorous single tax department.

There will be a meeting of Tecumseh Chapter No. 42, R. A. M., on Wednesday, Feb. 4th. A full attendance is requested. Work in the most excellent degree. J. F. HICKS, H. P.

Miss Cora Smith, the accomplished daughter of E. J. Smith, editor of the Adrian Press, goes to-day to Chicago, where she is engaged as stenographer in the office of the DuPont Powder Co. Many friends wish her success. —Adrian Times.

A. J. Coddington spent Sunday with his family in town. His route has been extended from Toledo to Steubenville. He received a good shaking up and some severe bruises in the collision between the express and a freight train at Creston, Ohio, last Thursday.

The Russell & Morgan calendar for 1891 is a gem of the lithographers' and typographers' art. It contains twelve sheets, one for each month in the year, and all printed in colors. This house makes a specialty of playing cards, show bills and labels, and is one of the largest firms in this country. This beautiful calendar will be mailed to any address on receipt of 25 cents.

We paid the creamery a short call the other day and found the institution booming. Mr. Tremaine has gone into the pork packing business. He has put up one hundred barrels of pork this winter and a large stock of sugar cured hams, shoulders and bacon. He has bought [illegible],000 pounds of dressed pork. If the experiment proves satisfactory he will go into the business more extensively next year.

Capt. Fred B. Wood, of this city, has been appointed Quartermaster General of the Michigan state troops, contrary to the expectation of several local Democratic politicians, who are "personal friends of the Governor, and who had seen his slate." It is one of the best appointments Gov. Winans has yet made. Gen. Wood will bring to the position a long experience in military affairs, and an honest endeavor to do what is right. His salary is $1,000 per year.—Adrian Times.

Scribner's Magazine for February contains rich illustrations in very different manners, from the snow scenes of Mount Washington in winter to Mr. Blum's exquisite Japanese drawings. There is a series of interesting portraits of African explorers (several of them from the private collection of John Murray, Esq., the London publisher, and never before engraved), and artistic reproductions of paintings and sculpture of the Neapolitan school. The number is notable for such contributors as Sir Edwin Arnold, J. Scott Keltie, the Librarian of the Royal Geographical Society, F. R. Stockton, and Richard Henry Stoddard.

May DeWolf is visiting friends in Detroit this week.

Walter Heck has some new locals this week. Read them.

Anna Allen, widow of Daniel P. Allen, has been granted a pension.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Mize have gone to Napoleon to make a short visit.

Gen. Fred B. Wood was in town yesterday on professional business.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Whittier spent last Sunday with friends at Milan.

Clarence and Clyde Gainsley and Chas. Goodrich, of Dundee, were in town last Sunday.

Special meeting of No. 69, F. & A. M., to-morrow evening for first and third degree work.

The Table Co. received an order last week from St. Louis, Mo., for 700 tables in one order.

Prof. David Howell, of Lansing, has been making his brother, Dr. Geo. Howell, a brief visit this week.

The Democratic County Convention will be held on Thursday, Feb. 19th, at Dean's Opera House in Adrian.

Mrs. Ed. Oliver started for her home in Kansas to-day, her mother, Mrs. Eliza Wheeler, going with her.

Harry Snell, of Grand Rapids, was in town yesterday, having made a short stop here while on a business trip.

Some petty thieves were abroad one night last week, but they were promptly brought up with a round turn by the officers.

No. three of the Tecumseh Entertainment Course will be a concert by the Lotus Glee Clvb on Tuesday evening, Feb. 10th.

Earl Sheldon is going to Portland, Oregon, having obtained a good position as book-keeper in a large wholesale house there.

The pupils of the ninth grade in the High School are trying to raise funds with which to purchase an organ for their room.

Chas. Harring found a pocket-book containing quite a sum of money last Saturday, which was returned to the owner, Mrs. G. D. Kies, of Clinton.

The Epworth League will give a "State and Capital" social at the M. E. church, on Friday evening, Jan. 30th. Let there be a good crowd; come and spend a pleasant evening.

Owing to the promotion of Captain Fred. B. Wood, it leaves a vacancy in the captaincy of Co. C. An election will be held next Tuesday evening for the purpose of filling this vacancy.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian Church will give a social in the parlors of the Church on Monday eve., Feb 2d. All young people are cordially invited. Doughnuts and coffee 10c.

H. Brewer and Co. have just put on the market a new and improved brick and tile machine, made from new patterns, called Brewer's No. 8. They claim it to be the most perfect sample of brick-making machinery ever turned out of their shop.

A petition has been forwarded from Tecumseh to the Legislature, protesting against the passage of House Bill No. 12, prohibiting the killing of rabbits by ferrets. It is claimed that such a law, if enforced, would injure the fruit growing interests.

The young people of the M. E. Church will hold a "Harlequin" social next Wednesday evening, Feb. 4th, at the residence of Wm. C. Heck, to which the public are cordially invited. Prizes will be offered during the evening for—well, come and see. An admission of ten cents will be charged at the door.

The HERALD mentioned the fact two weeks ago that an effort was on foot to issue a half million edition of Henry George's work on Free Trade and Protection. The price will be only ten cents per copy. We have received a quantity of subscription blanks for the book, and people who desire can leave their subscriptions at this office, or get blank here and forward their own subscription.

The ladies of the Raisin Valley W. C. T. U. will hold their third Demorest Medal Contest at the Friends Church in Raisin Valley, Saturday Jan. 31st, at 2:30 p. m. A class of eight or ten young people will compete for the medal which is presented by W. J. Demorest of New York City. Good music will be furnished and an enjoyable time is anticipated. If you have ever attended one of these contests, it is unnecessary to ask you to come again; if not, come and see what they are.

The Messenger says: "It is difficult to please everybody. If the Messenger is is not stopped at the expiration of subscription to some subscribers they get out of humor about it. If it is stopped with others they get out of humor, and think we are afraid to trust them until they come to town. The fact is we pay the cash for what we buy and need the cash for what we sell in order to do this." We have been troubled very much in this way with our own subscribers, and hence have adopted a cash-in-advance and a credit price. Subscribers can take their choice.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

On account of sickness the sample meeting of the Club, which was to have been held at F. C. Rector's, was held at John Schreder's, Thursday evening, Jan. 15. The meeting was a success and those attending it were well entertained. Mrs. Schreder gave up the dining room for the display of samples. The committee was kept busy arranging them till half past seven. The exhibition of grains, seeds and vegetables by the male members was fine, and the samples put up in bottles were well worth preserving for future reference. The ladies were not in the rear with their exhibits. The samples of their handiwork were many and included the necessary, the useful, and the ornamental. The doors were thrown open a little before eight for the inspection of exhibits.

After a sufficient time had been allowed for viewing the samples the President called the meeting to order to listen to the literary part of the program, which was opened by instrumental music by Ora Gillespie. After the music the President gave an excellent address, in which he compared the pioneer times, when his father first settled in this section, with the present.

Grace Gillespie read an essay entitled "Life is what we make it," proving that it depends upon our thoroughness whether it be grand and noble.

Lovina Schreder gave a fine recitation, after which some time was taken up with the questions.

The question—"Ought a farmer to give his children an allowance? If so, how much, and should a girl be allowed as much as a boy?"—was left over, to be answered at the next meeting by O. B. Finch and John Fisher.

The members were so well pleased with the exhibit it was decided to have a similar one the coming fall, to be held all day, and enlarge the exhibit by the addition of live stock.

The next meeting will be held Thursday evening, Feb. 12, at John Gillespie's.

NORTHERN LENAWEE CLUB.

The N. L. Farmers' Club met at the residence of J. F. N. Bowen on Friday evening, Jan. 23d. A goodly company assembled, and at 8 o'clock a business meeting was called, at which, after the preliminaries, a motion was made and unanimously carried to ratify the action of the Institute Committee. W. B. Keyser was then appointed delegate from this Club to the Union picnic convention. It being the annual meeting an election of officers was necessary. The officers of '90 were elected to succeed themselves, which speaks well for their executive capacity.

President—W. B. Keyser.
Vice Pres.—Chas. McNeil.
Sec. and Treas.—J. F. N. Bowen.

Next in order was the literary program, which drew merited praise. Henry W. Longfellow and his works were the evenings's study, as follows:

Song, "The Bridge"—Mrs. O. P. Remington.
Life of Longfellow—Mrs. S. P. Sheldon.
Roll call—Responded to by quotations from the author.
Charade—Mrs. W. B. Keyser.
Music—Banjo Club.
Charade—J. F. N. Bowen.
Song—E. M. Coller.
Dec.—O. P. Remington.
Encore—Banjo Club.

The committee on program presented the name of John G. Whittier for next meeting and also strongly hinted at a social. Program later. The Club extend hearty thanks to the Banjo Club and especially to Messrs. Coller and McClure, who so kindly donated their valuable assistance. Don't fail to hear the B. C.'s should they appear again.

The latest discovered metal, lighter than hard wood and stronger than steel. The Michigan Stove Co., after a series of scientific experiments, are enabled to make an admixture of this wonderful metal with their regular high grade iron, with the result of producing smooth castings, additional strength, and preventing cracking; thereby rendering stoves made of this admixture more durable than WROUGHT IRON or STEEL. The "GARLAND," which are the product of this Co., are the only stoves made having that advantage. PROCEEDINGS OF THE STATE CONVENTION

At Galion—Platform and Resolutions as Reported by the Committee—Animated Discussion.

GALION, O., Jan. 22.—There are more than six hundred delegates in attendance at the annual meeting of the state grangers. They are men of more than ordinary intelligence and selected by the various local organizations because of their knowledge of public affairs. From all present indications they know exactly what they came here to do, and they intend to do it. Many professional politicians are on the ground, and a warm fight is promised over the proposition to commit the farmers to independent political action. Thus far the advocates of a third party seem to have the whip hand. The merry war will come, however, when the committee on resolutions submits its report, or perhaps reports, for there will probably be both majority and minority recommendations.

The committee on resolutions is as follows: Third district, E. K. Snook; Fourth, S. M. Green; Fifth, L. M. Bollinger; Sixth, C. M. Davis; Seventh, F. E. Fitch; Eighth, John Seitz; Ninth, J. B. Mosgridge; Tenth, John Howell; Eleventh, Robert McNichol; Twelfth, D. M. Blosser; Thirteenth, J. C. A. Cobb, Fourteenth, A. C. Nixon; Fifteenth, R. B. McCammon; Sixteenth, Israel Baxter; Seventeenth, R. C. Bundy; Eighteenth, W. A. Farr; Nineteenth, Charles Jenkins; Twentieth, A. M. Whittaker.

The farmers evidently intend to be consistent. A resolution by Delegate Whittaker, of Cuyahoga, attacking the pass system was passed early in the session. The resolution provided that any delegate who had come to the convention on a pass should be barred from the deliberations.

In his annual address President Lykins hinted at the probability of independent political action unless the farmers' just demands were granted. He counseled moderation, and urged the alliance not to ask for anything unreasonable. He told them to first accomplish those reforms which were within their grasp and then proceed to greater achievements. They should discountenance office seekers and shun the politician as they would the reptile beneath their feet. He opposed the national banking system, and the aggregation of wealth in every form.

The following gentlemen were selected as state delegates to attend the national convention of the farmers' alliance at Omaha, January 27: N. L. Bunnell, Warren; W. P. Brown, Shelby; John Smith, Logan; M. B. Jacobs, Paulding; F. E. Fitch, Sandusky; W. H. Likens, Marion; F. M. Harvey, Madison; E. S. Parrett, Fayette; C. M. Paise, Highland; D. C. Bundy, Belmont; J. B. Howe, Jackson; G. F. Trussell, Tuscarawas; Joshua Crawford, Morrow; D. W. Ditmer, Holmes; M. T. Calhoun, Jefferson; E. W. Turner, Trumbull. W. H. Likens and Joshua Crawford were elected delegates-at-large.

The Platform.

GALION, O., Jan. 23.—It is evident that the conservative element of the alliance is in control and will direct the remaining actions of the Farmers' state meeting here. The platform is very long, but moderate. It was read to the convention by John Seitz. The preamble recites the accumulation of wealth, the multiplication of monopolies, and the narrowing hard lives of those engaged in trade and manufacture, and farming in a small way. Following this come the demands:

Therefore we demand that the government issue full legal tender notes on real estate, not to exceed half of the assessed value, at 2 per cent. per annum; we demand a just and equitable system of graduated taxes on incomes; we demand that congress shall pass such laws as shall effectually prevent the dealing in futures on all agricultural and mechanical productions; we condemn the silver bill recently passed by congress and demand in lieu thereof the free and unlimited coinage of silver, with the understanding that the government purchase all the silver bullion produced in the United States which is offered at market rates; but in case the government coins the bullion, it shall be entitled to the difference between the metal value of a silver dollar and its coin value; We demand the passage of laws prohibiting alien ownership of land, and that congress take prompt action to devise some plan to obtain all land now owned by the aliens and foreign syndicates; we demand the government ownersnip of the entire railroad system and the telegraph system of the United States; we demand the passage of the Conger lard bill; we oppose the subsidies, both state and national; we favor the election of president and senators by a direct vote of the people and reduce the senatorial term to four years; we condemn the Associated Press for the unjust course pursued toward the farmer, by misleading him in relation to the menacing attitude of the confederated monopolies, and we pledge ourselves to withhold patronage from any paper that misrepresents our interests.

Trusts are unqualifiedly denounced as commercial monsters, the demand made that their charters be annulled, and those engaged in them be punished by life imprisonment. They demand that no corporate company be permitted to issue stock in excess of one and one-third times its assessed value.

As to pensions, the platform says: "Resolved, That the soldiers, their widows and heirs should be paid the difference between the face of their contract and the coin value of the sum paid, with compound interest at six per cent., and we demand that a graduated income tax be levied to provide funds to meet this just demand."

In state matters the removal of the State Dairy and Food Commissioner for failing to enforce laws against adulterated goods; the Australian ballot system; the right to each county to fix the salaries of its own officers; pure foods and drugs; school books at cost; letting county printing to the lowest bidder; observation of the Christian Sabbath; listing property at its cash value less any indebtedness on it.

As to the liquor traffic this resolution was adopted: "Resolved by the Farmers' Alliance of the State of Ohio, that the liquor traffic is an enemy to the home, to society, to church and to state, and that the time has come when all Christian people and all lovers of good government should cease to be indifferent and unite their efforts for the suppression of evil."

A resolution to the effect that the alliance ought to unite with any labor organization seeking to effect political reform was adopted.

Another resolution making all stocks, bonds, etc., that do not contain the assessor's stamp, null and void, was adopted.

The last resolution demands that manufactured articles, finished or unfinished, and all raw material in the hands of the manufacturer be assessed for taxation, or that farm products grown within the past year be exempt.

The report of the committee on resolutions brought forth a long discussion. The clause providing for government control of railroads and telegraphs was stricken out. The railroad fare clause asked for was made two cents per mile, and a demand made that freight rates be reduced to meet the depression of the prices of farm products. The conference report of Knights of Labor and Farmers' alliance was adopted so far as not to conflict with the resolutions previously adopted. The session was very animated and great diversity of opinion shown on all subjects. This afternoon they discussed the proposed changes to the constitution.

Officers Elected.

GALION, O., Jan. 24.—At ten o'clock last night the Farmer's state convention adjourned sine die. It was a success in one particular at least. It was announced that there would be an opportunity for exchange of ideas, and there was. It is doubtful whether any one member was convinced that his particular idea is not the right one

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, W. H. Lykins, present incumbent, of Highland county; vice president, J. C. H. Cobb, of Jackson; secretary, Mr. Crawford; treasurer, Mr. Ruhl; lecturer, Charles Jenkins, of Mahoning. The salaries were finally fixed as follows: President, lecturer and members of the executive committee $2 per day and expenses when a[illegible] employed; secretary $800 per [illegible] urer $50 per year.

The ballot for members of [illegible] five committee showed a p[illegible] for the following: R. B. McCammon of Crawford county, Israel Bixler of Stark, J. Hale Collins of Greene, Newton Burnett of Warren and John Smith of Logan.

BRUTAL OUTRAGE,

NEW BRUNSWICK FARMER SEIZED BY ROBBERS,

Who Hang Him By His Wrists In His Barn—He Remains Hanging There for Fifty-One Hours —Rescue Comes Barely In Time.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 23.—A brutal outrage has just come to light in the country back of this city. John Thomas, a well-to-do farmer, was found on Monday hanging by his wrists to a beam in his barn, by some neighbors who had been looking for him. He was unconscious, but revived under the influence of stimulants. He says he was working on his farm last Saturday when he was suddenly seized by two men who bound him with ropes. They then robbed him of $57. After this they tied ropes around his wrists and triced him up to the beam where he was found. According to Mr. Thomas' story he had hung there by his wrists for fifty-one hours. His wrists were terribly swollen and his arms show the fearful strains put upon them. He says he knows who his assailants are and arrests will follow. Mr. Thomas' farm is in the country remote from here and he was not missed until Monday.

TENNESSEE TRAGEDY.

A Son Kills His Father's Assassin—Both of Prominent Families.

NEWHORT, TENN., Jan. 24.—Captain E. C. Dunn was shot and killed at his home near this place at an early hour in the morning by W. A. Moore, Jr. Peyton Dunn, son of the murdered man, then shot and fatally wounded the murderer.

Young Dunn and Moore had quarreled during the day and late at night Moore went to Dunn's home, armed with a shot gun, and calling young Dunn out, said he had come to kill him. Captain Dunn came out and tried to pacify Moore, and asked him to come in and spend the night. Moore did this, but in the morning he again became enraged and emptied his shot gun into Captain Dunn's abdomen, killing him instantly. Peyton Dunn then shot Moore. Both families are very prominent and the affair has created a good deal of excitement.

AN INDIANA TRAGEDY.

One Man Killed and Two Are Dangerously Wounded.

PORTLAND, IND., Jan. 24.—Joseph Shearer shot George Miller through the heart and dangerously wounded Eli Miller at the home of Newton Stevenson, four miles northeast of here. Shearer had an altercation with the former over business matters and killed him, and on his brother interfering, turned upon him and exchanged a number of shots, receiving a bullet in his arm. All the parties concerned are farmers residing in the neighborhood.

EMBEZZLED $30,000.

DECATUR, ILLS., Jan. 24.—Major Charles F. Emery, of Maroa, has been indicted by the grand jury for forgery and embezzlement. He was the agent of money lenders in Ithaca, N. Y., and, it is charged, appropriated thirty thousand dollars for private purposes. He is a prominent Republican politician and has always stood high in this community.

BRADLAUGH ILL.

The Ingersoll of England at Death's Door.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Bradlaugh, the Radical member of parliament for Northampton, who has been ill for some time, is much worse, and his case is now regarded as almost hopeless by his physicians.

The Glass Trust Broken.

FINDLAY, O., Jan. 24.—The Flint Glass trust has collapsed, owing to the failure of its projectors to agree on the details and distribution of offices. Such is the announcement made this morning by one of the Findlay members. The dissolution affects nineteen factories in Ohio, Indiana and Pennsylvania.

He Had the Price

And Paid for His Seat in Promises.

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST NORTH DAKOTA'S NEW SENATOR.

Newly Elected Senator Hansbrough Said to Have Made Extraordinary Promises to Secure His Election—Agreed to Anything That He Was Asked.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—A special to the Tribune from Bismarck said there have been some developments in connection with the senatorial contest. It is claimed that Hansbrough was compelled to make written pledges of the most extraordinary character to secure his election. By the first of these alleged agreements, Alexander McKenzie is to be consulted with reference to the distribution of the patronage throughout the state, and no appointments unsatisfactory to him are to be made. Colonel Ball and one or two other trusted leaders in Fargo are to control the patronage in that disirict with McKenzie's consent. This power, it is said, is to be used for the upbuilding of the element which started the war on Pierce and is now supposed to be dominant in the state.

Such men as ex-Governor Miller, George B. Winship and George W. Goodwin, who were the leaders in beating the lottery scheme last winter, are to be crushed out and refused recognition of any kind, if the stories in circulation are to be believed. McKenzie is once more in the saddle through the aid of the farmers and prohibitionists, who stood with him in breaking down the caucus system in the Republican party.

The other feature of the story is that Hansbrough was required to submit his views in writing to the Democratic caucus before that body would pledge its support. He submitted four separate letters. Three were returned unacceptable, while the fourth was accepted as satisfactory. The views asked for were with reference to the tariff, the elections bill, and prohibition. It is claimed that Mr. Hansbrough so modified all previously expressed opinions and so altered his attitude on the tariff and election bill that his candidacy became acceptable to the Democracy. Another feature of the alleged compact with McKenzie is that Hansbrough will aid in the election of W. F. Ball to Casey's seat in the United States Senate.

Monkey and Parrot Time in the South Dakota Legislature.

ST. PAUL, MINN., Jan. 26.—A Pioneer Press Pierre, South Dakota, special says: At the afternoon session of the House in voting on the Davison county election contests, sensational bribery charges were made. Representative Converse first annouced that he had been threatened with the defeat of a bill in which he was interested if he did not vote in a certain way. Mr. Kelly then stated that there were other influences at work, that he had been offered one thousand dollars to vote for Moody for senator and would disclose the name of the party to the proper committee. This created a decided sensation. Mr. Hall said he had been offered a bribe of one thousand dollars by a prominent Democrat to keep out of the Republican caucusses, and could produce witnesses to the same. The committee on bribery announced that their report would be ready at the next session, and the first one of the contesting independents was seated.

A New Senator.

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan 24.—Ex-Congressman H. C. Hansbrough will represent this state in the United States Senate for the next six years. On the seventeenth ballot he was elected by sixty-seven votes. All but five of the twenty-three Democrats rallied to his support. Senator Pierce takes his defeat coolly and gracefully. He left today for Washington.

MINE EXPLOSION.

ANOTHER HORRIBLE FATALITY IS REPORTED

From the Mining Region of Europe—Many Victims Thought to be Buried in the Debris.

BERLIN, Jan. 24.—An explosion has taken place in a Hibernia coal mine near Selsenkirchel. There has been great loss of life, the full extent of which is not yet known. Forty bodies have so far been brought out of the pit. Search for the dead and living is still proceeding.

Aged Couple Killed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—An incoming train nearing the city on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, ran over and instantly killed James E. Owens, aged 79, and his wife, Nancy, aged 74. The couple were crossing the track in a milk wagon and as both had their ears covered for warmth, they failed to hear the train. The engineer says he whistled before reaching the crossing, as usual, and owing to the character of the roadway it was impossible for him to see the wagon until too late. The bodies of both were badly mangled and were brought to the morgue where they were claimed by friends.

AN EDITOR KILLED.

HAMILTON, O., Jan. 24.—Late in the afternoon John K. Aydelotte, editor of the Daily Democrat, was caught in the fly-wheel in the engine room of the new building and instantly killed, his body being mangled in a horrible manner. He was a prominent Mason of this city and at one time postmaster.

THE SKIFF CAPSIZED

And Two Out of Four Occupants are Drowned.

A Street Car Strike.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COL., Jan. 26.—The street car drivers and conductors on the entire system of this city are on a strike and not a car is running. The strike was inaugurated because of the refusal of the company to increase the scale of wages.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced."

NATIONAL GRANGE CIRCULAR.

To the Patrons of Husbandry of the United States:

We are entering upon a new year in our work under conditions very favorable to the extension of our order. The farmers are now ready to organize, and all that is needed to increase our numerical strength is active, well directed effort.

The National Grange has arranged to pay Deputies something for their services as organizers, and presume that State Granges have generally arranged to supplement that help. State Masters should at once secure the services of successful organizers. The lecturer or public speaker can help to arouse the people, but without the persistent work of the organizer the work is lost.

Secure the services of organizers first, and then if good lecturers can follow them, and contribute to the enthusiasm, well; but if only one person can be sent into the field, let it be the organizer by all means.

It seems almost certain that there are to be stirring times in this Republic during the next few years, and farmers have an important work to do, and great responsibilities to meet. We must carefully prepare for the same. This movement among the farmers is attracting much attention, and causes no little anxiety among thoughtful men of all classes.

Farmers are just now the recipients of much advice. Some of it is probably disinterested, but much of it is prompted by a desire to use the farmer movement to promote some selfish interest. The display of strength and disposition to do something has brought to farmers' organizations every man who has been out of joint with society and existing parties and all the visionary and impracticable schemes and theories cherished by mortal man are being pressed upon the attention of farmers.

Men who have never been trusted by their fellows, or who when trusted were proved failures, are big with the hope that their worth and wisdom will be recognized by the "Honest Yeomanry." We should listen to all, consider every suggestion, but take time to be sure we are right before we trust our interests (which are the public interists), in the hands of impractical theorists; or before we indorse any doubtful scheme. We cannot advocate a false principle, or indorse quack remedies, without weakening our influence, and alienating from our cause those who are able to help us in the coming contest for "what is ours by right." We should not be afraid of politics or of politicians, but should try to understand both and make the best possible use of both. No fraternal or class organization, however, can become a partner of or an annex to a political party without committing suicide.

As individuals we may be partisans, but as an organization we must be free from all such entanglements; and not allow the order to be used to promote the success of any party. We need not be restless if other organizations attract more attention because of radical utterance, or more active participation in the partisan struggle of the day. There are breakers ahead and it will require skill and care to avoid shipwrecks. Politicians will gladly use farmers' organizations to win place and power, but when secure in position they will forget pledges, and laugh at our disappointment, when we realize that we have again been betrayed.

The political problem must be solved, but we want the correct solution. It must be worked out, and proved, before we will know that we are right. There need to be a great many political funerals in high life in both political parties. It is very difficult to discover which of the parties furnishes the most obedient servants of Wall street and monopoly.

If the rank and file cannot succeed in sending to the rear these betrayers of the people we may be forced to organize a party under a new name and new leaders. The people are considering this question earnestly, and will soon be ready to decide. The strength and volume of this sentiment should not be judged by the froth which appears upon the surface. The determination to have reform from some source is deep, strong and abiding.

We desire in this connection to give the sign of caution. There is danger that in some of the political "storm centers" our members may be tempted to compromise the Grange by forming entangling political alliances. Remember that our members are as free as the air in the exercise of their political privileges; but the Grange as an order cannot call political conventions, nor send delegates thereto, nor nominate candidates nor discuss their merits at any Grange meeting.

This word of caution seems, necessary because of reports received from some sections of the country. I trust our members everywhere will see the importance of keeping the organization out of all partisan struggles. Attend party caucuses and conventions, and make your political power felt, but go not as a delegate from any Subordinate or Pomona Grange. Rash and inconsiderate action may undo the good work of years. The old reliable remedies do sometimes seem to be a little slow in their action, but they are safer than the untried nostrums of irresponsible quacks. J. H. BUIGHAM,
Master of National Grange, P. of H

RECIPROCITY AT DINNER.

The New York Chamber of Commerce has always been a rather hide-bound protectionist organization. At its annual dinner there has usually been a large amount of protectionist speech-making. But a change seems to be coming over this conservat ve old body. The needless hardships which the two McKinley laws—the tariff law and the customs administrative law—have laid upon commerce seem to have made the members of the Chamber of Commerce open to other and better ideas.

At its annual dinner just held reciprocity was the keynote of the speeches. The gentlemen comprising the Chamber apparently feel with Blaine that "the United States has reached a point where one of its highest duties is to enlarge the area of its foreign trade."

Chauncey M. Depew, who is an aspirant for the Republican nomination for the Presidency, made the first speech and dilated upon the beauties of reciprocity with the Spanish-speaking nations of South America, with Canada and all American nations or colonies. His reference to the recent money crisis in London, and the way in which the Bank of France came to the rescue of the Bank of England by lending it $15,000,000 at 3 per cent., when the current rate was six. This, he said, was "international reciprocity of the broadest and most beneficent character."

The most remarkable speech of the evening was made by Carl Schurz on foreign commerce. His concluding words were as follows:

"I am deeply convinced, if we wish to spread our commerce over the world and revive our merchant fleet, we must at last touch the vital point. As the South needed the abolition of slavery to disclose to her all her possibilities of prosperity and greatness, so our industries and our commerce, in order to enter upon a new and boundless career of progressive development, need only the breaking of the chains which hamper them. Ah, gentlemen, it is, after all, in the air of freedom that the genius of America most grandly unfolds its powers. I am a profound believer in the great destiny of this Republic. Only let us have an agriculture relieved of the artificial burdens put upon it; a manufacturing industry liberated of the taxes which make production costly; a commerce free to get ships, and carrying merchandise challenging the competition of the world; let us have a free field and a fair chance for American enterprise, labor and invention, and this Republic will not only remain one of the first granaries of the earth, but advance with giant strides to become the greatest industrial and commercial nation of the age—aye, the greatest the world has ever known."

At the conclusion of the regular speeches ex-President Cleveland was loudly called for. In his response he referred to Mr. Depew's address as follows:

We have heard that reciprocity would be a good thing between us and the Spanish-speaking people. Now, it occurs to me, if it would be a good thing with the Spanish-speaking people it would be with the people who speak our own language. We have heard that our breadstuffs go across the water and that the people over there need them, and that means a market for those products, does it not? [Applause.] I have heard that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, and it occurs to me that if we already have a market for our products it might be well to cultivate it instead of trying to manufacture another.

We have heard to-night how England and France have within a few days rushed to our rescue in a financial way, prompted thereto by the noble sentiment of reciprocity. If they are so willing and glad to extend the hand of rescue in financial matters, how would it be to give them a chance in commercial and other matters? [Applause.]

FRANCE TAKES A HAND.

She Will Treat Us to a Dose of McKinleyism.

The French are trying their hand now at high tariff making, moved to do so partly by the example of our man McKinley. The commission having the matter in hand says that one of the motives which induced it to propose a great increase of duties was "the examples given by different foreign countries."

The foreign country whose tariff legislation has awakened most opposition in France is the United States with her two McKinley laws. First came the McKinley customs law, which went into effect August 1, and which places great and unnecessary difficulties in the way of our trade with foreign countries. This measure was intended and framed with the direct purpose of lessening our purchases in foreign markets by putting artificial and unjust restrictions in the way. What are some of those difficulties? Duties must be paid not only on goods but on the boxes or other coverings, and on all charges on the other side in transporting the goods to the seaports; "the goods must be accompanied by a sworn statement from the manufacturer giving the cost of each component part of them, and nothing is to be allowed at the custom houses for breakage and damage at sea.

These barbarious actions have had a very unpleasant effect on the French manufacturers, and when this measure was first passed by Congress last spring there was much talk in France about retaliation. Efforts were made to get all the principal Governments of Europe to agree upon a common plan of retaliation upon us; but these efforts were unsuccessful, the hostile and jealous nations of the continent not being able to pull together, and England, the great free trade merchant nation of the world, being opposed to any scheme for raising up barriers against trade.

Meanwhile France had to a certain extent taken matters into her own hands, and had adopted a measure of partial retaliation against us. Early in the summer the grain tariff was revised, a duty of 33 cents a bushel being imposed on our wheat, while that of other countries was allowed to come in at 15 cents; and Indian corn, hitherto free, was made dutiable. The measure has already resulted in restricting our exports of these commodities to France. For the nine months ended September 30, 1890, we sent France 4,880,000 bushels of corn against 6,960,000 for the same time last year.

But the summer passed, and it became certain that the McKinley tariff bill would become a law. Then the French girded up their loins and decided that something more must be done to show that tariff making is a game that two can play at. Accordingly, a commission was appointed to prepare a tariff bill. This commission has prepared the first draft of its bill and will present it to the Chamber February 1.

A few of the provisions of this bill will be of interest to our farmers as showing how they will be hurt by it. A new and striking feature of the bill is the fact that it will impose a minimum and a maximum duty, the latter being about one-quarter higher than the former. The maximum duties are intended for nations whose tariffs do not give France favorable trade conditions.

Of course the maximum is intended for us as the chief tariff offender. It is a counter-irritant for McKinleyism.

Here are a few specimen duties of special interest to American farmers, the rates given being the minimum duties. France imposes at present a tariff on live beeves of $7.25 a head; the proposed duty is about $11.50. Salted beef pays now about four-tenths of a cent per pound; the duty is to be raised to about two cents. In 1889 we sold France 29,000,000 pounds of lard; this year the amount rose to 44,000,000 pounds. This lard all entered France free of duty; but it is now proposed to tax lard nearly two cents a pound.

These duties all bear heavily upon our farm products. The McKinley act was passed to protect manufacturers; the retaliation for that measure strikes the farmers. Do they want that kind of thing to continue?

COTTON WEAVING.

A Combine to Keep Up Prices Notwithstanding a Cut in Wages and the Great Cotton Crop—Profits of the Mills.

A late number of the New York Dry Goods Economist furnishes, all unconsciously of course, a curious illustration of the folly and uselessness of a duty on cotton cloth. In a column of "cotton goods notes" it prints the following item:

"The cotton weavers in Lonsdale, R. I., have received a notice of a cut-down. They were getting 58 cents on a fifty-yard long cut, but they are to run a finer grade of goods with five yards additional on the length, and will receive but 36 cents a cut. The Valley Falls and Ashton weavers' wages have been reduced about as much. This is a reduction of more than one-third in wages.

In the same column the Economist says: "The largest crops of cotton the world has ever grown are in sight; the price is low and may grow lower, still manufacturers are doing their best to make water run up-hill in their endeavors to maintain the price of cloth at a given figure." This was said in reference to the "combine" of most of the Fall River and other weavers to prevent sales of printing cloths, used to make calico prints, at less than 3 5-16 per yard—an agreement which has thus far been kept, notwithstanding the fact that raw cotton has declined in price nearly 3 cents a pound since August.

So much for one column. In the very next column the Economist prints an article entitled, "Fall River Dividends." The Fall River cotton mills have just held their annual meetings, and the reports for the year were handed in. This article gives the more striking facts from those reports. The general net earnings of a few of these mills are as follows:

The Flint mills earned $67,778, or 11½ per cent.

The Stafford mills $122,000, or 15 per cent.

The Narragansett mills $61,000, or 15 per cent.

The Hargraves mills $63,000, or nearly 16 per cent.

The King Philip mills $181,000, or 18 per cent.

The dividends declared by these mills were in each case considerably less than the net earnings, the balance of the profits being added to the surplus, or else put into improvements. From a Fall River paper it is learned that the dividends paid out by another mill amounted to 12 per cent., by two others to 14 per cent. each and by the Granite mills to 19 per cent.

The McKinley duty on the kind of cloth that the combine is keeping up to 3 5-16 cents a yard, is 2¼ cents a yard, or the same as 64 per cent. ad valorem, and is of course a prohibitory duty. Do the American people think that this duty is necessary? Do they think it reasonable? Lower wages, cheaper cotton—both wages and cotton, too, cheaper than in Europe—and yet these men are granted prohibitory duties. How long will such things continue?

An Example at Home.

Prof. James Bryce, of England, the eminent author who wrote "The American Commonwealth," said recently in an address in Brooklyn, N. Y.:

One of the most discouraging manifestations of the National spirit in Europe is the desire of peoples there to wall themselves in and erect barriers between each other by tariffs and other artificial means. It was supposed that when power had been taken from the Kings and placed in the hands of the people and their representatives that legislative and representative bodies would not be so powerfully influenced by National hatreds and prejudices, and that they would be more open to reason and the welfare of the people at large. Not so, however. European Legislatures were passing prohibitory and retaliatory tariffs, and the European nations were accepting them under the belief that in international trade one nation's gain was another nation's loss. They therefore thought that by preventing outside nations from gaining any thing from them they could keep the benefit at home by a tariff, and enhance their power prosperously by shutting their doors, instead of seeing as all political economists see, that mutual trade is mutual prosperity."

This excited enthusiastic applause from the eager and enthusiastic audience, who saw that these words had a meaning for us in McKinleyism.

It Benefits Vermont.

The bounty on sugar applies to the maple-tree product as well as to the beet sugar and cane sugar. How to get the bounty on maple sugar is told in our market notes. The crop being the product of a tree which takes years to grow, it is easy for the maple sugar producers to co-operate in making and marketing their maple sugar, so as to prevent over-production, preserve a well-regulated market, and obtain fair prices for an article that will entitle them to the highest bounty.—Farm and Home.

Taxing the Poor.

The tin-plate taxes are a sample of the McKinley tariff system which lays most of the burden on the classes of articles used in the poor man's home.

THE PULPIT AND THE STAGE.

Rev. F. M. Shrout, Pastor United Brethren Church, Blue Mound, Kan., says: "I feel it my duty to tell what wonders Dr. King's New Discovery has done for me. My Lungs were badly diseased, and my parishioners thought I could live only a few weeks. I took five bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery and am sound and well, gaining 26 lbs. in weight."

Arthur Love, Manager Love's Funny Folks Combination, writes: "After a through trial and convincing evidence, I am confident Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, beats 'em all, and cures when everything else fails. The greatest kindness I can do my many thousand friends is to urge them to try it. Free trial bottles at J. J. Orr's Drug Store. Regular sizes 50c. and $1.00.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many costomers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, Knightstown Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction.' Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

The Best Blood Medicine

So say Leading Physicians and Druggists, and their opinion is indorsed by thousands cured by it of Scrofula, Eczema, Erysipelas, and other diseases of the blood.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla has won its reputation by years of valuable service to the community. It is the best."—R. S. Lang, Druggist, 212 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass.

Dr. W. P. Wright, Paw Paw Ford, Tenn., says: "In my practice, I invariably prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla for chronic diseases of the blood."

Dr. R. R. Boyle, Third and Oxford sts., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "For two years I have prescribed Ayer's Sarsaparilla in numerous instances, and I find it highly efficacious in the treatment of all disorders of the blood."

L. M. Robinson, Pharmacist, Sabina, O., certifies: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has always been a great seller. My customers think there is no blood-purifier equal to it."

"For many years I was afflicted with scrofulous running sores, which, at last became so bad the doctors advised amputating one of my legs to save my life. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon saw an improvement. After using about two dozen bottles the sores were healed. I continue to take a few bottles of this medicine each year, for my blood, and am no longer troubled with sores. I have tried other reputed blood-purifiers, but none does so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—D. A. Robinson, Neal, Kansas.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., JAN. 29, 1891.

Mrs. E. S. Tate was in town Monday.

John Gillen, of Saline, was in town Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Cook were in town Tuesday.

Mrs. B. F. Thompson has been quite ill for several days.

Miss Myrtle Shoards went to Tecumseh last Saturday.

Mrs. Laura VanDeMark returned to Detroit last Friday morning.

William Rogers went to Ann Arbor on business last week.

Miss Grace Spafford arrived here last week Saturday for a short visit.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Smith spent two or three days in Ann Arbor this week.

It is reported that there is soon to be a change in one of our meat markets.

Mrs. P. C. Smith entertained a large number of friends on Thursday evening.

Miss Kate Ebbett, who has been in Chicago for several months, is home for a visit.

We are sorry to hear that the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Blanchard is quite sick.

Mrs. Coller, of Tecumseh, was the guest of Mrs. Peter Kishpaugh last week.

F. D. Lancaster and Mrs. C. S. Burroughs made Tecumseh friends a short call Tuesday.

W. H. Dorr went to Grand Rapids Monday for the purpose of attending Grand Lodge.

Mrs. Mary Corey had a poor spell last Thursday morning. She soon recovered and is now as well as usual.

We understand that D. H. Davis expects to go to Chicago April 1st, to study dentistry. Mr. Davis has already done some very good work in that line for people here and we feel confident of his success in making it a profession.

The M. E. ladies have decided to postpone their entertainment, that was to have been given this week, until Saturday eve., Feb. 7th. The people will be treated to one of the best programs that amateurs have ever put upon the stage. Full program next week.

Mrs. David Brooks has advertised for sale, at public auction, on Wednesday, Feb'y 4th, all her farming implements and stock and a large part of her household goods. We understand that Mrs. Brooks intends building a house in town and moving here as soon as practicable.

The lecture which was to have been given here last Thursday evening by C. E. Bolton on "Lands of the Midnight Sun" was a failure, on account of a limited supply of gas. The lecturer, however, spoke for a short time on various subjects that are now interesting the public, gave a short exhibition with the stereopticon, and made arrangements to come back this week with plenty of gas. Accordingly on Wednesday evening he gave the lecture, illustrated with beautiful pictures, and fulfilled in every particular all that he had advertised.

Miss Anna Schneirla met with quite an accident last Saturday and the most surprising feature of the affair was that it did not result more disastrously. She was going to the flour mill and as she reached Chicago street one of the tugs came unfastened. This frightened the horses and they started to run. She kept control over them until they reached W. P. Wastell's residence, when they turned the corner, throwing her out, breaking the wagon and smashing things generally. Miss Schneirla was unhurt, except a few bruises, and hitched her team to another wagon and drove them home.

The banquet given by the Woolen Mill last Saturday evening to the employes was a success in every particular. The supper was prepared and served by Mr. and Mrs. George Belding and those who were fortunate enough to attend pronounced it perfect. About a dozen young ladies assisted them in waiting upon the guests. Two tables were spread the whole length of the hall and covers were laid for 150 people. A few guests outside of the mill were invited—the pastors of the different churches and members of the Town Board and their wives. Some little time was spent after supper, socially, and the affair ended as pleasantly as it began.

Ara VanTuyle and Fred Chandler started last Friday on the 4 o'clock train for a little trip, without taking the trouble to inform their parents of their intention. They had not gone further than Toledo when they began to think "there is no place like home," and accordingly turned their footsteps homeward. Fred Chandler arrived in Saline Sunday night and accompanied his father over here Monday. Mr. VanTuyle, hearing that Ara was in Ann Arbor, drove over Tuesday morning and they both returned the same evening. Both boys show a true spirit of manliness in acknowledging that they regret their action and propose to conduct themselves so as to show their appreciation of the good homes they left.

New Method of Measuring Liquors

BY WEIGHING THE CONTENTS OF BARRELS AND CASKS.

Series of Experiments by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Having in View a More Perfect System of Estimating Liquor for Taxation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—For the purpose of securing the most accurate method possible of ascertaining the contents of packages of distilled spirits for taxation, the commissioner of internal revenue has for the last few months been conducting a series of experiments in order to determine whether more correct results may not be reached by weight than by caliper and mean diameter measurements, the system now practiced.

While the latter method is accurate provided the package is perfectly and honestly constructed, it is subject to inaccuracies when this is not the case. Under this system the capacity of a cask is arrived at by outside measurements, and when the package is honestly made and the material of which it is constructed is of that absolutely uniform thickness estimated for in the construction of the caliper, the result of such measurements is correct. But when portions of the staves or heads are thinner than the estimate, either by design or as the natural result of preparing the same, then under the present system the capacity of the cask could not be accurately determined, and more spirits could be placed on the market in such packages than are actually tax paid.

As these defects are well known it is quite possible that unscrupulous taxpayers may purposely manufacture packages to hold more than would be indicated by the present system of measurement. It has, therefore, been thought desirable to adopt a more accurate method if possible. The investigation thus far made indicates that about all the imperfect measurement caused by manipulation of the packages may be overcome by the system of weighing. It is also believed that the expenses of officers may be reduced under the proposed system. All the correspondence and interviews thus far had with numbers of the leading spirit producers in the country warrant the statement that they are almost universally in favor of the change.

Should the facts developed on further investigation continue favorable, it is very probable that the commissioner will take the necessary steps for establishing a system of weighing spirits for taxation in the near future.

LOST HIS MIND.

SUICIDE OF REV. JAMES S. WHITE, OF ROCK HILL, S. C.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 24.—Rev. James S. White, D. D., pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Rockhill, S. C., during a fit of aberration of mind, committed suicide by drowning himself. On account of ill health, he resigned his pastorate, but the church refused to accept the resignation and gave him a years vacation. Between 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning he awoke and left the room against the protest of his wife. His son followed him, supposing he had gone to his study. Not finding him, he summoned his friends, and they searched miles around for the missing man. It being supposed that his mind was effected, one of the party suggested the possibility that he had climbed up in the tower of the windmill and had fallen in the tank. Upon examination he was there found dead, floating in the tank, sixty feet above the ground. Dr. White was one of the most prominent Presbyterian divines in the state.

A SEVERE BLIZZARD.

Railroad and Telegraphic Communication Cut Off—Damage to Property.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—About midnight Saturday night, a storm set in over this city and all the New England states, that in severity and damage done has almost equaled the great blizzard of the winter of 1888. Wet, clinging snow fell for nearly ten hours, and its weight broke down the telephone and telegraph poles, crushing the buildings they fell upon. The shade trees of this city have been broken down and spoiled of their branches, the electric lights could not burn last night because the wires were broken, the telephone communication has been interrupted, and telegraph communication made impossible.

The wind attained its highest velocity at noon yesterday, 38 miles an hour. The storm came up along the Atlantic coast from the gulf. No news from the sea has yet come in, but it can not but be that considerable damage has been done to shipping and possibly many lives lost.

A great many surrounding towns are snowed in, and must remain dead to the outer world for several days. The snow is from six inches to two feet deep.

SHOT HIM DEAD.

Fatal Result of a Quarrel Between Two Indianians.

PORTLAND, IND., Jan. 26.—A murder was committed three miles north of this city by Joseph Shearer, his victim being George Miller, a young married man, and son of Lewis Miller, a successful farmer of this county. Shearer is a married man, and last fall went to Darke county, Ohio, leaving his family here. Mrs. Shearer pledged her furniture to George Miller for money to take her to her parents at North Star, Ohio. A few days ago Shearer returned and demanded the furniture, but refused to pay the loan. Miller, his brother Eli, his wife and Shearer met accidentally last night at the house of Newton Stephenson, where the trouble was renewed. The parties commenced firing and George Miller was shot dead, Lewis Miller received a wound in the leg and Shearer was shot in the arm. Shearer was immediately arrested and jailed.

BROTHERLY AID.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Jan. 26.—Dr. Runyan, a prominent dentist here, and member of Clark lodge No. 101, F. & A. M., has been suffering for a long time from an injury to his left shin bone. Catching cold recently, the injury began to grow serious, and the bone below the tibia began to be affected. Two weeks ago this dead bone was cut away, but as there was a space of four square inches exposed, healing went on slowly, and it seemed doubtful that the skin would join over this. It was evident that transplanting of skin would be necessary and the matter was broached to his lodge and fourteen members offered to let small pieces of skin be taken from their bodies to heal their sick comrade. This was done at Dr. Runyan's office Sunday. The names of the Masons contributing pieces of their skin are: Edward Harford, Samuel Harford, John Webb, Thomas Lott, Charles Schaeffer, O. F. Hypes, William Ramsey, Charles Sykes, Theo. Troupe, Frank Coblentz, Joseph Beck, C. B. West, S. J. Lafferty.

COWBOY DUEL.

THE CODE OF HONOR AS PRACTICED ON THE PLAINS.

The Ever-Ready Revolver Called Upon to Settle a Card Table Dispute—One of the Men Is Riddled With Bullets.

CHEYENNE, WY., Jan. 26.—Details of the duel between cowboys at Lander have been received which show it to have been a deliberately planned affair. One of the cowboys goes by the name of "Sixshooter Billy" and the other is called "Dab." Their trouble arose over a game of cards and they decided to settle it with sixshooters. They adjourned to a corral near the ranch buildings. Several cowboys attempted to stop the fight but without success. The men stood back to back then each walked fifteen steps, turned and commenced firing. "Sixshooter Billy" was killed, four bullets striking him before he fell. "Dab" was shot three times, in the shoulder, head and hip. He is lying at the ranch in a dying condition. Both men are from Texas, but their real names are not known.

ROLLED DOWN STAIRS.

DANBURY, CONN., Jan. 23.—Miss Jessie Gilbert, a prepossessing young woman, who lives at No. 12 Grandview avenue, had a rough experience with a robber. Miss Gilbert lives with the family of William H. Oakley, and in the afternoon went out to make a call. When she returned home late in the afternoon she found the family all away, but there were evidences that an intruder had been there. She heard a noise up stairs, and just as she started to investigate a hand was clasped over her mouth and she was thrown down. A spool was thrust in her mouth and her apron drawn up over her head. Then her hands and limbs were tied, and in that position she was placed across a chair. She heard the robber going from room to room, and after what seemed to her an age he left the house.

After a while Miss Gilbert succeeded in getting down on the floor, but try as she would she could not free her limbs. She rolled over and over until she reached the stairs, and succeeded in sliding down to the first floor, where she made her way to the door which the robber left open when he went away. There was a stoop, which in her helpless condition she could not mount, and she lay in the yard until Mrs Henry Haggaman discovered her. It was a long time before she was able to tell the story of the assault.

FOND OF ELOPING.

An Illinois Woman Runs Away the Second Time.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 26.—The experience of a lot of elopers furnished the police with a peculiar case. Nine years ago Joseph Holdener, a young man of Belleville, whose father was a prominent undertaker at Belleville, Illinois, eloped from that place with Mamie Palmer, a pretty fifteen-year-old girl from Chester, Illinois. They came here and were married.

Their married life was uneventful till a few months ago, when Harry Cook, alias Fisher, eloped from Indianapolis with a married woman, and also came to this city. The woman died last August, and then Cook became very much infatuated with Mrs. Holdener. The latter's husband had befriended Cook, and had secured him a remunerative position. The upshot of the affection between the two was the elopement of Cook and Mrs. Holdener, and now the disconsolate grass widower has concluded to return to his father.

A Treasurer's Shortage.

UPPER SANDUSKY, O., Jan. 26.—The bondsmen of Charles Veith, Jr., the defaulting township treasurer, John W. Lime, Charles Veith, Sr., John David Ruby and John Buser, have filed suits of attachments in the common pleas court here against the departed official. The first three are Veith's bondsmen for the township funds, and the amount claimed is $1,971.44. Charles Veith, Sr., and John Buser are his bondsmen for the school fund; amount claimed, $3,799.64. This makes the amount of Veith's shortage $5,701.08, $600 more than originally announced. A dozen other suits have been filed against the decamped treasurer by numerous creditors. No effort is being made by the officials here to overtake Veith and bring him to justice.

Found Her Husband Dead.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 23.—Mrs. Clayton H. Stanford, of New York City, whose husband, the well-known horseman, died while a guest at the Hotel Grand, reached this city late last night, having started from home on receipt of a telegram announcing the illness of her husband. She knew nothing of his death until she arrived at the hotel and found his remains had been removed to the morgue. Her grief was very distressing. Mrs. Stanford started on the return today with the remains of Mr. Stanford

Pulverize the Pugilists.

ST. PAUL, MINN., Jan. 26.—The athletic clubs of St. Paul and Minneapolis were thrown into consternation by the introduction of a bill by Senator Dean, of St. Paul, making all public fistic encounters, challenges and the conveyance of challenges misdemeanors in the eyes of the law. The half dozen mills arranged to occur in February will be cut off if the bill passes.

WOODSTOCK FARMERS' CLUB.

The club met at Loss Parson's on January 17, and a pleasant time was enjoyed by all. After a part of the programme was rendered, dinner was served, which all did justice to. Then new members were elected, and Mrs. Lovina Smith was made an honorary member. Mrs. Harris resigned, and Horace Wilcox was elected chaplain. Executive Committee for one year is Mrs. Josephine E. Joslin, Mrs. George Bartlett, Theo. M. Joslin. For two years, Mrs. Will Taylor, Mrs. George Smith, W. H. Harris.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified of Dow V. Terry, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to petitioner.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 16th day of February next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW

has been in the van of American thought for more than three-quarters of a century, ranking always with the best and most influential periodicals in the world. It is the mouth-piece of the men who know most about the great topics on which Americans require to be informed from month to month, its contributors being the leaders of thought and action in every field. Those who would take counsel of the highest knowledge on the affairs of the time, and learn what is to be said regarding them by the recognized authority on both sides, must therefore read THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW, the Nestor of the magazines.

"THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW is ahead of any magazine this country has ever seen in the importance of the topics it discusses and the eminence of its contributors."—Albany Argus.

"Has become, as it were, the intelligent American citizen's hand-book on great questions of the hour."—Buffalo Express.

"THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW touches Americans on almost every point in which they are interested."—Boston Herald.

"A moulder of intelligent opinion by the impartial presentation of both sides of important subjects."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The list of recent contributors to the REVIEW forms a roll of representative men and women of the time, including W. E. Gladstone, J. G. Blaine, Cardinal Gibbons, Speaker Reed, Ex-Speaker John G. Carlisle, W. McKinley, Jr., Ouida, Madame Adam, General Sherman, Admiral Porter, Mme. Blavatsky, T. A. Edison, Bishop H. C. Potter, Elizabeth S. Phelps, Chas. S. Parnell, A. J. For the past six years Miss Belle Barlow has been organist of the choir During the time everything has passed off very harmoniously with those connected with the choir as members. She was always found at her post, if but one member of the choir was present with her, and was ready and willing to assist any and all, and she was never known to refuse to do all in her power to help at any social or public entertainment, gathering or funeral, leaving her work when it was a great inconvenience and loss of time, as well as money, to her. When it became known to the choir that she was about to sever her connection as their organist, and wishing to make known to her that they sincerely appreciated her worth and valuable support, they met at her home on Saturday evening and spent an hour very pleasantly, and left as a memento of their esteem and friendship a miniature Parian marble statue of Handel, the German composer, in full court dress. The statue is a high quality of marble and of artistic workmanship. They, with one accord, wish her a bright and happy future and a welcome greeting whenever they meet her again.

The following pupils, desiring to be remembered by their teacher and beloved friend, Miss Belle Barlow, presented her with a copy of "My Garden," a book of beautiful steel engravings of flowers, with a descriptive poem, together with congratulations and best wishes: Misses Flora Chase Nettie Barrett, Clara Temple and Daisy Riggs.

On Monday afternoon, at the home of the bride's parents on South street, Miss Belle Barlow, youngest daughter of Samuel and Sarah Barlow, was united in marriage to Irving T. Bush, of 202 Columbia Hights, Brooklyn, N. Y. Rev. J. A. Lowry performed the marriage ceremony. It was a quiet occasion, only the near relatives of the contracting parties being present. The happy couple left on the five o'clock afternoon train, over the Wabash, for their future home of happiness and sunshine at Brooklyn. The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Bush, and is respected very highly by those who know him. He, in company with his brother, is in business in New York City, they having assumed the responsibility of their father's business since his death last fall. The bride is too well known for one of our ability to attempt a fitting eulogy on her worth and ability. In her departure she leaves a host of friends and pupils, who feel their loss very deeply—more so than they can express by word or deed. To say she will be missed is but a feeble expression of her value to the village and community. Her superior musical talent has won for her a wide reputation in musical circles and formed friends among the highest classes of society. We, in behalf of her many friends, extend congratulations and best wishes for a long and happy voyage over the sea of time.

RAISIN RACKET.

W. F. King, of Adrian, is expected to deliver an address at the Seminary Friday evening, on his trip to Scotland.

The contest at the Valley church was postponed two weeks on account of one of the contestants not being present and the singers were not present.

Rev. Amos Kenworth preached at the Valley church Sunday morning and at the Raisin Center church in the evening.

Monday morning, Mr. Jesse Stretch passed away. He had been gradually failing for a long time, but at last his time came and he was called to go. He was born in England in the year 1815, and came to America in 1842. He made his home in Palmyra for a time, and he then moved to the farm where he spent his last days. The funeral services will be held this p. m., at 2 o'clock at the house.

Next Saturday and Sunday the quarterly meeting of the society of Friends, will be held at the Raisin Center church after which they expect to hold meeting in the valley.

Those that attended the lecture at Adrian Saturday night, thought they were well paid for going out that dark and stormy night.

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

Mrs. Emma Mack, of Hillsdale, accompanied her husband to Manchester last Saturday to visit among his parishioners and attend the donation party on Monday evening last.

Mrs. J. R. Holmes, Miss Stella English and B. F. Matteson are the delegates from the Iron Creek church to the F. B. quarterly meeting, to convene at Bedford, Monroe county.

Died—On Sunday noon, Feb. 1st, Genevieve, infant daughter of Grant R. and Jennie B. Sutton, aged two months and 24 days. The funeral services at the F. B. church, Tuesday, Feb. 3rd, at 11 A. M. The sympathies of a large circle of friends are with the bereaved parents.

A PECULIAR EXPERIENCE.

About ten years ago my health became impaired, and rheumatism set in. My suffering was intense, but Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup has relieved me entirely of rheumatism, regulated my kidneys and liver and benefited my whole system. B. W. ROCKWELL, Jackson, Mich.

Any statement made by B. W. Rockwell, can be relied upon. W. D. THOMPSON, Prest., Jackson City Bank.

A blessing to humanity is what Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup can well be termed, for it has done more good already than any other medicine. One trial will convince any one of its efficacy. Price 25 cents.

"There's no terror, headache, in your threats." For I am armed so strong with remedy that I pass pain by as an idle word. Since the discovery of Salvation Oil.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Mike Gillen, of Ann Arbor, is visiting friends in Britton.

John Dubois is suffering from a broken toe.

Don't forget Ten Nights in a Bar room, Friday and Saturday evening.

Mr. O. Henderson, of Maumee, Ohio, is visiting his uncle, Edward Henderson.

A young man, at the risk of his life saved a beautiful young girl from drowning. Her grateful father, in a voice tremulous with emotion, said, "Noble youth, to you I am indebted for everything that makes life dear to me. Which reward will you take $5000 or the hand of my daughter?" "I'll take the daughter," replied the hero,—thinking to get the girl and the money. "Now you have well chosen, —replied the father—I could not have given you the $5000 just yet anyhow, as I have not yet saved that amount, being only an editor, but my daughter is yours for life. Bless you my children."

A week ago last Thursday, Mr. Lewis Rose, section foreman on the C. J. & M. here, and Miss. Nora Oliver, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed by Elder Wright, and after the marriage the happy couple took the evening train on the C. J. & M. for Addison, and from there to a village near VanWert, where they spent their honeymoon. Mr. Rose has been in Britton about ten months and has made many friends, and Miss Nora Oliver is well known in our village. We extend them our hearty congratulations and hope they may live long and happily together.

The soft weather of the past few days has made our roads again in poor condition.

We hear there is to be a new butcher shop here in the spring.

The friends of Dave Sloan will be sorry to hear that he is no better. We hear he will shortly start back for Michigan.

Mr. Strong came near being seriously hurt last Sunday afternoon.

We hear that our shoemaker, John Bechtold, denies that he has had any order from Milo Ousterhout for a new pair of shoes.

Henry Miller was promoted to section boss, during the absence of Lewis Rose last week.

W. Lenardson & Son have new advertisements painted all over our village. Earl is getting to be quite an artist.

We understand that Mike Gillen will come here to live in a few weeks.

Good music will be furnished at the show Friday & Saturday evenings. Admission only 10 and 15 cents.

F. Brown & Son are doing a rushing business and are having more counters put up in their store, they are increasing their stock of goods and will take in addition to their present extensive stock of goods, Gents Ready Made Clothing, Yankee Notions, &c.

One of our merchants came near getting into serious trouble one day last week. It seems that for the past few months he has been spending most of his time in the Hotel kitchen, leaving his business in the hands of his young clerk. The queen of the kitchen encouraged his visits for a time, but at last getting sick and tired of his company, she chased him out of the Hotel kitchen with a broom-stick. Nothing but Will's legs saved him from serious injury.

PATRONS OF INDUSTRY.

The Lenawee County Branch of the Patrons of Industry held a two days' session at Adrian last week Wednesday and Thursday. Most of the proceedings were secret. Very much of interest to the Patrons was discussed, and the election of officers took place, with the following result:

Pres.—John Moore, Canandaigua.
Vice Pres.—T. A. Davis, Adrian.
Sec.—C. A. Chase, Adrian, box 941.
Treas.—C. Kayner, Adrian.
Sen.—D. T. Lowe, Adrian.
Executive Committee—L. D. Alexander, Wellsville; W. L. Briggs, Thurber; Willis Chatfield, Holloway.

Delegates to the Grand Convention at Lansing, the latter part of February, are C. H. Bramble, J. S. Rynd, M. T. Cole, L. McRoberts, James Symonds, John Moore.

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me great relief in bronchitis. Within a month I have sent some of this preparation to a friend suffering from bronchitis and asthma. It has done him so much good that he writes for more."—Charles F. Dumterville, Plymouth, England.

FRANKLIN UNION LITERARY AND LYCEUM

The above society met at the residence of Mr. G. W. Allen, Jan. 1, 1891. At an early hour the house was full, for everyone seems to enjoy going to Mr. Allen's. At the President's request the meeting was called to order by our vice-president, Bertha Taylor. After the short business meeting was over the following program was listened to:

Rec.—Cecil Billington.
Rec.—Ruth Taylor.
Song—Mrs. A. B. Wisner and others.
Dia.—Alma and Alton Whelan.
Chip basket—G. W. Allen.
Dia.—Clarence and Lena Witheral.
Dec.—Hoyt Whelan.
Song by the choir.

After the literary program there was a short recess which all seemed to enjoy, especially those who are fond of music, such as Seth Simmons and Mrs. Witheral always play. After recess the question, resolved that "The signs of the times indicate the downfall of the Republic," was debated for more than an hour. Leaders—Carl Wisner, aff., and J. S. Allen, neg. Decided in favor of the neg. The question for next time is, resolved that "The Nicaragua Canal will be of more detriment to the U. S. than good." J. C. VanDoren, aff., and S. N. Munger, neg. Meeting will be held at Ezra Simmons' Feb. 6, 1891.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

The friends of Euzell Whelan gave him a surprise last week Wednesday night.

A bouncing boy has come to gladden the home of Mr. and Mrs. Len Mangus, in northwest Tecumseh.

Misses Amy and Lena Alexander entertained a small party of friends Saturday evening, in honor of their cousin, Cliff Hampton, of Fowler, Ind.

Reed Paine, who has been an invalid for many years, passed away peacefully on Friday morning of last week. He has been tenderly cared for in his age and feebleness by his daughter, Mrs. A. Updike, and her husband. Uncle Reed, as he was affectionately called, was a man of genial, kindly nature, and will be missed by his family and neighbors.

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the close of the Institute, the regular annual meeting and election of the Lenawee County Agricultural Society was held.

President Horton called the meeting to order, and the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by Secretary Mills followed.

Reports from the Secretary and Treasurer were read, and then the election of officers took place with the following result:

EUPEPSY.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you Good Digestion and oust the demon Dyspepsia and install instead Eupepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle by J. J. Orr, Druggist.

The oatmeal trust has gone up the spout, which is very appropriate.

If the revolutionary marplots in Congress wish to kill the World's Fair, the surest way to accomplish it is to crowd through the Force bill.

Bro. Blair has been retired to the ranks down in New Hampshire. He will be sadly missed by the official stenographers in the next Congress

The legislatures of eight states have already decided to postpone their World's Fair appropriation until—after the funeral obsequies of the Force bill.

New York and Wisconsin will be represented in the next Senate by two Democrats of marked ability and national reputation—Gov. Hill and Ex-Secretary Vilas.

The binding twine trust has got another black eye. A patriotic Yankee has invented a machine which will reduce the price of binding twine to one-fourth its present cost.

Major McKinley, they say, is going to Europe to talk protection with Bismarck. This is an excellent idea. They can condole with each other over the uncertainties of politics.

The reapportionment bill passed the Senate last week just as it came from the House, and will doubtless become a law. Under its provisions Michigan will gain one member of Congress.

Millionaire Huntington has got the New York Star off his hands, after having sunk $800,000 in the enterprise. The paper will appear hereafter in a changed form as the Daily Continent.

The Democrats in the Michigan legislature must toe the chalk line on the Force bill issue. Not a dollar should be voted for the World's Fair until the Force bill is dead and positively buried.

When placing the credit for the defeat of the Force bill, people should not forget Senator Gorman of Maryland He has had charge of the fight from the beginning and has conducted it with masterly ability.

The thrilling intelligence flashes over the wires that Grover Cleveland has incurred the displeasure of the people of Buzzard's Bay. Grover will feel awfully about it when he hears the news.

The Farmers' Alliance is smashing a good deal of Bourbon crockery this winter. Senator Ingalls of Kansas was nicely broken up last week and the pieces pitched out among the political rubbish of the past.

It is now said that Senator Ingalls will return to Washington and vote for the Force bill, since his defeat by the Kansas legislature. Such action would surprise no one. The "iridescent" Senator has always been an arrant demagogue, and he is too old to change now.

The wisdom of electing Gov. Hill to the U. S. Senatorship becomes more apparent every day. It allays the growing factional trouble in New York, place Gov. Hill in a position where his abilities can be of great service to himself and the cause, and clears the decks for the great battle of '92.

The Louisiana Lottery has struck another snag. The Secretary of State refuses to promulgate the Lottery amendment to allow the people to vote upon it, and the District Court declines to issue a mandamus to compel him to do so. If the Supreme Court should sustain this decision, then good-bye to the Lottery Company.

One Bill Lewis has been running a saloon that was built straddle of the state line between Kansas and Missouri, at Kansas City. The line has been indefinite, and whenever he was arrested in one state he would claim to be doing business in the other. The authorities of Kansas fixed the exact location of the line the other day and the Kansas end of Lewis' whiskey shop was sawed off, torn down and carted away. Bill will have to take out a Missouri license now or dry up.

The deadlock still continues in the Illinois legislature. The Democratic members will fight it out on this line, if it takes all summer. They have no alternative. Gen. Palmer has been chosen Senator by a popular majority of 30,000. A principle is at stake in this contest, in which the people of every state are deeply interested. His success will be the death blow to the caucus auction system of electing U. S. Senators.

Senator-elect Peffer has allowed himself to be interviewed by a World reporter, and the interview is thus summed up:

Mr. Peffer declared that "the tariff needs a thorough overhauling; it is full of jobbery." An average duty of 20 per cent, bearing heaviest upon articles of luxury and lightest upon necessaries of the people, is what he calls "a reasonable tariff"—and in this a vast majority of the people will agree with him.

This is good enough doctrine for anybody, and if Mr. Peffer lives up to it in the Senate he will be a good enough Senator for anybody.

The sudden death of Secretary Windom last week, at the Board of Trade banquet at Delmonico's, sent a shock throughout the country that has not been equalled since the terrible fire at Secretary Tracy's residence. Secretary Windom had long been a prominent character in public life. He was emphatically a self-made man, having begun business life upon a tailor's bench, and arisen to prominence by his innate intellectual ability. He was not only a strong, clean man in politics, but he was personally very popular, and hence had always commanded a strong following in Minnesota, the state of his residence. His administration of the Treasury Department had been very creditable. The funeral obsequies were held at Washington last Monday. The members of the Cabinet acted as honorary pall-bearers and the Departments were closed during the day. His successor has not yet been appointed, but several names are mentioned in that connection.

The Republican organs are belaboring the Senators who voted to take up the silver bill. One rabid sheet says that "for the first time in its history the Republican party has been betrayed in the house of its friends." To which the N. Y. Post replies:

The first occasion was sixteen years ago, when Gen. Butler tried to put through Congress a force bill to which, he rightly claimed, the party was pledged by its traditions, its platform, and the very law of its being. He failed because the party was betrayed in the house of its friends, and one of the "traitors" of that day who filibustered against the scheme and thus secured its defeat was Mr. George F. Hoar, among his associates being James G. Blaine, James A. Garfield, Joseph R. Hawley and Henry L. Dawes. Wolcott and the other Senators of the new generation who blocked the force bill of 1891 had a perfect precedent for their course in the action of Senators like Hoar and Dawes in the days before they had become hopeless Bourbons.

Ex-President Cleveland always hits the nail on the head in his public speeches. At the big celebration of Jackson's day at Philadelphia he responded to the toast, "True Democracy." No better definition of the Democratic faith was ever given by Gen. Jackson himself than in these words of Grover Cleveland:

"These principles comprise equal and exact justice to all men; peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations—entangled alliance with none; the support of the state governments in all their rights; the preservation of the general government in its whole constitutional vigor; a jealous care of the right of election by the people; absolute acquiescence in the decision of the majority; the supremacy of the civil over the military authority; economy in the public expenses; the honest payment of our debts and sacred preservation of the public faith; the encouragement of agriculture, and commerce as its handmaid, and freedom of religion, freedom of the press, and freedom of the person."

"The most obvious and incontrovertible fact is that the Congressional elections show distrust of further Republican legislation, and the proper patriotic policy of Congress at this session would be not to revoke or modify its recent acts, but passively to pass the appropriation bills, and leave as little embarrassment as possible for its successor. The rule should be with Congress as with the President. After an adverse popular verdict it need not try to do the work of another party, but it should not needlessly defy public opinion as manifested at the polls. There should be no "midnight judges" in legislation or in appointments. The long delay between the election of a Congress and its assembling is one of the practical defects of our system, but a just sense of public propriety will prevent what would naturally be regarded as an outrage upon the country. Probably the McKinley bill will be left untouched this winter, and if the election bill should be passed in the Senate its opponents will prevent final action, unless the majority should resort to extreme measures, which would recoil upon the party.

HOW MONOPOLY GROWS.

Rarely can we now take up a paper, with the current news of the preceding day, without finding an account of the meeting of those engaged in some line of manufacturing operations, for the purpose of considering or organizing a "combine" of their interests in the nature of a trust. One such journal not long ago contained the following items:

First. "A threshing-machine trust is being formed at a session held in Chicago, which, it is said, will have $20,000,000 of capital stock. Nearly all the establishments of the country are in the deal."

Second, "Chicago, November 29, 1890. On Monday next a meeting will be held in this city, at which another attempt will be made to organize the lead smelters of this country into one gigantic trust. There are twenty-one lead-smelting refineries in the United States, and they represent an invested capital of millions upon millions."

Third. "Albany, November 29, 1890. An Ice Trust is now talked of. The plan said to be in contemplation is the formation of a company with a capital of $14,000,000. This is to include all the big ice companies which use natural ice in New York City, as well as a number of firms and persons who harvest ice along the Hudson River and in the Lake Champlain region."

A trust on ice, which promises "cold comfort" to its patrons in more than one sense, would certainly appear like getting down to the traditional "hard pan," having at least struck hard water, in that sort of consolidation, but it is by no means the end of the chapter. Since the appearance of the paper containing the foregoing items, there have been a number of similar announcements, referring to efforts at the combination among the makers of picture-frames, of wrapping paper, of barbed-fence wire, of printers' type, of carriage trimmings, of dynamite and blasting powder, and even of the spectacles that those of us who happen to be short-sighted or dim of vision are accustomed to wear upon our noses. And prior to that time, as everybody knows, trusts were no strangers in the land. Besides the Standard or great Petroleum trust, the Sugar trust, the White-Lead trust, the Whisky trust, and the Cotton-Oil trust, the most of whose stocks are regularly dealt in on our financial exchanges, we had the Window-Glass trust, the Wheel trust, the Starch trust, and a number of others that have been more or less secretly organized; for the parties to such operations, as a rule, are not anxious to publish their movements. The products of these organizations are, without exception, such things as people must have, the most of them being in constant use in every household; and it is perfectly safe to assume that there is not a machine-made article of prime necessity in our daily lives, which is outside of our own handiwork, that will not, under the influences which are now predominant, if continued, very soon be controlled by a trust.

But the story of monopoly, formidable as it thus appears, has by no means been told. An item of news has been drifting through our daily papers without seemingly attracting very much interest or attention, that foreshadows a monopolistic combination completely dwarfing those to which reference has already been made. It is announced—and no one seems to question the fact—that the "little wizard of Wall Street," in company with the leading men of the Standard Oil Company, and some other kindred spirits, is engaged in organizing a stupendous railroad consolidation—the greatest ever known or dreamed of. By securing the Northern Pacific, the Union Pacific, and the Pacific Mail systems—feats already achieved—and forming a working alliance with the Huntington or Southern Pacific system they have made themselves absolute masters of the trans-continental carrying business of the country. They have done more than that. By arranging alliances with such interior lines as the Atchison and Santa Fe, with its nine thousand miles of road, they have mastered all the other great business arteries, the result being that we are threatened with a great railroad trust, either owning or dominating every mile of railway in the land. What that means to both the producing and the mercantile interests of the country is in no way a mystery. The projectors of this enormous scheme are refreshingly candid in the statement of their purposes. "Rates are to be maintained," they tell us. In other words, competition between parallel or other rival and conflicting lines is to be crushed. Hereafter the business of the country is to be taxed for transportation just what will satisfy the greed of an immense devil-fish overlying the whole land, and reaching out for and clasping every State and city and village with its iron tentacles.

What is to be the effect of all this? One result is obvious enough. The liberties of the great body of our people are so involved as to put them in serious peril. Heretofore it has been our boast that Americans were equals, one man being, apart from personal qualifications, as good as any other. All this is to be changed under our new trust regime. The ordinary and general-average man is to be made of little or no account, and the mastery will belong to certain exceptional persons; for the tendency of trusts is to reduce the many to dependence upon the few. The reason for it is clear enough. The wealth will be in the hands of a few, and that means their supremacy; for, talk as much as we may about equality under the law, the foundation of all our liberties is property. Men cannot be free without it. Let a hundred people live together, and if one of them is given all the wealth, he will be ruler over the others. Let the formation of trusts, with the transfer of the nation's wealth to a comparatively few persons, go on as it is now doing, and how long will it be before the masses of the people will be as dependent upon our great capitalists as the common people of mediæval Europe were upon their feudatory lords? To all intents and purposes the majority will be serfs, and liberty will be an empty name.

But why so many more trusts organizing to-day than formerly? There is a cause for it. The talk, of which we hear so much, about "combinations being the order of the day," as if they resulted from an atmospheric condition over which we have no control, is sheer nonsense. Trusts are not Topsys. They don't grow from nothing. They have a mother, if not a father, and their parentage is very easily traced. It is found in legislation that has been expressly constructed for their propagation and invigoration. It consists of laws, of which the McKinley Act has been the culmination, that have been intended to shut out foreign competition, and thus enable our home manufacturers to combine and fix production and prices to suit themselves. Manufacturing has long been the pet of our legislators. It is the one industry that has been supposed to be in constant and increasing need of "protection." It has been the pampered child of the family. Agriculture, shipping, and other great interests have been left to take care of themselves, little concern being felt whether they lived or died, but manufacturing has been coddled and nursed and bottle-fed with the same sort of partiality that some mothers bestow upon weakling members of their infantile flocks, and which are favorites because they are constantly complaining and fretting and calling for larger rations of pap. And now this cherished and humored member of the national household, having been given everything it asked for by our congressional nurses, is repaying the favors it has received, as over-indulged children are very apt to do, by combining against its brothers and its sisters with a view to robbing them of their shares of the patrimony, and making itself absolute dictator of the establishment. No; there is no mystery about the origin of trusts, and no uncertainty about the influence that recent legislation has had upon their procreation. Under the McKinley bill they have sprung up like weeds on a dunghill when the summer's sun was shining. It has been since the passage of that Act that the trust family has been notoriously most prolific. Its progeny has come not merely in units, but in twins, in triplets, and even in litters.

What is to be done about it? Having determined the origin, it would appear easy enough to prognosticate the remedy. Remove the cause, and the evil will go. Repeal our protective tariff laws, and especially the McKinley Act, under whose shelter our industrial conspiracies have been propagated, so as to let foreign competition re-enter our markets, and the trusts would wither like mushrooms in the sun. Competition is one thing which they cannot stand, and competition is the one thing which the masses of our people, now being robbed for the enrichment of a few individuals, most need. It means protection to the great majority of the population, who are buyers and not producers. There was never a people yet that was free and prosperous without competition, both in labor and in trade. It is the very essence of liberty. We have long heard about "protection to our manufacturers;" it is high time we were beginning to hear about protection to their customers.—Belford's Magazine.

Less House-Cleaning More Health
Less Annoyance More Comfort

Such is the experience of women who use Pearline for house-cleaning, and the degree of health and comfort is largely due to the way they use it. Directions for saving labor on every package. Delicate women can clean house by its aid; children will be a help, and husbands will never know the work is going on—out of the way, and they will be ignorant of it. It is bosh to say that Pearline hurts the clothing, the paint or the hands. Numbers of people clean their teeth with it; many babes have been washed with it from their birth; the most delicate of laces and linens have been subjected to the severest of tests. Everything washable, and everybody who must do this work, is benefitted by reason of the use of Pyle's Pearline. It's the modern soap. You'll know it and use it sooner or later. Your grocer keeps the goods.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—they are not, and besides are dangerous. 164 JAMES PYLE, New York.

WHAT IS SAPOLIO?

It is a solid handsome cake of scouring soap which has no equal for all cleaning purposes except in the laundry. To use it is to value it...

What will SAPOLIO do? Why it will clean paint, make oil-cloths bright, and give the floors, tables and shelves a new appearance. It will take the grease off the dishes and off the pots and pans. You can scour the knives and forks with it, and make the tin things shine brightly. The wash-basin, the bath-tub, even the greasy kitchen sink will be as clean as a new pin if you use SAPOLIO. One cake will prove all we say. Be a clever housekeeper and try it.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. THERE IS BUT ONE SAPOLIO.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

A PRACTICAL ILLUSTRATION.

A very effective method of showing the evils of slavery, much in vogue in anti-slavery days, was the contrasting of the workings of the two systems of labor, free and slave, as they were seen in two different States, separated only by a river, as in the case of Ohio and Kentucky.

The south side of Long Island presents a similar opportunity of contrasting the working of the two systems of common and private property in land.

The territory of Long Island was originally granted by patents from the crown to certain individuals having influence at court or by purchase, some of which grants were confirmed by subsequent colonial governors, and some were repurchased from the Indians, who lived upon it. Most of these grants extended from the sound to the ocean, and consequently included the bay that intervenes between the south shore of the island and the outer beach, a narrow strip of sand separating the bay from the ocean.

With one or two exceptions these grants have not been held to cover or convey any right to the waters of the bay or to its bottom, if covered by water. As a consequence, the bay and its natural products have been held and used, as they were by the Indians who lived on its margin when this country was discovered. Every person, at least every person residing in the town which claims jurisdiction over it, is free to launch his boat, and take from its waters its natural products without any restrictions except such as are binding upon all, and enforced by the town for the good of all. If any revenue is derived from renting portions of its bottom or for the privilege of cutting grass on its islands, that revenue goes into the treasury of the town, not into any private pockets.

Here, then, is an example of natural opportunities, which by some good fortune escaped the clutches of monopoly, and are now, as they have ever been, free to all who choose to use them. The general result of this is, that nowhere in the United States is there less suffering, less poverty, and more independence than in those towns bordering on the Great South bay. Here there are no strikes, no lockouts, no beggars and no poor, except from misfortune or vice. In times of financial depression and business stagnation, when want of employment converts skilled workmen and wealth producers into homeless tramps, the towns of Long Island bordering on the bay do not feel the "hardness of the times" as it is felt elsewhere. And why? Because natural opportunities are never closed to any one. When a man can do nothing else or find nothing else to do, the bay, with its inexhaustible store of wild fowl, shell and other fish is open to him at all times without the permission of any one and without the necessity of paying some one for the privilege. Hundreds of men in all the towns bordering on the bay do now, as their ancestors have done for generations, "follow the bay" for a livelihood, and from the earnings of which many are enabled to own their homes, but which is becoming more and more difficult to do, because of the monopoly of the land near the shore; which natural opportunities from their enhanced value (being held from use for speculative purposes) are no longer accessible to any but the rich. Grants conferred by some King or Governor, long since turned to dust, and who had no more right to give away the land of Long Island to the then existing generation, than he had to convey territory in the moon, much less to deprive the men of succeeding generations of a natural right, enable a few to hold the land from those who could use it, awaiting the coming of the wealthy, who, because of its advantages near the sea, will give for it a sum which the baymen can never hope to possess.

Now, supposing the same system had obtained on the water as on the land, how different might not the condition of the baymen have been to-day! Instead of ownership by the town, there would have been many private ownerships or landlords. No man could then have launched his boat upon the bay without somebody's permission. On every bushel of shellfish he brought to shore, and on every take of fish he would be required to pay a tax, just as the barons of the Rhine used to exact a toll of all who sailed past their castles, the former tax being no more justifiable than the latter. As a result of that system, we should have seen palatial residences (modern castles) in every town erected by the descendants of the original grantees out of the rents levied on the industry of the baymen, who from a condition of independence and comfort would become dependent and poor in proportion as their landlords became rich. Or it might happen, as it has happened in Scotland and Ireland, where whole counties have been depopulated because it became more profitable to let the land for game preserves for the pleasure of "my lord" than for legitimate industry.

Who can doubt that if the bay was in private hands to-day it would not be long before it would lapse into the possession of the Goulds and Vanderbilts, and be used by them exclusively for pleasure.

The baymen's occupation would then, like Othello's, "be gone," and with the loss of those natural opportunities would commence a fiercer struggle for existence than they or their ancestors have ever felt before, which would result, either in emigration or a gradual reduction to the condition of the peasant on the coast of Ireland, who in addition to the ground rent of their poor holdings are compelled to pay for the sea weed cast up by the waves, which is used to fertilize the barren land.

If then the system of common property as applied to the Great South bay, is so equitable and just, and has been so conducive to the general welfare of all classes, why should not the principle when applied to land be equally promotive of the best interests of all? And is it not a fact, patent to all not blinded by prejudice, that the same evils that we have shown would inevitably have resulted from making the bay private property have resulted from the application of that principle to the land.

If then common property as exemplified in its application to the Great South bay has worked so beneficently, why not extend the principle to the land also?

"It is never too late to mend," and, notwithstanding the unequal distribution of land consequent on the present system, the "single tax" as advocated by the united labor party, will, by taking only land values, gradually restore unused land to the people without injustice to any. HUGH B. BROWN.

Prof. Sumner and Human Commodities.

[From N. Y. Standard.]

Prof. W. G. Sumner is writing for the Independent as to the "Significance of the demand for men." Referring to an idea often expressed in one form or another, that it is a shame men are subject to supply and demand, Prof. Sumner says that as we want to know the facts about man and the world in which he lives just as they are, it is "irrevalent and idle to talk about what is consonant with, or what is hostile to, man's notions of his own dignity," and warns his readers that "it will be found that men are subject to supply and demand."

This is not true, and Prof. Sumner's mistake is due to his neglect of his own postulate that "we want to know the facts about man, and the world in which he lives, just as they are, without regard to any thing else whatsoever." One of the facts about man and the world in which he lives is that the means supplied him by natural laws whereby he may provide for his natural wants are taken away from him by human law. He can not provide for his wants as an animal without land, and he can not provide for his wants as a civilized man without land in civilized locations. If the right to land be taken from men in general and vested in some men, the law of supply and demand will operate just as Prof. Sumner says it will. The need for workers on the part of land owners or of men who can buy rights of access to land will regulate the demand, and the number of landless men whose necessities force them to offer their labor for sale will constitute the supply. But if this is what Prof. Sumner means when he says men are subject to supply and demand, his phrase is grossly misleading. He should have written: "Men are subject to supply and demand when land is monopolized." But to say that would be to hint to all to whom the idea that man is a commodity is repugnant that the artificial monopoly of land should be abolished.

It is true that black men are subject to slavery when and where human laws reduce them to servitude; but it is not true that black men are subject to slavery, in any such sense as that slavery is a natural condition of black men. So it is true that men are subject to supply and demand when land is artificially monopolized; but it is not true that men are subject to supply and demand in any such sense as that this is a natural condition or with any such implication as that even attempts to remove them from the operation of the law of supply and demand must be in contravention of natural law. If we found, as Prof. Sumner does, that men are subject to supply and demand, it would be, indeed, in that connection, "irrelevant and idle to talk about what is consonant with or hostile to a man's notions of his own dignity;" but when we find that man is subject to supply and demand because human laws of land tenure and trade deprive him of what is as essential to his existence as his lungs or his brains, it is not irrelevant or idle to talk about what is consonant with or hostile to his notions of his own dignity. His notions of his own dignity—his notions of his own natural rights—are pertinent and useful in the highest degree when he considers the question of changing the human laws that made him subject to supply and demand.

IN the very centers of our civilization to-day are want and suffering enough to make sick at heart whoever does not close his eyes and steel his nerves. Dare we turn to the Creator and ask Him to relieve it? Supposing the prayer were heard, and at the behest with which the universe sprang into being there should glow in the sun a greater power; new virtue fill the air; fresh vigor the soil; that for every blade of grass that now grows two should spring up, and the seed that now increases fifty fold should increase a hundred fold! Would poverty be abated or want relieved? Manifestly no! Whatever benefit would accrue would be but temporary. The new powers streaming through the material universe could only be untilized through land. And land, being private property, the classes that now monopolize the bounty of the Creator would monopolize all the new bounty. Land owners would alone be benefitted. Rents would increase, but wages would still tend to the starvation point.—Progress and Poverty.

THE truth is, and from this truth there can be no escape, that there is and can be no just title to an exclusive possession of the soil, and that private property in land, is a bold, bare, enormous wrong, like that of chattel slavery.

The majority of men in civilized communities do not recognize this, simply because the majority of men do not think. With them whatever is, is right, until its wrongfulness has been frequently pointed out, and in general they are ready to crucify whoever first attempts this.—Progress and Poverty.

THE fundamental principle to which all others are secondary, is the placing of all taxation upon land values. Land and labor are co-relative, each being useless to civilization without the other. This fundamental change in our political system will comprehend all minor reforms.—Middletown, N. Y., Advance.

OUR primary social adjustment is a denial of justice. In allowing one man to own the land on which and from which other men must live, we have made them his bondsmen in a degree which increases as material progress goes on.—Progress and Poverty.

AHAB'S COVETOUSNESS.

LESSON VI, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 8.

Text of the Lesson, I Kings xxi, 1-16. Commit Verses, 15, 16—Golden Text, Luke xii, 15—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. "And it came to pass after these things."

The previous chapter gives a record of two remarkable victories of Ahab and his army over the king of Syria and his army; the army of Ahab being like two little flocks of kids before the Syrians, who filled the country (xx, 27); but it was all the work of God, that Ahab might know that God was Jehovah (xx, 13, 28), and act accordingly. Ahab is, however, so little in sympathy with God that he after all made friends with the king of Syria, and let him escape. For this he was rebuked by a prophet, and went to his house heavy and displeased (xx, 42, 43).

"Naboth the Jezreelite."

We are now introduced to a man who is mentioned only in this chapter and in II Kings ix. His name is given here nineteen times, and six times it is Naboth the Jezreelite.

2. "Give me thy vineyard * * * because it is near unto my house."

A righteous life is a constant rebuke to unrighteousness and cannot be tolerated, especially when the spirit of God is striving with the impenitent.

3. "The Lord forbid it me that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee."

Although Ahab offered him a better vineyard or its full value in money, this is his reply. Naboth fears Jehovah, but does not fear Ahab, and the inheritance of his fathers is more to him than money or than any other inheritance. Had he been like Esau he would have sold it cheap.

4. "And Ahab came into his house heavy and displeased."

In the last chapter we saw him in his house, heavy and displeased because the Lord by the prophet had rebuked him; and now he is in the same place and in the same state of mind because the Lord has again rebuked him through Naboth. Had he frequented the house of the Lord and in his trouble gone like Elijah into the sanctuary (Ps. lxxiii, 17) he would have found a cure for his sadness; but he was not that kind of a man.

5. "Why is thy spirit so sad?"

"Sad" is just the same word as "heavy" in verse 4 and xx, 43, and it is only found these three times in the Bible. This is his wife's question to him.

6. "I will not give thee my vineyard."

He rehearses to her his request of Naboth and this, Naboth's reply. Thank God for all who say to the world, the flesh and the devil: I am the Lord's property, you cannot have me or anything belonging to me; and no money nor any other inducement can persuade me to give to any but my Lord that which is truly and only His.

7. "I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite."

Thus speaks this woman of Satan, this defier of the true God and His servants.

8. "So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal."

Thus did Haman, another adversary of the people of God (Esth. iii, 12). Thus will the beast and the false prophet act in the power of the dragon, that old serpent, the devil, in the last days before Jesus comes in His glory (Rev. xiii, 4, 7, 15, etc.).

9. "Proclaim a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people."

Or as in R. V. margin, "at the head of the people." A child of God may conclude that something is wrong when the enemies of God do him an honor or in any way set him on high.

10. "And set two men, sons of Belial, before him to bear witness against him."

11, 12. "And the men of his city * * * did as Jezebel had sent unto them."

Were the servants of Christ only half as ready and obedient as the servants of the adversary, how the name of Christ would be magnified, God glorified, the elect church called out and the kingdom hastened. These men did just what Jezebel said—took her to mean what she said and went about it.

13. "Naboth did blaspheme God and the king."

This is the lie which these false witnesses give utterance to. Naboth could say with David and with Jesus: "False witnesses did rise up; they laid to my charge things that I knew not. They hate me without a cause" (Ps. xxxv, 11; lxix, 4; Matt. xxvi, 59-61; John xv, 25). Naboth is accused of blasphemy because he loved his inheritance more than the favor of Ahab. James was accused of blasphemy because he declared himself the Son of God, fearing not the wrath of the rulers.

"They stoned him with stones that he died."

It would seem from II Kings ix, 26, that his sons also were murdered. Thus in later days they stoned Stephen and Paul.

14. "Naboth is stoned, and is dead."

Or as in the next verse, "Naboth is not alive, but dead." Satan had done his worst. Jesus taught His disciples not to fear those who could only kill the body. The Spirit, through Paul, says that "to die is gain," "to depart and be with Christ is far better" Jesus tells us that when Lazarus died the angels carried him—not his poor, corrupting body, but himself, apart from the frail tabernacle in which he had been sojourning—to Abraham's bosom; and He said to the thief on the cross, "To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise" (Matt. x, 28; Phil. i, 21, 23; Luke xvi, 22; xxiii, 43). So while Naboth's body was overcome by the cruel stones, Naboth himself had gone off in glorious company, forever beyond the reach of all persecutors.

15. "Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite which he refused to give thee for money."

Thus speaks Jezebel to her heavy and displeased husband. The prominent seed of God is no longer in his way as a rebuke to him, and the coveted vineyard is now his without money. Compare with this the gifts and merry making of Rev. xi, 10, because of the death by violence of two servants of God who tormented the people by their testimony to the truth. But their joy and seeming victory will be as short lived (for that event is still future) as was that of Ahab. God permits a great deal which we cannot understand, but He always holds the reins.

16. "Ahab rose up to go down to the vineyard * * * to take possession of it."

But he is not prepared to hear the fearful tidings which await him from the Lord by the mouth of him whom he is pleased to term his enemy. The Lord has seen it all. "Dogs shall lick thy blood," "dogs shall eat Jezebel" (verses 19, 23); fearful words, but fulfilled in due time most literally (xxii, 38; II Kings ix, 35, 36).

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT

Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.

"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton N. Y."

REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain two years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

Sold by J. S. Kinney, Tecumseh.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates it cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE GRIP WE HAVE TO CARRY.

For each and all in ways along,
It matters not if weak or strong,
Or whether young, or whether old,
The way be poor, or strewn with gold,
There is a grip to carry.

It may be gilded, or be worn,
It's all the same, it must be borne,
There's no escape, no use to try,
The better way is shoulder high
The grip we have to carry.

Our brother just across the way
Seems highly favored day by day;
We murmur at our lot and pine,
To think he has the best of wine,
And has no grip to carry.

But ah! his grip is tinsel-tipped,
His wine too bitter to be sipped;
We can not lift the weight he bears,
We can not know another's cares,
Till we his grip would carry.

To each and all is allotted out
The one adopted for the route,
If large or small, if old or new,
'Tis suited, friend, to me, to you,
The grip we have to carry.

Then let us march with shout and song,
'Twill make the way less hard and long,
The burden borne will lighter grow,
Till we shall almost cease to know
We have a grip to carry.

BROTHER BEN.

The Queer Fancies of a Harmless Lunatic.

He had so much dignity, this old man, so much manner that I had been quite impressed by him.

We had walked up together from the post-office several times, and as I boarded near his house I often saw him in passing, and thus we struck up an odd sort of friendship. He was twenty while he was nearly seventy.

We used to talk on various subjects—politics, religion, the people of the town and the geology of the surrounding country, and I found him well informed and liberal in his views, and, better than all, tolerant of the opinions of a young man.

I supposed that this tolerance impressed me the more because, owing to my youth, I had been recently rather snubbed by some of my male relations, and on that account had come to try my fortunes among strangers.

So it was that when this courtly old gentleman showed me such marked and polite attention I felt rather flattered and greatly comforted thereby. I never had met any other of his family, although I understood from him that he had a wife and an elderly daughter who lived with him in the great mansion half hidden from the street by a growth of trees and shrubs.

I often stopped to talk with him at his gate, and he had invited me in more than once, but I always refused, until one day he said, abruptly: "Do you know that I have taken such a fancy to you that I want Ben to see you. Ben is my brother, you know; he lives with me. He is not quite right at times, a little flighty, perhaps, but you won't mind that."

I saw that he was thoroughly in earnest, and to please him I said that I would go in and see Ben.

As we stepped upon the broad piazza my friend hesitated. "Just a word, please, before we go in. Ben is very sensitive about his—his—troubles. He is just my age; we are twins, in fact, and physically he is perfect—yes, perfect—but there is something wrong with his head. He is all right on some things, you know; but he has some queer fancies, poor fellow."

The tears came into his eyes and he cleared his throat with a little cough as he opened the door and ushered me into a broad, handsomely-furnished hall. He led the way from this into a cheerful sitting-room and excused himself for a moment.

While he was gone I looked about the room. There were quaint chairs, an odd stand or two, a rosewood cabinet and an old-fashioned piano with mother-of-pearl keys; on the walls were a few portraits in oil and some good engravings of an old style.

The thing that struck me most, however, was a tall pier-glass let into the wall between two windows. From the bottom of this, up to within a few inches of the top, it was painted over with a thick coating of dark paint, and this was ornamented by a landscape stiffly painted in rather crude colors. There was another and smaller mirror in the frame of the clock, and this had been treated in a similar manner, little gleams of bright showing here and there through the dark paint.

I reasoned that the surface of the quicksilver had been marred either by time or by dampness and that this paint had been put on to cover up these defects, and as I was gazing at the ugly landscape the old gentleman returned, bringing his wife and daughter, to whom he introduced me.

Both ladies had lovely and refined faces which differed but little from each other. Time had marked the lines deeper upon that of the elder woman, and her hair was white, but both wore the same sad, anxious expression, as though some great sorrow was hanging over them.

"Mother, I have brought my young friend in to see Ben," said the old man, and I noticed that a meaning glance passed from the ladies as the elder one replied in a pleading voice: "Father, Ben isn't so well to-day. Hadn't you better wait till some other time?" "No—no, mother; Ben's all right. All he needs is a little cheerful company." With these words my friend left the room, motioning me to follow him.

We went across the hall to a small room furnished very simply. There were some cases of books, a leather lounge, and a couple of arm-chairs drawn up before a large mirror.

Of course I understood it all in a moment, the painted looking-glasses, the sad-faced women, and their reluctance to allow a stranger to intrude upon their sorrow.

It was a complete surprise to me, for I had never suspected the least thing wrong with my friend, and I had believed in his brother Ben without a shadow of doubt. Luckily the ladies entered then, and by their tact relieved me from my embarrassment.

The old man told me how much he and Ben enjoyed each other's society, and he complimented Ben upon his appearance. "You are looking well, Ben, old boy, and I am pleased to see you in such good spirits to-day."

Soon the daughter suggested that Ben might be tired, and I took the hint and made my adieux. As I bowed myself out the younger lady said: "We see nobody now, you know, but father enjoys your company, and if you would stop in to see him sometimes you would be doing us a great favor;" and I promised that I would come.

I went quite often and nearly always was taken to see Brother Ben, because he had taken such a liking to me, the old man said.

I learned from the ladies that Ben had been drowned when he was a boy, but of late the hallucination that he was living and was insane had been fixed in his brother's mind.

One day my friend told me that he was worried about Ben. "He seems to be failing a little," said he. "I fancy that his mind is less clear than it was. I have noticed when talking with him he loses the thread of the conversation oftener than formerly."

He was right. "Brother Ben" was failing. It was pathetic to hear the old man say: "Ben, my boy, you are a trifle pale to-day;" or: "You should take better care of yourself, brother; you think too much and sleep too little."

I had a private interview with the ladies one day, and we decided that "Ben" would be better for a little trip away—so the mirror was removed and we told the old man that his brother had gone for a change of air. But he worried about Ben and missed him so that we had the mirror hung again and told him that Ben had come back.

He was overjoyed; he hastened to the mirror. "Ben, dear old Ben, I have missed you so. I am so glad that you came back," he said brokenly, patting the glass gently as he spoke. "And you'll stay with me always now, won't you, Ben? You won't leave me again, for we haven't long to stay now, you and I, and something tells me that we will both go together, old fellow."

He failed rapidly after this and soon he could only with difficulty get to his old seat before the glass.

"Ben, we're almost there," he would say, and then he would ask us if it were not pitiful to see Ben looking so poorly.

Indeed it was, and our tears would start as we saw the reflection of the trembling limbs and vacant, wandering gaze.

The end came at last, peaceful and calm. He had been in bed some days in a sort of half-stupor. He roused one night and called: "Mother." "Yes, father, I am here," she said, gently. "I am going home now, and Ben's going, too. I am glad I can take him with me, for he is so feeble and so flighty that he wouldn't know how to get along without me, poor old boy, and then he might bother you, mother, if I wasn't here to sort of look after him."

He nestled down among the pillows, looking so happy and contented. "Yes, Ben, we are going together, just as we came," he whispered, and in a few minutes he was home with Ben.—Marie More Marsh, in Chicago Times.

STONEWALL JACKSON'S FIDDLE.

It Was More Difficult to Master Than Mathematics.

When Jackson first entered West Point he was regarded as a remarkably stupid and green youth. General Whiting, who afterward served in the Confederate army, was then a cadet in the class above Jackson's and was appointed to ask him some questions in mathematics, in accordance with the custom which then prevailed at the military academy. Whiting thought him at first remarkably dull, but noticed that he studied and worked with dogged persistency. The class of which Wilcox and Whiting were members was graduated just prior to the Mexican war. Several of the young officers were in Washington on their way to Mexico, and on the night of their arrival they were invited to go with Jefferson Davis, then a member of the House, to a reception given at the White House. Later both Davis and T. J. Jackson turned their faces toward the Rio Grande. At the close of the war Jackson ranked every member of his class and was a Brevet Major, and was stationed on Governor's Island, near New York. Whiting, Wilcox and a number of young officers were visiting New York, and when several brother officers from Governor's Island called on them Whiting asked:

"What has become of Tom Jackson; how is he getting on?"

"Badly, badly," replied the officer; "since he has stopped fighting he has taken to fiddling. He came over to this city a few weeks ago and bought a fiddle, several bows and a pile of resin. You will remember at West Point there was no music in his soul, no poetry, no relaxation, nothing but hard application to his text-books. So his new fad makes it awful for us. Every minute he can spare he devotes to practicing on the fiddle, and the sounds which fill the barracks in his vicinity are beyond description—almost beyond endurance."

But Whiting's prediction was not verified. Jackson never became a musician.—Chicago Evening Journal.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mary Bennett was born in Tioga County, N. Y., Nov. 18th, 1815, and departed this life Thursday morning, Jan'y 29th, 1891—over seventy-five years of age. The funeral was held at the residence of her daughter on Saturday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Rev. Getchell officiating.

She was married to Walton Bennett in New York and went to Illinois, then to Michigan, then back to where she was born, and where she remained until about seven years ago, when her daughter, Mrs. Smalldge, went and brought her to live with her. Mr. Bennett died nearly two years ago.

She had been feeble for some time but her last sickness was somewhat brief. While her suffering was intense, she was patient, and recognized her daughter and son (Mr. John Bennett) almost to the last. Their names lingered upon her lips until they were motionless in death. She spoke of this sickness being her last, and awaited death's coming to bring release and freedom and rest and heaven. Of her children only two were with her to care and stand by until the eternal victory came. As she had loved and cared for them when they were helpless, they gave mother into heaven's arms as from their own, and will miss her until they are reunited in that home where no vacant chairs are known.

One floral offering at the hour of the funeral was placed at the head of the casket—that which designated an old arm-chair and was worded with pansies "The Vacant Chair"—a fitting tribute of love. This is now in a million homes, but some day when God has wiped away all tears of grief, when Jesus shall have seen the travail of His soul and satisfied, then no desolate souls, no broken loves, no missed, and no vacancies in God's family.

This mother in the Israel of her affection and care deeply loved, and responsive hearts realized it and blessed it to her soul. This is engraven in more than characters of gold upon human souls, and they will lisp it in ecstacy as they, like her, are welcomed by the immortals, and together are no more to go apart forever and forever. Love binds us to God and our own with an affection and constancy that is eternal.

Almira Updyke was born in Seneca Co., N. Y., April 25th, 1834. She was one of a family of eleven children, of whom only four survive—her one sister and three brothers. When four years old she came to Michigan with her parents. They settled on the farm now owned by M. G. Updyke, remaining there until their final summons called them.

Feb. 6th, 1862, she was married to John McCollum. There were born to them six children—Florence E., Lillie T., Ray, Lois, Myrtus A. and Alein, three of whom survive the subject of this sketch: Lillie, the wife of O. G. Smith, Mrytus and Alein, living at the present time with their sister, on the old farm. She was bereft of her husband Oct. 22d, 1876.

Some three years ago she commenced treating for what at that time seemed to be a small bunch on her limb, which afterwards proved to be a cancer. After weeks and months of patient suffering she passed to her home on high.

A COLD.

It was only a common cold. John had had many a worse cold and got over it. This would wear off as the others had done; so it was neglected and neglected until a steady pain came in the chest, and a slight, but not very distressing cough became constant. But John didn't mind the pain—he ignored it, and went on with his work as though pain meant nothing. After a time he began to grow thin and weak, and an attack of dysentery compelled him to call in a physician. The physicians discovered his condition, and by this time infiltration was well advanced in the right lung. Now the fight for life became serious, and it all came from a common cold, that taken at first could have been easily cured. The physician, being an experienced practitioner, recommended Downs' Elixir, and John used it faithfully and pulled through; but how much better it would have been had John bought a bottle of the Elixir at once and taken a dose on going to bed and waked up the next morning clear as a whistle.

In view of the fact that the season of colds is now at hand, we call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Down's Elixir, which will be found in another column.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

The first number of the "Quarterly Register of Current History" which will be given to the public about the middle of February, contains the complete history, political and general, of the past year. No feature is lost sight of, and the science, art and literature of the year are all duly noticed. The Quarterly Register" is by no means a dreary almanack chronicle of state news, but rather a lively and entertaining history of the year, detailing in a pleasant and attractive from just those particular events, of sound and permanent historic value, which the man of average intellectual calibre finds it absolutely essential (though hitherto often diffcult) to keep himself posted on.

PRONOUNCED HOPELESS, YET SAVED.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my Lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's Drugstore, regular size, 50c and $1.00.

DEATH OF DR. N. H. KIMBALL.

Doctor Nelson H. Kimball, of Adrian, died at his home in that city, at an early hour Tuesday morning. The following brief biographical sketch is taken from the Times.

For some years the venerable Doctor had been in feeble health, and a general breaking down of his system gradually wore away the life anchorage. The immediate cause of his demise, however, was severe hemorrhages of the bowels, which soon undermined his wasted strength.

He had succeeded through his own personal knowledge of his own physical ailments to successfully prescribe for his troubles. But Monday noon a brother physician was called in, to find that no aid could be offered.

He had practiced medicine in Adrian longer than any other of our physicians, preceding Dr. E. P. Andrews by one year.

Dr. Nelson H. Kimball was born in the town of Martinsburg, Lewis county, N. Y., September 10, 1820. His father, Jarvis Kimball, was a farmer by occupation, and died when his son was but two years of age. The orphan, his mother having died previous to his father's demise, was then adopted into the family of Arba Jones, of Martinsburg, N. Y., who emigrated from that state in 1837, and settled in Seneca, Lenawee county. While yet residing in Martinsburg, young Kimball attended the district schools, where he began the education which was completed in after life. In 1839, at the age of 19 years, Mr. Kimball went to Tecumseh, where he engaged to learn the carpenter's trade. After working at this for some years at various places, he entered the office of Drs. Spaulding & Barnard in 1847, and began the study of medicine.

Later he entered the Cleveland Medical College, from which he graduated with credit in 1850. Since that time he has continually and successfully engaged in the practice of his profession in the city of Adrian and vicinity Ever since the beginning of his professional career, Dr. Kimball has been a close student, with quiet and unassuming manners.

Besides occupying a prominent position in his profession, he has served with honor and credit in various public capacities. For four years he was alderman of the Second ward, and for three terms he was at the head of the municipal government of this city, having been elected Mayor by a complimentary majority, and in the administration of the affairs of his office gave universal satisfaction. He has also served as Chairman of the Board of Health of Adrian. He was surgeon of the L. S. and M. S. Railroad Company for a long period, City Physician of Adrian for two years, and was a member of the old Adrian Guards from 1845 to 1861, at which time the company disbanded.

On the 14th of May, 1850, Dr. Kimball was united in marriage with Miss Abbie J. Jones, daughter of Samuel and Lydia Jones, and a sister of John F. Jones, all of Adrian.

Dr. Kimball was one of the leading members of the Episcopal church, and had always contributed liberally towards its support.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Several old school-mates and others gave us a call last Wednesday morning.

The scholars in music are now progressing finely.

The chemistry class has a new stock of chemicals and some new apparatus provided for them to work with.

Remember the next lyceum in the A room will come off next week Friday.

The arithmetic class this year is exceedingly large and has been divided into two large classes.

Those who took the geometry examination last Friday took ten questions instead of five, as is generally given.

THE LOTUS GLEE CLUB.

The next entertainment of this season's course will be the concert by the Lotus Glee Club, on Tuesday evening of next week, Feb. 10th. From a large number of Press notices we select a few, which will show the high character and reputation of this troupe, among those who are best qualified to judge.

The Lotus Glee Club, fresh from success in London, are all artists. Their voices blend perfectly, and it is a positive pleasure to listen to the selections rendered by them. From the vocal waltz, which opened the programme, to the beautiful serenade by Abt, which was the closing number, the audience listened spell-bound. No such artistic singing has been heard for a long time from any male quartette in this city.—Boston Journal, Nov. 27, 1889.

The Lotus Glee Club made its first appearance here this season on this occasion. There is no need to add a word to the commendation already given these singers. They have made their names and fame known on both continents, and richly merit all the high praise that has been given them at home and abroad. The selections were veritable gems in quartette singing, and they were applauded with enthusiasm after each appearance.—Boston Herald, Nov. 27, 1890.

The Lotus Glee Club presented their usual order of fine work. Their singing is always a great pleasure, for there is manifest such a perfection of individual training, supplemented by their perfect co-operation into true harmony as to make it seem as one voice expressing the thoughts of a single mind. Their shading is delicate and appreciative, exquisitely blending from one tone to an other. All their selections were beautifully rendered with true artistic ease and power.—Boston Sunday Times, Dec, 1, 1889.

The Lotus Glee Club achieved a success last evening in Mechanics Hall. The audience was large. And that it was appreciative may be judged from the fact that it encored almost every number on the programme. The concert was one of the most successful in the series, and gave unqualified satisfaction.—Worcester, Mass., Telegram, Dec. 17, 1889.

Miss Marshall captivates her audience everywhere. Simple and natural in manner, free from every cheap device, she is a rare exemplification of the charm there is in unpretending, but sympathetic and appreciative impersonation. We fail to recall another of the host of public readers who brings a finer sense and a more simple but strongly artistic excellence into her work.—Gazette and Courier, Greenfield, Mass., Nov. 16, 1889.

All lovers of good entertainments who were so fortunate as to hear the Lotus Glee Club and Miss Minnie Marshal recite last evening were completely captivated by the wonderful ability of those talented young artists. Unlike most entertainments in which there are some weak points or flaws, his was so nearly perfect as to escape criticism.—Pittsfield, Mass., Evening Journal, Nov. 19, 1889.

All the members are established favorites in Burlington, and they were accorded a very generous reception. The part songs were full of that melody and harmony for which the Club is noted, and the selections by Miss Marshall were especially well rendered.—Burlington, Vt., Free Press, Nov. 4, 1889.

Unity Hall was filled to its utmost limit last night at the first entertainment given by the Young Men's Christian Association this season. The attraction was the Lotus Glee Club, assisted by Miss Minnie Marshall as elocutionist. The Glee Club was remarkably well received and greeted with rounds of applause after each number. Miss Marshall is very clever, and was also well received. Her rendition of "The Minuet" being especially well rendered.—Hartford, Conn., Courant, Nov. 13, 1889.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our sincere thanks to the friends who so kindly remembered us during the sickness and death of our mother.

The Globe Mills received an order from Sligo last week for forty car loads of flour.

James M. Scarritt, editor of the Post, is the new Hudson postmaster. He will be a good man for the place.

We print this week a new time card, showing the arrival and departure of mails at the Tecumseh postoffice.

Wm. McCowen has a change of card this week announcing the fact that he has gone into the wall paper business.

Bring your auction bills to the HERALD office. We can give dates for either Ben. Reynolds or Frank Davidson.

Brewer's No. 8 brick machine, their latest improved pattern, is taking splendidly. They have already taken several orders.

The Tiffany Iron Works have completed their first brick machine. It is a very heavy machine with all the accessories and is called the "Centennial."

Mrs. Bardwell died last Sunday. She has been ill for some time and her demise was not unexpected. The funeral obsequies take place this afternoon at the Presbyterian church.

Dr. B. F. Snyder is taking orders for Henry George's ten cent edition of Protection and Free Trade. He has already booked 113 orders and like Oliver Twist, he is still calling for more.

The County Farmers' Institute held at Adrian last week was a very successful meeting, and a fine program was presented, lasting nearly three days. It was one of the best gatherings of the kind ever held in the county.

J. D. Shull Camp S. of V., will hold a social; to commemorate Lincoln's birthday, next Thursday evening, Feb. 12. A good program will be presented. All members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C., are invited to attend.

The funeral services of the late Dr. N. H. Kimball will be held at the residence, corner of Toledo and Locust streets, Adrian, Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, sun-time. The interment will not take place until Saturday morning, at 10 o'clock, and will be private.

M. P. Brown located in Tecumseh Feb. 14th, 1874 and has taken pictures for the people of Northern Lenawee during the past 17 years. He thinks of retiring in the spring and therefore offers extra inducements for the next thirty days to all who patronize him.

Messrs MacDonald and Fultz of Chicago, are in the city organizing a branch of the Merchants' Retail Commercial Agency. A number of our leading business men have joined the association and they expect to get a sufficient number to effect a good organization.

Co. C. held an election for military officers last Tuesday evening which resulted as follows:

Capt—Will H. Hayden.
1st. Lieut—Will O. Osborn.
2d. Lieut—Thos. McClure.

The boys could'nt have made better selections and we predict a prosperous future for the company under their management.

The last number of the Journalist contains a bright article from the pen of E. Cora DePuy, which has the following: "The Tecumseh Herald is forty years old and Charles K. Spafford, the man who set the first stickful of type, has set type on the paper every year since. Mr. Spafford recently inherited a comfortable little fortune, which enables him to enjoy a well-earned rest part of the year, but he is considered the reserve force for the printing offices of Lenawee county and, as usual, helped the Tecumseh HERALD out with its holiday rush of work."

Correction—The "comfortable little fortune," is left in trust for our children after the familiar "click" in this silver Albion stick shall have ceased, "and still we are happy."—"Uncle Charley" Spafford.

The Lotus Glee Club next Tuesday.

Is the ground hog responsible for this cold snap?

Remember the church supper at the Baptist parlors this evening.

Yesterday morning was the coldest of the season thus far. The thermometer struck zero.

The place of meeting is six miles south of Adrian, and one and one-half miles from Jasper, on the Fayette branch of the Michigan Southern R. R. Let there be a general rally from all the subordinate lodges in the district, comprising counties of Lenawee and Monroe. It is the time for the installation of the officers, and it is hopeful that all the officers will be present. Fairfield Lodge desires to accommodate a large attendance.

JAMES WRIGHT,
Britton, Feb. 3, 1891. Sec'y.

Mrs. J. I. Pierce, of Rockfolls, Ill., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Ed. Snedecor.

Many of our merchants completed their invoices last week, beginning their new business year the first of February.

The cold weather last evening rather interfered with the attendance upon the dance at Armory Hall, but a pleasant evening was passed by all who braved the elements to attend.

The oyster supper to be tendered to the members of Co. C next Tuesday, has been postponed until the following evening Wednesday 11, on account of the Lotus Glee Club Concert, which takes place on that night. All members of the company are cordially invited to be present.

The Harlequin Social at Wm. Hecks last evening was a very enjoyable affair. A program of vocal and instrumental music was given. There were nine tables with a different game at each table. One of the amusements was pinning the tail on the donkey; the first prize for pinning it nearest the proper place was won by Geo. Tiffany, and the second or booby prize was taken by Leon Rosserans. Drawing the pig blindfolded made lots of sport. First prize was taken by Lavern Smith and the second by Clyde Heck. Receipts were over six dollars. The enjoyment could hardly be measured in dollars and cents.

CO. C. ATTENTION!

The following communication has been rec'd from Inspector General H. B. Lathrop. Let every member of the Company pay strict attention to its requirements and return at once to the Armory whatever State property he may have in his possession.

W. H. HAYDEN,

The latest discovered metal, lighter than hard wood and stronger than steel. The Michigan Stove Co., after a series of scientific experiments, are enabled to make an admixture of this wonderful metal with their regular high grade iron, with the result of producing smooth castings, additional strength, and preventing cracking; thereby rendering stoves made of this admixture more durable than WROUGHT IRON or STEEL. The "GARLAND," which are the product of this Co., are the only stoves made having that advantage. Remember, when in need of a Cooking Stove or Range that your local dealer is not only here to-day, but you can put your hand upon him next week also.

Dropped Dead!

Secretary Windom Dies Suddenly,

At a N. Y. Board of Trade Banquet.

After Making an Eloquent Speech,

He Fell From His Chair a Corpse.

HIS REMAINS LAID TO REST AT WASHINGTON.

A Large Concourse Follows to the Tomb — The President, Cabinet, Judiciary, Congressmen and Foreign Ministers Attend.

SECRETARY WINDOM.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—The sudden death of Secretary Windom while at the dinner of the Board of Trade and Transportation at Delmonico's caused the immediate adjournment of that body a few minutes after ten o'clock. The secretary was the first speaker of the evening. The dinner which began at six o'clock was completed shortly after nine, and the secretary arose to speak. He entertained the diners with a most elaborate oration and sat down amidst the loud applause of his auditors. Judge Arnoux then got up and was in the midst of his speech introducing ex-Secretary Bayard when some one cried "Look at Secretary Windom." The speech was broken short and every eye was turned in the direction of that gentleman. He had collapsed in his chair and was falling to the floor. His face was ghastly and a cry of horror arose among the late festive revellers.

There was an immediate rush on the part of all hands towards Mr. Windom's chair, but several doctors who were guests at the dinner got there first and drove the others back. They were doctors S. A. Robinson, Durant, Whitney, Fisher and Bishop. Dr. Robinson bent down and making a close examination of the prostrate form discovered that the heart was still beating.

By his orders the dying secretary was carried into the dish room adjoining the banquetting hall and there placed on a a table. Messengers were hastily dispatched for electric batteries and as many as four were applied to his body which was rapidly growing cold. This was exactly at 10:05 p. m. and for six minutes the electric shocks were applied incessantly but without success. At 10:11 p. m. Judge Arnoux came out of the dish room and announced to the diners that Secretary Windom, whom they had had the pleasure of hearing only a few minutes before, had breathed his last.

"He is dead." This was the fearful announcement that was sent through the gayly bedecked banquet hall, around which still hung like a funeral pall the smoke of the after dinner cigars.

"He is dead." A silence fell upon the men who were only a few minutes before clammoring for news of Mr. Windom. Judge Arnoux in retiring had announced that Mr. Windom had only fainted and it was not thought by the outsiders that it was serious as it proved to be. The secretary had succumbed to an attack of the heart. He had been for a long time a sufferer from heart disease and only last Monday was visited by a shock, which, however, passed away without causing him much inconvenience.

When it was officially announced that the secretary was dead, Secretary Tracy at once went to the nearest telegraph office and sent a message to President Harrison, informing him of the sad event and requesting him to communicate with Mrs. Windom and have her start on the 11:10 p. m. train for New York. This will bring the widow to the city by seven in the morning, and not until then can any arrangements be made for the removal of the body.

Secretary Windom was born in Belmont county, Ohio, May 10, 1827. He received an academic education, studied law at Mount Vernon, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar in 1850. In 1852 he became prosecuting attorney for Knox county, but in 1855 he removed to Minnesota and soon afterwards was chosen to congress from that state as a Republican, serving from 1859 to 1869. In that body he served two terms as chairman of the committee on Indian affairs and also was at the head of the special committee which visited the western tribes in 1865, and of that which investigated the conduct of the commissioner of Indian affairs in 1867. In 1870 he was appointed to the United States Senate to fill the unexpired term of Daniel S. Norton, deceased, and was subsequently chosen for the term that ended in 1877.

The Funeral.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The funeral of the late Secretary Windom took place today. From an early hour there was a constant arrival of friends and admirers of the dead statesman at the late residence, where they were permitted to take a last view of the face, which wore a natural and serene expression. A bunch of palms sent by Mrs. Garfield and her son-in-law, Stanley Brown, lay on the coffin, and numerous floral tributes also occupied places in the room. The callers included treasury officials, congressmen, cabinet officers, supreme court justices and the president. At eleven o'clock the residence closed and Mrs. Windom and her children took their final leave of the dead husband and father. Their grief was most intense, for, while Mrs. Windom had known for two years that he was suffering from a disease liable to bring sudden death, her loss is none the less severe. Young Mr. Windom, who arrived from the south Sunday, was especially affected, having had but a few hours with his beloved parent before called upon to take final leave.

At 11:15 the president and family and members of the cabinet arrived, and services were held, attended only by the family and the president and cabinet. The services consisted of reading the scriptures and prayer by Rev. Dr. Hamlin, pastor of the church of the covenant, where the secretary was a regular attendant. There were evidences of deep feeling on the part of the president and members of the cabinet, and tears flowed freely upon the touching passages in the reading and prayers. At the termination of the services the remains were removed to the hearse, carried by eight stalwart members of a local military company, the cabinet officers acting as pall bearers and followed by the president and Mrs. Harrison and the family of the dead statesman. The line of carriages moved slowly from Massachusetts avenue to the church of the Covenant where an immense throng of sorrowing officials and citizens who had gathered to tender a last token of the universal respect in which Mr. Windom was held.

Besides the president and Mrs. Harrison there were from the white house, Colonel Halford, Russell Harrison and wife, Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Dimmick. Owing to the large number of officials desiring to attend it had been found necessary to limit admission by card. Of those cards, some 700 in number had been issued to members of the House and Senate, Supreme Court justices, families of the cabinet officers, diplomats and officials of the treasury and other departments. The diplomatic corps was largely represented, among the number present being the British minister and representatives of nearly all the leading nations. After the remains were borne through the aisle of the already crowded church and the family and those who arrived from the residence had taken seats, every available foot of space in the church was rapidly filled. Rev. Dr. Hamlin officiated. The services with the reading of the scripture followed by prayer in which the sorrowing family and associates and nation were remembered. After further reading of the scriptures and appropriate selections of music, Dr. Hamlin delivered a brief but eloquent address referring to the eminent services of the dead statesman and his consistent Christian life which he characterized as the most comforting thought to all in this trying moment. There were evidences of deep sorrow in the audience as the services progressed. At the conclusion of the services the remains were removed to the hearse, and the long line of carriages containing beside the family and cabinent, members of congress, judiciary, treasury officials and others, took up the line of march to Rock Creek cemetery, which is some two miles distant from the church, where the grave had been prepared for interment which took place at once. The services at the grave consisted of the reading of the burial service of the Presbyterian church and a brief prayer, after which the remains were consigned to the final resting place.

WITH A HATCHET.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Jan. 31.—The supposed suicide of fourteen-year-old Mary Ann Dolan, at the home of her foster-father, John Morn, in the northwestern suburbs of this city last Monday evening, has developed into a case of murder.

It was claimed at first that the girl had taken strychnine and had fractured her skull by falling, and excitement has ran high as the coroner's jury developed new facts. The jury rendered a verdict of murder at the hands of John Moran. The latter returned home on the evening of the crime in a drunken condition and becoming enraged at the supper which had been left for him, he struck the unfortunate girl with a hatchet in the forehead, causing almost instant death. Moran and a Mrs. Phillips, who is accused of being an accessory to the crime are in jail.

EY-GOVERNOR FOSTER

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—The Commercial Advertiser's Washington special says "It is thought to be likely that Charles Foster, ex-governor of Ohio, will be selected as the most available man for Windom's successor. It is thought he is in a position to accept the appointment. There would be some politics in the appointment also, and political considerations are supposed to weigh with exceeding great weight on Mr. Harrison's mind at this time."

BLAINE UPHELD

By a Speech in the House by J. B. McCreary.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—In the House during the discussion of diplomatic bill Mr. McCreary spoke in favor of the Behring sea matter, urging that a vigorous foreign policy should be adopted, and said he thought the proposition of the British government for arbitration was based on too narrow lines, while the reply of Mr. Blaine and his return proposition was sufficiently broad and satisfactory, and hoped the matter would be brought to a termination in some manner.

INGALLS' HOPE.

TOPEKA, KAS., Jan. 31.—The death of Secretary Windom has given renewed hope to the admirers of John J. Ingalls. Already the defeated Senator is being boomed here to succeed the deceased secretary. A resolution will be introduced in the senate asking the president to appoint a man who will be in accord with the west on the financial question.

THE SLEEP OF DEATH.

A Strange Case in Medical Science in Indiana.

SEYMOUR, IND., Jan. 31.—The efforts to resuscitate George Smith, a prominent citizen of this county, were abandoned last night by physicians who pronounced the case one of the strangest in medical annals. He had been afflicted with a singular illness for fifteen days and last Sunday dropped into a deep sleep from which he never awakened.

A Town Burned.

Disastrous Conflagration in Northwestern Ohio.

THREE PERSONS, AT LEAST, LOSE THEIR LIVES.

FINDLAY, O., Jan. 31.—An uncontrollable fire started at four o'clock this morning in the little oil town of Cygnet, fifteen miles from here, and before it could be subdued left six blocks in ruins and death in its wake. The bodies of B. Maloney, Frank Satterly and Gertrude Satterly have already been recovered. Others are reported missing and it is feared several more bodies will be found in the debris. The loss will reach not less than a hundred thousand dollars, with little or no insurance. The town has no fire department and the flames burned themselves out before assistance could be had from neighboring places. Many people were half crazed with terror and fled from the town. The children were driven from their homes in their night clothing and suffered severely from the cold.

THE BUCKEYE STATE.

News Gathered by Wire and Mail for Hasty Readers.

WAPAKONETA, O., Jan. 31.—Harvey Reese, a well known farmer and horse trader, has fled, leaving debts and forged papers to the amount of $23,000.

Taubeneck is Not Rogers.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—The committee of the Illinois legislature sent here to investigate rumors that Mr. Taubeneck, a member of the legislature, was George W. Rogers an ex-prisoner from the penitentiary here, after an examination here concluded that he was not Rogers.

Sebastian Peters, of Lima, O., Murders His Wife.

LIMA, O., Jan. 31.—While crazed with drink, Sebastian Peters murdered his wife. He had been on a protracted spree, and in a fit of anger assaulted Mrs. Peters, using a large knife. Before she could escape from the house he had hacked her in a dozen places. Peters is a raving maniac and will be taken to an asylum.

Mining Property Sold.

SHAWNEE, O., Jan. 30.—All the property belonging to The Shawnee and Iron Point Coal and Iron company has been turned over to Gibson P. Kelly, representing The United Hocking Valley Coal and Iron company, who have bought the property. President Taylor and Secretary Hamilton, of Newark, O., are in the city and are straightening up the accounts of the old company.

Ground to Pulp.

JACKSON, OHIO, Feb. 2.—William Hildenbrand was returning home from Jackson, near the Tropic furnace, he was struck by an engine on the Ohio Southern railroad, and was caught under the wheels, his lower extremities being ground into a pulp. The engine and fourteen coal cars passed over him. He lived twenty-five minutes. He was about sixty-five years old, and was a widower.

Masquerraded in Trowsers.

LOGAN, O., Feb. 2.—Miss Dolly Mills and Miss Lizzie Felm were arrested by Detective Dan Joyce near Bloomingville, this county, charged with aiding men who are in hiding, supposed to be connected with the Krinn murder. Both of the girls were dressed in male attire and were brought to Logan and placed in jail dressed as they were when arrested. Female apparel was sent them. Miss Mills is a sister of Dan Mills, now in jail in connection with the Krinn murder.

Benjamin Mackall Dead.

BARNESVILLE, O., Feb. 2.—Colonel Benjamin Mackall, the oldest and most prominent man in Belmont county, died at the age of 90. During his life he was a farmer, merchant and public officer, having filled many positions of trust. He was postmaster at Barnesville for years, justice of the peace thirty years, and in 1845 was elected state senator of the Belmont-Monroe district. He passed through all grades, from lieutenant to colonel of the Second Regiment Ohio Militia, resigning the latter position to act as inspector. Since 1825 he has been a member of A. [illegible] A. M., and since 1827 has been secretary of the lodge. He was also a member of the Chapter, Commandery and Council, and has been secretary of the Chapter since 1855.

His Brains Oozing Out.

AKRON, OHIO, Feb. 2.—Peter Berg, a man between thirty-five and forty years of age, was found with his head crushed in at a place known as Rogue's hollow, near Doylestown. He was dead with the body face downward in the mud, while from a yawning wound in the back of the head his brains oozed. Indications are that the man was murdered by being struck with a heavy, blunt instrument.

The body was discovered by a lad about twelve years of age, who was on his way home from Doylestown. The village was quickly aroused, and Fred Berg, living in Doylestown, soon identified the murdered man as his brother. Berg was a married men, but had not been living with his wife for some time. He was an industrious workman, and there is no explanation of the crime.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

A Former Columbus, O. Man Kills His Wife and Himself.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 1.—Logan McAfee, a colored man, who was married about a year ago, and has been running as porter on the C., W. & B. railway, shot his wife dead and then killed himself by sending a ball from the same pistol into his head, Saturday. The tragedy occurred at their home on Mississippi street. Letters found on his person showed that it was caused by jealousy. McAfee formerly lived in Columbus, O.

RECIPROCITY.

Mr. Blaine Has Prepared Treaties Under That Clause.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—It is reported here that Secretary Blaine will send to the Senate next week the reciprocity treaties with countries lying south of the United States and possibly with Spain, based upon provisions of the recent tariff.

SPECIMEN CASES.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

FARMERS' ORGANIZATIONS.

The serious depression experienced by the agricultural interests and the large indebtedness of farmers in some parts of the country, may be assumed to be the cause of the general disposition prevailing to organize farmers into political partisan clubs, through which it is claimed the rural population may obtain control of public affairs and a renewal of prosperity to their industry.

The writer hereof, born the son of a farmer, and his boyhood days spent in very hard work and frugal living on a frontier farm, when half a dollar a day was the wages paid the best hands in the harvest field—and for the last thirty-five years practically engaged in farming, can have no other purpose in the observations he now submits to the hard-working and frugal occupiers of the fertile lands of this grand Ohio Valley than the promotion of their welfare.

That farmers should establish and maintain organizations to enable them to co-operate for social and economic improvement all intelligent and reflecting men agree. That these organizations should admit to membership only those in active sympathy with their vocation is also a generally admitted truth. And for the reason, in the first place that in such organizations people engaged in other callings, such as commerce, trade manufacturing etc., being for the most part inhabitants of the towns and cities, have such facilities for efficient co-operation that they would always be able to control these organizations.

In the next place the farmer's vocation always has a strong hold upon the sympathies of the reflecting classes of all other occupations, and seldom fails when acting in united co-operation to secure favorable responses to all reasonable demands. But the formation of political partisan organizations is altogether a different matter. History teaches that while political parties have always existed in countries having constitutional governments, or governments with limited and defined powers, their existence has always been transient and ephemeral when established to advocate a single idea, or to advance the interests of a class.

Furthermore, have those who urge the necessity of establishing a political party in the interest of the farmers agreed upon any measures of relief to be advocated by the new party? We have seen no evidence of such concurrence of opinion at any of the meetings where partisan political action has been advocated; no measures suggested designed to relieve the depression now so severely felt by our industry. On the contrary the resolutions of these bodies have for the most part dealt with questions of governmental policy that have no special reference to the evils they are organized to correct.

But in addition to all this I suggest as worthy of the serious consideration of farmers of Ohio who contemplate uniting in a new political party the fact that we are in the minority and that the majority is constantly increasing. While therefore the farmers of Iowa, Nebraska and other new states, as well as the cotton growing sections of the country, who have especial reason to complain of debts and of being "land poor" and constituting as they do the majority of the voting population, may have reasons for hoping that by partisan organization and partisan action they may obtain control of public affairs, our circumstances are so entirely different that we should not allow ourselves to be influenced by the reports of the general interest manifested in this "new departure" in those sections.

What, then, are the farmers, that is that portion of our population that is engaged in legitimate husbandry, to do to secure to this great industry the public protection and encouragement which by the judgment of all civilized nations it is entitled to demand?

Undoubtedly organization is not only expedient but absolutely essential to the protection of our rights and the advancement of our prosperity. We must manage to secure co-operation, but this cannot be secured without organization. And here, as has so often been pointed out, the rural population labor under great disadvantages, so great indeed on account of the expence and inconvenience of holding meetings for consultation, and formulating plans for co-operation that very little has been accomplished outside of local or neighborhood associations.

A great work has been done by the order of the "Patrons of Husbandry," but all that has been accomplished must be credited to the subordinate Granges. The State Gaanges have done very little, while the National Grange has done still less. The same observations apply to agricultural exhibitions. The county or district fairs, as originally established, that is for the exhibition by the farmers of the products of the farm, created a proper spirit of emulation among the agricultural class, resulting in marked improvement in all the products of this industry. But the tendency now is to have every thing on a "big scale." Shows not so conveniently arranged as to time and place that the average farmer can afford to attend with the products of his industry in competition with his neighbors, but great shows of everything that may attract the attention of the masses, and secure large crowds for the benefit of hotel keepers, etc;, at the cities near which they are generally held, and the various railway and other transportation companies. T. C. JONES

WANT TO COMBINE.

A meeting has recently been held in Pittsburg, Pa., by the eastern and western jobbers in plate glass, and at this meeting a conference was had with the manufacturers. It is not definitely known just what was done, representatives who were present being described as non-committal; but it is thought by a friendly trade journal, The New York Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter, that "the general tendency toward consolidation of trade interests, with particular reference to such a combination in the plate glass business, was the chief topic of discussion."

This is a movement looking toward the extension of an already existing agreement among eastern dealers. The journal just quoted reported under date of Dec. 3 as follows:

"On Saturday last the dealers of this city and Boston met at the Metropolitan hotel and held a prolonged session with closed doors. At the end of the meeting it was announced that the combination had been materially strengthened by the exaction of renewed pledges to maintain the agreed prices. On the smaller sizes, which for a long time have been very scarce, and which at the present time are hardly obtainable except for forward delivery, an advance of 5 per cent. was made, although in view of the circumstances some of the dealers advocated a 10 per cent. advance."

After saying this the market was described as "in better shape than ever before," there being an active demand and "stocks in all hands low." One who is not acquainted with the tariff on plate glass might suppose that under the circumstances here set forth dealers would replenish their stocks by buying abroad, but on this subject The Reporter says:

"No relief can be looked for from the other side, as prices there have been advancing of late, and the import cost is altogether too high to encourage importations."

It will be noticed above that it was on the smaller sizes that the price was advanced. This is an interesting fact in connection with the new tariff law. The old tariff began with sizes "not exceeding 10 by 15 inches square," the duty on this kind being three cents per square foot, equal to about 12 per cent. ad valorem. The second size in the old law was "not exceeding 16 by 24 inches square," and the duty here five cents per square foot, equal to about 20 per cent. The McKinley schedule begins with this second size in the old law, and the effect, therefore, is to raise the duty on all glass not exceeding 10 by 15 from three cents a foot to five cents. On sizes larger than 16 by 24 the duties of the old law are retained by McKinley.

The increase on the smaller sizes was made without any application, so far as the published reports show, from the domestic manufacturers, but they have already made an agreement to take advantage of the increase by advancing their prices on these smaller sizes. The duty on the largest sizes of plate glass is 50 cents a foot, which is equal, according to the official figures used by the senate, to 141.43 per cent. ad valorem.

The plate glass industry is one to which the protectionists are fond of pointing as one of the best illustrations of the wisdom of our high tariff policy. They point out how the industry had to struggle for a foothold here in its infancy, how protection came to its aid, how the production has increased to 25,000,000 feet annually, and how the price has gone down under protection from $1.50 per square foot to from 65 to 90 cents.

It is a beautiful picture, and it is almost a pity to bring out its defects by letting in the light of facts upon it. But the defects are there, and they must be pointed out. The small quantity of plate glass that came into the country for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, was admitted, according to the treasury reports, at 32.86 cents per square foot. Now if we calculate the total cost of our 25,000,000 feet of home manufactured glass at this price we find that it would have cost $8,215,000.

But the price of this glass manufactured in this country ranged, according to protectionist authority, from 65 to 90 cents a foot: The average of these two figures would be 77½; but putting the average still lower, say 75 cents, the wholesale cost of this glass was $18,750,000. In other words, we paid $10,535,000 more for this glass in the home market than if we had bought it from the foreign manufacturers at the average prices prevailing in 1890. A fact like this mars the pretty protectionist picture very badly.

One can easily see that with such protection our domestic manufacturers ought to realize a handsome fortune every year. There is evidence that they do. It is said that the profits of the Pittsburg Plate Glass company are $1,000,000 a year.

In a lawsuit last spring the fact was brought out that this concern cleared 34½ per cent. on its capital in 1889. About the same time a representative of this company went to England to negotiate with an English syndicate, with a view to uniting the nine plate glass factories of this country. The English had already gotten wind of the great tariff spoils our glass men were making, for it was announced at the same time that an English company had begun the erection of a factory at Irwin, a town near Pittsburg, Pa.

In the face of these facts the plate glass men are given higher protection than they had under the old law. Besides the increase of duty from 3 cents a foot to 5 cents on the smaller sizes, as noted above, the McKinley customs administrative law, which went into effect on Aug. 1, allows nothing for breakage, and compels the payment of duty on the boxes and on all costs on the other side for packing, transportation, etc. These additional charges amount to from 10 to 20 per cent. of extra protection for the domestic manufacturers. It seems to be the purpose of the tariff makers, not only to give our glass men a living chance, but to insure them profits which will make them willing and liberal contributors to the campaign funds of the party.

Prosperous Fruit Growers.

The Rural Californian has an article entitled, "How to Get Rich" and answers the question in a subheading, "Buy a fruit ranch, or, better still, buy land and plant it yourself." The article is very interesting for comparison with the statements made by the California fruit growers to McKinley's committee last spring.

The Californian says:

"The question is often asked of the Californian sojourning in the eastern states by every four out of six people he meets who have a desire to locate here, 'What can I do in your glorious country to make a living?' The question can be readily answered, 'What can I not do to make a living.' Though of course there are many avenues open to capital and to the man of brain and brawn, the backbone of the country is horticulture. This, more than all other industries combined, has made many people with no capital at all well to do in a comparatively short time. Nor is horticulture confined to growing a few varieties of fruits, but embraces pretty much the fruits of the temperate and semi-tropic zones, all of which are produced with the same unvarying success in all portions of southern California, some localities being, of course, better adapted to particular kinds."

In another column The Californian says that land for orange groves is now selling at even higher prices than during the "boom" period, and it remarks again that the cry so often heard in the east that farming does not pay is never heard in California.

Some time ago a correspondent of The San Francisco Chronicle said in that paper: "Contracts for figs for next month run from $50 to $80 a ton, and raisins in the sweat box are easily contracted for at $120 a ton. In consequence of this boom in fruits it is thought there will be fully 12,000 acres of deciduous and citrus fruit orchards planted in southern California before next May."

In view of this favorable outlook, and with many other cases illustrating it, the correspondent said that it was "easy for any one in southern California to know a fruit grower at sight. Every fruit grower in this part of the state is in the happiest mood."

Some years ago California began to make raisins, but it was not until last year that the quantity of dried grapes in the state attracted more than passing attention. Some lots were exported to Europe and the Atlantic states with favorable results. The encouragement received along this line has determined others to embark in this branch of trade, while those who were in the trade last year are increasing their output.

Australia will take quite a quantity of California raisins and prunes this season. Fresno raisin men and Oregon prune growers claim to have large orders in hand for shipment to that country.

Yet with this very prosperous showing of the California fruit industry, the growers represented to Maj. McKinley last spring that they needed higher protection on all kinds of fruit. McKinley obediently gave them the duties asked for. The duty on oranges was about doubled, but the senate restored the old rate. McKinley, however, succeeded in putting a duty of 30 per cent. on the boxes or barrels containing the oranges. The duty on raisins and figs was raised from 2 cents a pound to 2½ cents. On plums and prunes the 1 cent duty was doubled.

The California fruit growers have successfully learned the trick of the manufacturers of "talking poor" in order to get higher protection. How long is this system of sham and insincerity to be believed in and sustained by the people?

A South Carolina Case.

The South Carolina legislature has passed a bill to regulate the hours of labor in cotton factories, and to prevent the employment in them of children under ten years of age. During the discussion of the bill a Mr. Wilson made a speech in favor of the bill, in which he said that, although he was a stockholder in some of the mills, still he favored the bill because these factories were making, many of them, as much as 25 per cent. dividends, a profit which would stand some reduction without injury to the industry.

This is a remarkable statement from an economic standpoint. The south has built up and developed her cotton mills in free competition with the long established mills of the north. More than that, the south has actually taken control of the market for the coarser cotton fabrics, large quantities of which she now exports to China and other foreign lands, and has recently begun to compete with the north in the finer grades of cotton goods.

How does all this happen if the protectionists' "infant industry" argument has any force in it? Their doctrine is that young industries cannot spring up in competition with old and well established industries in another country. Yet the South Carolina cotton mills have done that very thing, and some of them are earning 25 per cent. dividends.

All the wagon and carriage manufacturers, except those in St. Louis, Mo., have gone into a trust, and have announced an early rise of prices. The consumer pays the protective duties and gets a trust in return.

On cold days when struggling to keep warm, let the consumer reflect that he is paying a double duty of 49½ cents a pound and 60 per cent. ad valorem on his woolen clothing.

THE PULPIT AND THE STAGE.

Rev. F. M. Shrout, Pastor United Brethren Church, Blue Mound, Kan., says: "I feel it my duty to tell what wonders Dr. King's New Discovery has done for me. My Lungs were badly diseased, and my parishioners thought I could live only a few weeks. I took five bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery and am sound and well, gaining 26 lbs. in weight."

Arthur Love, Manager Love's Funny Folks Combination, writes: "After a through trial and convincing evidence, I am confident Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, beats 'em all, and cures when everything else fails. The greatest kindness I can do my many thousand friends is to urge them to try it." Free trial bottles at J. J. Orr's Drug Storr. Regular sizes 50c. and $1.00.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many costomers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, Knightstown Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction." Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

DON'T GIVE UP

The use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One bottle may not cure "right off" a complaint of years; persist until a cure is effected. As a general rule, improvement follows shortly after beginning the use of this medicine. With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Perseverance in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradicated."—L. W. English, Montgomery City, Mo.

"My system was all run down; my skin rough and of yellowish hue. I tried various remedies, and while some of them gave me temporary relief, none of them did any permanent good. At last I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, continuing it exclusively for a considerable time, and am pleased to say that it completely

Cured Me.

I presume my liver was very much out of order, and the blood impure in consequence. I feel that I cannot too highly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla to any one afflicted as I was."—Mrs. N. A. Smith, Glover, Vt.

"For years I suffered from scrofula and blood diseases. The doctors' prescriptions and several so-called blood-purifiers being of no avail, I was at last advised by a friend to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and now feel like a new man, being fully restored to health."—C. N. Frink, Decorah, Iowa.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., FEB. 5, 1891.

Township treasurer Ed. Kirchgessner went to Adrian Tuesday to make his returns to the County treasurer.

Mrs. Julia Rowland visited her daughter, Mrs. B. F. Thompson, over Sunday.

E. R. Smith went to Adrian the first of the week.

Ephraim Ogden has rented E. F. Muir's house and will move in a short time. Mr. Muir expects to go to Detroit soon.

Chas. Ellis has purchased a lot east of Mrs. John Sullivan's residence and is making preparations to build thereon. He has engaged to work for Ed. Semark.

The proceeds of the entertainment given by the school last December have been invested, as was announced at that time, in a flag. The pole was raised last Friday, and Monday the flag was proudly floating, to the great delight of Young America.

The sixth and last entertainment on this winter's course will be a lecture given by George Wendling, early in March. The positive date has not yet been decided upon. It is not necessary to say anything in commendation of this distinguished lecturer, as he has spoken here before, and many look forward to this as the finest thing in the whole series.

C. S. Burroughs is spending this week in Detroit.

Mrs. John Amspoker has purchased E. F. Muir's horse and phaeton.

A. C. Huntington and D. M. Bainbridge spent last Saturday in Detroit.

Measles have made their appearance. Wilmer Gregg and a little daughter of Thomas Kirk are the first victims.

We hear that Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scoville, of South Bend, expect to come here soon, with the expectation of making Clinton their home. Mr. Scoville is in very poor health.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Watson, of Tecumseh, were in town Monday.

D. M. Bainbridge had charge of the funeral of Mrs. Cole, in Tecumseh, Monday.

Mrs. A. B. VanDeMark entertained a number of friends Monday evening in honor of Mrs. George Kies.

Mr. Reed Payne died last Friday morning at his home three miles west of here. Mr. Payne had not been as well as usual for several weeks, but his condition was not considered serious until a few days before his death. He was nearly eighty years of age and leaves a wife and three children: Clark Payne, Mrs. Elias DePuy and Mrs. Alanson Updyke. The funeral was held Saturday, at 2 p. m.

Mrs. George Kies, who has been here for a couple of months, returned to her home in Elkhart Wednesday.

At a meeting of the Common Council last Monday evening it was decided that George Belding be appointed janitor in the place of S. Howell. Mr Belding has served in this capacity before and we are glad to hear of his re-appointment.

Sam Larzelere has rented part of his house to Andrew McFaul, who will move his household goods there in a few days.

The upper meat market is closed for repairs. It has been thoroughly cleaned and painted inside and the refrigerator has been enlarged.

The young people have a hop and supper to-night at Town Hall. Smith's orchestra, of Hillsdale, furnishes the music and caterer Belding the supper, which will be served in the basement of the hall. A grand time is expected, as this is the first party of the season.

Married—Wednesday, Feb. 4th, at the residence of the bride, in Bridgewater, Col. Fenn, of Georgia, to Mrs. Frances Kies. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Williams, in the presence of a small number of guests. We understand that Col. and Mrs. Fenn expect to remain here.

Mrs. Keyser, of Tecumseh, made Clinton friends a short visit Tuesday.

There will be an entertainment at Town Hall Saturday eve., Feb. 7th, for the benefit of the M. E. Church. Following is the program:

PART FIRST.

McGinty's Band.
Recitation—Mrs. C. S. Burroughs.
Quartette—Misses Henderson and Messrs. Bostedor and Daniels.
Solo—Miss Blanche Smith.
Duet—Misses Humphrey and VanGiesen.
Recitation—Miss Bertha Gibson.
"Mistletoe Bough"—A Song Pantomime.

PART SECOND.

McGinty's Band.
Recitation—Miss Nellie Martin.
Song—Mrs. M. C. Reeves.
Duet—The Misses Henderson.

Admission 15 cents. Doors open at o'clock. Concert begins at 8.

GUMBO'S GRAB BAG

Ground hog day
Has come, they say,
And the deuce is to pay
With the weather.
Then what is the harm
To lock arm in arm,
From city and farm,
And all go skating together.

First citizen—"What kind of boots do the alliance men out in Kansas wear?"

Second Citizen—"Ask Senator Ingalls. He ought to know."

Jones—"Co. C. met with quite a loss in the resignation of Capt Wood. But the boys are so well organized that I apprehend no serious damage to the company."

Smith—"Right you are; and they hit the nail on the head Tuesday evening in the election of officers. Will Hayden is exactly the man for Captain, good-natured, and yet firm, active and industrious, he will have the welfare of the Company sincerely at heart. Tecumseh does not contain a young man who could better fill Capt Wood's shoes. Will Osborn for first is a model selection and Tom McClure for second is the man for all work. The two Will's and Tom will make a mighty strong three horse team."

W. L. Douglas (the three-dollar shoeman)—I have concluded to change my methods of advertising somewhat.

Advertising Agent—But my dear sir, what can be more successful than the present method? Why, sir, your portrait has appeared in every newspaper from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and—

Mr. Douglas—Ah, there's the rub! I do not complain when the country editors now and then use my protrait for Sam Jones, Eyraud, Signor Succi or Ward McAllister, but when a patent-medicine advertiser uses me regularly as a "before taking," I revolt.

A couple of gentle men sat in a smoking car the other day, gliding on the Lake Shore rails, and discussing the merits of ex-Gov. Luce's recent grist of pardons.

"Let me see," said one, "it was nineteen mortgages Tom Navin forged, wasn't it?"

"Yes."

"Well, I was thinking that supposing he had stolen nineteen horses in Branch county, a few of which were inveigled away from a certain farmer in the southern part of that county, familiarly known as Gilead, would he have been pardoned?"

There was a frightened look about his companion as he gave up the conundrum.—Adrian Times.

Mrs. Gumbo—"I say, Joshua, what is the meaning of this talk about ground hog day? Has the ground hog obtained a clerkship in the weather bureau?"

Mr. Gumbo, knocking the ashes out of his pipe—"Wall, Jerusha, I don't claim to be a scholar on astromical questions, but I've bin a weather prophet for more'n fifty year, and I'm pretty well posted on this 'ere ground hog business. On the second day of Feboary, the ground hog ambles out of his hole, sets up on his haunches and gazes around. How long he gazes depends on cercumstances, but he gazes long enuff to take a genoine, all round, weather obserwashion. If the sun comes out and he can see his own shadder, then the weather's goin' to be colder—or warmer—durin' the ensoolin' six weeks. But if on tother hand, the sun don't come out, so he can't see his shadder, then the weather'll be warmer—or colder—durin' the next six weeks. I've watched this rule for over fifty year and I never knew it to fail."

AUCTION SALE.

J. A. Robinson will sell at public auction on his farm, 1 2 mile north of Adrian town hall, on Thursday, Feb 12, '91. The Black Hole

Of a Pennsylvania Coal Mine

Engulfs Over a Hundred Victims.

The Terrible and Tragic Explosion

Eclipsing in Its Scenes of Horror

Any American Coal Pit Disaster.

SIXTY-THREE DEAD ARE LAID TO REST.

MOUNT PLEASANT, PA., Jan. 28.—A gas explosion in the Mammoth shaft of H. C. Fricke Coke Company's mine about ten miles from here, occurred at 9 a. m. Between fifty and eighty men were in the mine at the time. Eighteen bodies have been taken out, and it is estimated that fully fifty men are dead.

A Scottdale, Pennsylvania, special to the Times says: Eighty miners are known to have been killed in the shaft of the Mammoth Coke Works mine by the terrible explosion which occurred early in the morning. Mine Boss Eaton, who escaped about one minute before the fatal explosion is the only individual remaining to relate the story.

John Boles, whose brother is in the fatal shaft, was here in the evening and relates the following story: "About nine o'clock in the morning we heard a loud report in the direction of the shaft. We immediately started to the opening only to find a suffocating volume of smoke and gas gushing therefrom and at once knew what was wrong. We began the work of subduing the flames and clearing the shaft of gas. This we accomplished by starting the large fans. I am convinced that every man who was in the shaft at the time was killed either by falling timbers or by the after damp. When I left the mine fifty persons were known to have been killed."

The Sickening Details.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 29.—A special representative of the Times and United Press now at the scene of the accident telegraphs from Youngwood, Pa., as follows: One hundred and ten men were killed in the mine explosion at Mammoth mines No. 1. Sixty of the bodies have already been recovered.

The mine is on fire and it is thought that many of the unfortunates will be burned before it is possible to reach them. An army of men are at work in the pit endeavoring to stay the fire and recover the dead bodies. They are making but little headway.

The other bodies taken from the mines are so horribly mutilated that they cannot be identified. As they are brought out the bodies are removed to one of the company houses and prepared for burial. Several undertakers are engaged at this work. The West Moreland county coroner is at the scene and is preparing for an investigation.

One hundred and ten men were employed in that part of the mine in which the explosion occurred and not one was left to tell the story of the disaster. Not more than fifty of the men were killed by the explosion. The others were overcome by the after damp and while some of the bodies are horribly torn, burned and mutilated others were found with their teeth clinched on the iron rail of the pit road. Others were found with faces plunged into the water and not a few were found upon their knees as if engaged in prayer.

Fire Boss Sneath was identified by his gum boots. His body was scattered about in a dozen places. His head was torn from his shoulders. Both legs were torn off and that part of his body recovered was roasted and blackened. His left hand clutching his lamp was found over one hundred feet from the trunk of his body. One of his gum boots was found fifty yards away, one of his feet with part of a leg attached was found also. When the parts of his body were collected and sent in a sheet to the pit mouth, they were identified by an engineer recognizing the boots.

There is little information regarding the horror. Everybody in the pit was killed. The position of their bodies told the story of their end. The force of the explosion was felt for miles around and caused a panic among the pupils in the township school house nearly a mile away. The men employed in the Mammoth No. 2, separated by one hundred acres of coal felt the shock and were the first to sound the alarm.

Superintendent Keighley, a thoroughly competent man, sent to all of the company's mines in the district for aid, and from ten o'clock in the morning until midnight an army of men were engaged in carrying out the dead. The scenes around the shaft mouth are indescribable, mothers, sisters, children and old men crowd about eager to recognize their loved ones. Their wailings and shrieks of anguish strike terror to the stoutest heart. Scarce a house in the hamlet but is in mourning, and the work of carrying out the dead continues.

The news of the explosion was received by Mr. H. C. Frick in Pittsburg in the afternoon. Mr. Frick was filled with consternation at the extent of the disaster. He said: "We have never had an accident like this in any of our mines. The mammoth plant was thought to be in the safest of hands, when we gave it in charge of Mine Inspector Fred Keighley. No expense has been spared to make our mines as safe as possible."

Twenty-five trimmed coffins were shipped from Pittsburg to Mount Pleasant in the evening. Another lot of seventy-five has been ordered for shipment in the morning.

One Hundred and Three.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 29.—The horror of the disaster at the mammoth mine of the Fricke company has not in the least been exaggerated. Up to 10 o'clock this morning 103 bodies had been recovered, and it is supposed that fully seventeen others remain buried under the debris in the dark chambers of death. But few of the dead can be identified, mutilation making recognition impossible, and a vast majority of the victims will undoubtedly find a resting place in a common plot set aside for the purpose in a neighboring cemetery.

Laying the Dead to Rest.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 30.—A special to the Times from Scottdale, Pa., says: All the Connellsville coke region stood with bowed form and reverent head, while sixty-three of the dead miners taken from the Mammoth shaft were shrouded, coffined and laid to rest for their long sleep. The funeral procession was one such as the region has never before known. The remains and the mourners were carried to St. John the Baptist's cemetery, at Scottdale, in a long special train. Along the inhabited portions of the road hundreds of citizens turned out and wherever the train halted great crowds gathered. Over 5,000 persons were present as the bodies were placed side by side in a common grave.

Shortly after 2 o'clock in the afternoon the funeral train was pulled into Mammoth. It was composed of three baggage cars, three coaches for the mourners and an extra car. Half a dozen teams were pressed into service to haul the coffins to the train, where they were put down in a row. The coffins were numbered. On the lids of some the name of the dead person was written. The labor of loading coffins on the train was watched by a mixed crowd of spectators.

The train stood between two rows of coke ovens in blast. On the ovens rows of boys and men were ranged. At 2:30 o'clock Superintendent Lynch began to fill the cars with the mourners. Two coaches were crowded with sobbing women and stern faced men. The pent up sorrow of those left behind by the dead broke loose at last as they realized the nature of their journey to Scottdale. At 3 o'clock the train started and at five o'clock reached Scottdale, and the work of taking out the coffins was begun. About fifteen wagons stood in readiness to carry the caskets to the cemetery. Three coffins were placed on each wagon. Two or three men were required on each wagon to prevent the coffins from falling when passing through ruts.

WITH A RED HOT IRON.

An Illinois Suicide Punctures His Own Bowels.

BARRY, ILL., Feb. 2.—Ira N. Bodley, a discharged brakeman of the Wabash road, committed suicide here in the most horrible manner imaginable. The day after he was discharged from the road he began to drink, and while in that condition called on William Hall, a well-to-do farmer living three miles west of here, and proposed for Hall's eighteen-year-old daughter. He was unceremoniously bounced, and returning to town began to drink heavily. About 10 o'clock at night he entered the blacksmith shop of his brother-in-law, W. I. Smith, and taking a rod of inch iron heated it, then gave it a point and heated about six inches of it to a white heat. He put the bar in a vise and bent it, then deliberately removed his coat and vest and pressed his abdomen against the glowing iron.

A colored boy named Willie Evans, who was in the rear of the shop, heard the sizzling of the flesh and saw the form of the rash man enveloped in a cloud of steam and smoke. With a cry of terror he escaped. Parties hearing the dying man's groans ran to him, but he was beyond aid. The boy afraid to tell the truth, and the story was given out that Bodley had met with an accident.

STRUCK WITH A STONE.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 31.—Last Monday Katie Kopf, eight years of age was sent on an errand by her parents. When returning home with her package, a boy much older than Katie stopped her and demanded the bundle she carried. She refused, whereupon the boy attempted to take the package by force. Katie broke away from her assailant and started to run. The boy threw a sharp stone at the girl, striking her just above the left eye. She fell to the ground and the boy ran away. A passerby carried the girl home where she related the adventure to her father, who not thinking the injury serious did not call a physician. Yesterday erysipalas set in and last night the girl died in terrible agony. The name of Katie's assailant is not positively known and has not been arrested.

SHOT FIVE MEN,

The Daring Act of Two Masked Montana Robbers.

HELENA, MONT., Feb. 2.—January 17 two masked men entered a tent at McCartyville, an isolated railroad camp in the Northern part of Missoula county, and shot five men, two of whom died. The masked men took $700 and escaped to the mountains. In an hour after the tragedy Deputy Sheriff Sprague was in pursuit, and since his dispatch sent the next day after the tragedy, nothing has been heard of the officer and it is believed he has been killed. A posse has gone in search of the missing deputy.

PEFFER FOR PRESIDENT.

That is Now the Cry Among the Kansas Farmers.

TOPEKA, KAS., Feb. 2.—Senator-elect Peffer, for president in 1892, is what enthusiastic members of the Farmers' alliance here assert will be at the head of their ticket if it is finally concluded to desert the other political affiliations and branch out as a new party. Delegates to the Omaha convention declare the victory would be by no means impossible within the next decade, and the leaders in the improvement will push the campaign with the utmost vigor.

Senator Voorhees' Mother Dead.

VEEDERSBURG, IND., Feb. 2.—The aged mother of Senator Daniel W. Voorhees died here Saturday morning. She was eighty-nine years old and died of the weakness incident to age. The senator, who was called home from Washington by her illness, is himself lying quite sick at the family home.

MARVELOUS ENDURANCE.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swolen ankles, etc. Dr. Franklin Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only reliable remedy. Sold by Baker & Hall.

I feel it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so entirely without solicitation. I have used it more or less half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind since I was a little boy and I never hoped for cure, but Cream Balm seems to do that. Many of my acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

BRITTON BUDGET.

Mrs. George Exelby is improving slowly.

Mr. Babcock was away on business last Monday.

We regret to say that the house and parlor maid at the Exelby Hotel is suffering with a bad eye.

Mr Hause, agent for Ollie Hunt, of Adrian, was in our village last Saturday. Mr. Hause has sold quite a number of pianos and organs in this vicinity.

Don't forget Ten Nights in a Barroom next Saturday night, Feb. 14th. Proceeds towards building a new sidewalk down to the church. Admission only 5c. and 10 cents.

The roads were bad
The nights were dark,
But McM.
Had gone to spark.

L. A. Brown and Ben Snyder have bought a valuable horse from Dr. Thos. Smith, he amount paid being somewhere in the neighborhood of $175 less $174 75. The horse is at present under the doctors care at his veterinary infirmary on Beasley street.

Mr. Beasley is busy every day in his plaining mill. He does good work and can give you good satisfaction. Mr. B. is also busy manufacturing tables, bedsteads and other kinds of furniture. Anyone in want of such articles will do well to give him a call before going elsewhere.

A certain young man in our villlage went to Ridgeway one evening to see his best girl. After staying up with her until the small hours of the morning, he bid her a reluctant farewell and was busy in the act of osculation, when a voice growled out, "I'c—you—what are you doing, sucking that door knob?" Curtain.

Last Saturday evening, Feb. 7th, at the home of the brides mother, Mr. Arthur Hughes, of Tecumseh, and Miss Maggie Exelby, of Britton, were joined together in the holy bonds of matrimony. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. Hoag, of Britton, before a large party of relatives and friends. The presents were costly and nnmerous. Miss Exelby is a young lady well known in Britton, having made it her home since her arrival from England some four or five years ago. She is highly respected by all who know her, and there are many good wishes for her future happiness and prosperity.

Ten Nights in a Bar-room played by the Britton Dramatic Club last Friday and Saturday evening was quite a success, the play was put on the boards in a very fair manner and all the actors did themselves credit. Ernest Dubois as Sample Switchell was very funny and fairly brought down the house. Miss Bertha Kniffen as Mary Morgan was exceedingly fine, and would do herself credit with any company; her speaking was clear and distinct, every word being heard b the audience. Henry Miller as Frank Slade made a good bar-tender, and the other parts were all fairly rendered. $48 80 were the full receipts of both nights, which will leave a profit to the Club of from $25 to $30. An interesting ceremony took place on Saturday evening at the commencement of the last scene: The members of the company wishing to show their appreciation of Miss Bertha Kniffen's fine rendering of the part of Mary Morgan, presented her with a handsome album, the presentation being made by Dr. Hendershot, who made a neat little speech appropriate to the occasion. The Club will send for some new scenery if they can mak satisfactory arrangements about engaging a hall. The stage at the Exelby Hall is too small to produce a play to any advantage and unless it can be enlarged and other alterations made, it will not be good policy for the Club to go to any further expense in buying scenery. The home talent for the size of our village is very fair and will compare favorably with any other village of its size in the state, and if some of our prominent men here would use their influence by becoming honorary members of the Dramatic Society and push the thing along, there is no reason in the world why Britton cannot have four or five good plays every year, which will not only be an amusement to our villagers but also afford benefit and instruction to the players. The money derived from these shows after paying running expenses could go towards buying books for a library or some other enterprise that would afford pleasure and instruction. We will add that Ten Nights will again be played here next Saturday night, Feb. 14th. Admission 5c. and 10 cents.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Mrs. David Harrison is under the doctor's care at present.

Esquire W. H. Arner is not as well at the present writing as he has been for the past few weeks.

Prof. E. A. Wilson has a relapse of Lagrippe, and at present is very sick.

Lulu Rappleye is on the gain at this writing, and it is hoped she will be able to resume her school duties in a week or two at the longest.

Editor Waring of the Messenger and Loree Eaton, left for Harvey, Wednesday.

Mrs. Chas. Underwood and Mrs. Sarah Rappleye went to Toledo Wednesday for a short visit with friends.

Clara Temple is teaching school in Dist. No. 3, for Lulu Rappleye this week.

Comfort Chase, of Tecumseh, spent the Sabbath with his sister, Miss Flora Chase, at the home of Ella Waring.

Mrs. Lavenia Jackson, of Macon, is visiting relatives in the village at present.

Geo. Arner and wife went to Tecumseh Friday for a short visit, when they will leave for an indefinite stay with her parents, at Matawan, Mich.

Will Cornell, wife, and daughter, of Stoney Creek visited relatives here, Sunday and Monday.

Mrs. Edgar Exelby, of Britton, was the guest of her cousin, Ada Linn, Sunday.

Several of the citizens attended the entertainment given at Brritton, Friday and Saturday nights, and were much pleased with the play.

The next meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. S. J. Helm, on Thursday afternoon of next week.

Those who attended the Lotus Glee Club entertainment given at Tecumseh Tuesday evening, were completely captivated and carried away by the entire program. Miss Marshall, in her recitations was grand. Too much praise cannot be given the Club and Miss Marshall by the press. Those who failed to attend missed one of the grandest musical entertainments of the nineteenth century.

The next entertainment of the Tecumseh Musical and Lecture Course, will be given on Thursday evening, Feb. 26th, '91, when Daniel Dougherty, of New York City, will give a lecture. Tickets may be had of Miss Clark, by calling at the Library.

The friends of the village and vicinity, are preparing a ship entertainment to be presented to the public as soon as the Log is completed. The ship will be constructed at the home of Mrs. Ella Waring, ready to be launched at the ringing of the bell by the captain. Full particulars and date given in due time.

Remember the time for the annual donation is set for Wednesday, evening of next week, Feb. 18th. to be held in the parlors of the church. Everyone not on the chicken-pie committee, are respectfully invited to bring such eatables as go to make the tables present a tasty and inviting appearance.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Dance at Lon Mudget's Monday night.

School in the Bradley Dist., was closed for a couple of days last week while the teacher, Willis Smith wrestled with an attack of neuralgia.

To arrive at our ninety first birth d v with unimpaired mind, good physicial powers and a cheerful and contented disposion is vouchsafed to but few; aunt Ann Allen celebrated hers with all these happy conditions last Wednesday. May there be many happy returns.

The surprise party at Ezra Simmons on the occasion of his birth day Feb. 4th, was a very enjoyable affair. Music was furnished by our old time fiddler Harvey Doty assisted by Wm. Witherell, H. Hampton, F. Billington, and Mrs. Lottie Billington. A large number of his old friends and many of his new, the rising generation, were present.

For the restoration of faded and gray hair to its original color and freshness, Ayer's Hair Vigor remains unrivaled. This is the most popular and valuable toilet preparation in the world; all who use it are perfectly satisfied that it is the best.

People who use arsenical preparations for their complexion, do so at the risk of their lives. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is guaranteed free from any injurious drug, and is, therefore, the safest as well as the most powerful blood medicine in the world. It makes the skin clear.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Miss Minnie Sisson is visiting at Brooklyn.

Miss Ida Easlick is doing station work on the C. J. M. at Devils Lake in shipping the ice crop.

G. V. Osgood is quite encouraged over his medical treatment at Toledo. Has a good appetite, is gaining strength and otherwise greatly improved.

Cyrus Mead was called to New York, week before last from the sickness of two sisters. A letter from him this week announced the death of one of them on Monday the 9th.

There will be a fourth degree meeting of Macon Grange, on Friday the 20th., concluding with a picnic dinner. Rev. Gulick and wife and Miss Nella Mead are the lucky candidates.

Mr. Frank Gilmore of Lake Ridge and Miss Della Freer of Ridgeway, were united in marriage on Wednesday the 4th., and commenced housekeeping the same evening on the new farm. Frank and Della will make a lively team, and are sure to succeed.

Married at the brides parents on Friday Jan. 23d, 1891, Mr. Frank Bacon of Wheatland, and Miss Minnie Greenfield of Deerfield. Frank and Minnie will make a strong team, and will get there, if it takes all summer.

George Kempf has put 16,000 feet of lumber from the timber he bought of Frank Clarkson, with more to hear from; besides several hundred cords of wood and lots of picket fencing. He is getting material together for a new barn on his farm below the Ridge.

There are about 290 operators on the C. T. L. and at the present rate per mile, only about 12 miles more line can be added, without also adding to the English alphabet, as only 351 calls can be arranged from 26 letters, with one and two letters each, and no two alike either backward or forward.

There will be a meeting of the citizens of Macon and vicinity at Macon Grange hall on Wednesday evening Feb. 18th, for the purpose of discussing the political situation, with a view of organizing a Farmers' Alliance, a club or other Society, for the dissemination of political science. A free talk. Every body come out. By order of many citizens.

WOODSTOCK WARBLES.

Mrs. Wheaton is recovering from injuries received from a fall some days ago. We hopefully look forward to her complete restoration.

Mrs. Binns heard her son James breathing hard on arising, one morning last week, and hurried to his side just in time to see him breathe his last. Heart disease took him in life's morning. He was 20 years of age.

The funeral obsequies of Mrs. Hibbard were conducted by Rev. L. R. Cook, of Jackson, on the 30th ult., near Kelley's Corners. Her remains were sent to New York for interment.

The funeral services of Mrs. Siegfried took place at the Baptist Church at Kelley's Corners on Sunday, the 1st inst., Rev. L. R. Cook officiating. She leaves a husband and three children, her aged parents and many friends to mourn her loss. She was a woman of inestimable worth and noble Christian character. She was a leader in every good cause and will be sadly missed by all who knew her.

Mrs. Josephine Joslyn was very happily surprised on Friday night of last week, when she returned from Brooklyn about seven o'clock, to find her house filled with friends and neighbors Mrs. Geo. Bartlett, in a few well-chosen words presented Mrs. J. with a beautiful chair in behalf of the company. She responded nobly, though she was surprised. After the presentation we were bountifully supplied with a rich repast—just such a sumptuous feast as the good ladies of Woodstock know so well how to prepare. After a very social evening the company departed, and all felt that it was good to be there, and left behind them a surprised and happy woman.

The Woodstock Farmers' Club met at the home of its President, Mr. Wilson Neely, on Saturday last. An excellent program had been prepared and was well carried out and all enjoyed a good time. Eighteen members joined on that day, making 44 in all, and the society only a month old.

The Demorest Silver Medal contest took place at the Free Baptist Church Saturday evening last. The contestants acquitted themselves finely and reflected credit on themselves. The prize was awarded to Mr. Chauncey Smith. The program was an excellent one, the music was delightful, and all went like clock work.

MACON MUSIC.

Weather changeable—mud one day, hubs the next.

On Tuesday evening Jan. 17th, the farmers of Macon will meet at Grange Hall for the purpose of taking into consideration the propriety of forming a branch of the Farmers' Alliance. As this is an important question, it is hoped there will be a good turnout.

Mrs. Leon McRoberts, of Mason, is visiting relatives in Macon and Ridgeway at present. She came in time to attend the marriage of her sister, Miss Della Freer, to Mr. Frank Gilmore, which took place on Jan. 4th, at the parsonage of the Reformed church in Macon, the Rev. Gulick officiating.

The last regular meeting of the Macon Grange was well attended and the special meeting on Monday evening of this week, for the purpose of initiating a class in the first and second degrees was also well attended. The next regular meeting will be on Friday Jan. 20th at 10 o'clock a. m., at which time the class under way will be instructed in the third and fourth degrees. At the close of the fourth degree an oyster dinner will be participated in by the members of the Grange. After dinner in connection with other exercises, the following question will be discussed by the members of the Grange: "Resolved, That instead of the present system, the government should loan money direct to the people at two per cent. secured by real estate at one-half of its valuation, but not to exceed $50 per capita. All members are invited to be present, as this is expected to be one the most enjoyable meetings of the winter and as it is a regular meeting, important business will come before it for transaction.

Revival meetings at the M. E. church all this week.

Mrs. Lovina Jackson is visiting her son, G. W. Jackson, of Tecumseh.

B. S. Scudder has two clerks now in the store, he having secured Bert Day the hustler.

Ace. Smith, who has been visiting friends in New York for the last five weeks, returned home last Thursday.

The many friends of Nettie Bard will be glad to learn that she was able to ride over to visit Mrs. William Pratt last Friday.

M. V. Sickley returned last Friday from Virginia and North Carolina, where he has been introducing his washing machine. His southern trip satisfied him that his machine could not wash a black man and make him white.

Reports of musketry in the rear of town caused some excitement last Saturday afternoon. It was thought at first that the Indians had made an attack, but official reports informed us that it was the Macon Gun Club who had come together to try their skill at Clay Pigeon shooting. Mark Mills ahead.

TECUMSEH AND FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, FEB. 12.

The glass trust is the latest combine to organize under Major McKinley's benign tariff law.

It looks now as though the Force bill was absolutely dead, and all patriotic citizens will say Amen.

The old governor of Connecticut still hangs on. He should issue a proclamation, announcing himself as Dictator under the title, "Napoleon I. of the Nutmeg State."

The debate on the Force bill will rank, in future, among the greatest parliamentary struggles of the century, and what is more to the point, the People's cause was triumphant.

"What will Kansas be without Ingalls?" asks an indignant organ. What has Kansas been with Ingalls? would be a more pertinent query. The w robbed state in the Union.

The Nellie Griffin affair is a serious blot upon the management of the State School at Coldwater. The legislature should set an investigation on foot and probe this matter to the bottom.

The deadlock still continues in the Illinois legislature. Every adjournment costs the people $1,500 and the people will doubtless insist upon stopping this nonsense at an early day.

The radical leaders, who are so valiantly trying to put down the rebellion, are not the men who shouldered the musket and marched to the front when the war was on. Gen. Grant said, "Let us have peace."

Senator Stewart did not exaggerate when he said that the Force bill was a greater menace to the Republic than secession was. Secession meant a divided country and two rival Republics. The Force bill means the Empire.

The masterly generalship of Senator Gorman, in conducting the fight against the Force bill, is becoming more apparent as the smoke lifts from the field of battle. He has proven himself the most astute political manager since Samuel J. Tilden.

Senator Wolcott has been barred by the Republican patriots of Detroit, who are to celebrate the death of Washington's principles upon the natal day of the father of his country. Yet in many eyes Colorado's Wolcott is bigger than Detroit's boycott.

"In the future 'iridescent dreams' will be more real to John James Ingalls: he goes out of public life to repent of the many years he has passed as an intellectual fraud, a phrasemonger without principles and a reviler of what is best in his country's politics."

Every step toward the increase of taxation during the past thirty years has been taken by the Republican party and has been vigorously fought by the Democracy. The very reforms now advocated by the Farmers' Alliance the Democracy has been trying to accomplish ever since the war.

Jerry Simpson, of Kansas, having been sent a present of hosiery from Jersey City, returned the bundle with a note which read: "Sir, our forefathers refused to drink tea because it was taxed 3 per cent., and held a tea party in Boston for the purpose of getting rid of the stuff. I have just finished figuring up the tax upon these stockings, and I find that it amounts to 70 per cent. I will wear no socks until the tax is taken off."

The Farmers' Alliance of Minnesota has very pronounced views upon two questions of the greatest interest at this time. One resolution demands that "the war tariff, which has too long survived the object of its creation, shall be radically revised, giving very material reductions in the necessaries of life, and placing raw materials on the free list." The McKinley bill is denounced as "the crowning infamy of protection." In like manner the Force bill is denounced as a "dangerous and revolutionary measure, devised for partisan purposes."

The Democratic party opposes the passage of the Force bill, not because of its possible effect upon partisan politics; not because it has been denounced so generally in the hitherto Republican States as to warrant the presumption that the already overwhelming majority recorded against the G. O. P. will be thus increased; not because it has fear lest the next Congress be unable to force the repeal of the iniquities consummated since the repudiation of the present majority by the people; not for any or all these reasons: but simply because the bill proposed is wrong in principle and contrary to the genius of American institutions. It has become the duty of Democrats in Congress to withstand by every constitutional means the effort of malignant partisans to place an improper law on the statute books. They are guided in such action only by the knowledge that they have received public warrant to stand between the people and the further encroachments of monopoly under the guise of Republicanism.—Chicago Times.

Ex-President Cleveland and Governor Hill were fellow guests at a dinner at the Manhattan Club on Saturday evening, and there was no earthquake or even the mildest form of estrangement visible. On the contrary, the demeanor of both would have been just about the same had they been known as devoted personal and political friends. Mr. Cleveland spoke first and ended by a handsome compliment to the Governor and proposing the health of the Democratic Senator from New York. Governor Hill closed his speech by expressing the hope that he might leave Washington as highly honored as is the President, and in obedience to his al, the health of Cleveland was standing by the company. After dinner the two distinguished Democratic leaders had a pleasant personal chat, and altogether the occasion was a very agreeable one all round. It is proper to say that Brother Dana was not one of the dining party and the returns are, therefore, not all in yet on the question of political harmony between Cleveland and Hill. If there is to be no fight between Cleveland and Hill for the Presidency, Brother Dana will at once prepare to flock by himself. He has been exhibiting strong symptoms of that sort lately, and he will probably soon take up the hermit's staff and enjoy the quiet repose of political solitude.—Philadelphia Times.

Of the late Geo Bancroft the Chicago Times says: "There can be no better guide in this direction than the life of America's great historian. He was a Democrat pure and simple. In his creed was no thought of an aristocracy resting upon dishonor of birth or gathered fortune. He believed in the people, nor would limit the suffrage by lines tending to partisan advantage. Learned in the story of nations that had passed away, he was quick to see the dangers threatening his country and skillful in pointing the way of safety. Inspired with an honorable ambition, he returned the confidence of the people with a service which of itself was his reward. Called to high responsibilities at an early age, he filled the measure of his opportunities and left his imprint on the story of his times. Representing his country at the courts of older nations, he taught strangers the true source of America's greatness and established faith in the permanency of her institutions. Having laid the basis for literary effort, he extorted the admiration of the world of letters by the excellence of his every undertaking. It is by such an ideal that American citizens may measure those who would stand for them in the contest against the further encroachments of monopoly and the establishment of the rule of equal and exact justice.

The Missouri legislature adopted resolutions thanking Senator Stewart, of Nevada, for manfully opposing the passage of the Elections Force bill. The Senator acknowledged the receipt of the resolutions in the following language, indicative of profound statesmanship and broad patriotism: "It affords me extreme satisfaction to know that my humble efforts in resisting a measure which I regard as utterly subversive of the rights of the states and of local self-government itself are approved by the most numerous branch of the legislature of the great state of Missouri. The far-reaching effects of the proposed legislation are not now realized by the people. If the bill should become a law, every voting precinct in the United States might, and probably would, be under the control or at least subject to the influence of Federal power. The advocates of the bill justify its provisions by contending that there is no other way to secure a free ballot for the colored man in the South. They do not reflect that if the remedy proposed is destructive of a free ballot for the white, both north and south, despotism must follow, and in that event the colored man will be subjected to the tyranny of imperial power equally with the white man, and that the freedom of the ballot will be denied to all. The boldness and audacity of the bill have taken the people by surprise, and it is almost impossible to realize that the measure has been forced through one house of congress and is almost irresistible in the other, the practical effect of which is to interfere with local self-government in every section of our country.

SOUTHERN REPUBLICANISM.

The Force Bill Destroyed All Possibility of Building up a Protectionist Party in the South.

The Manufacturers' Record of Baltimore published last week an article which President Harrison, Senator Hoar and Representative Henry Cabot Lodge might read with profit. It is as follows:

The New York Tribune has determined to enter upon a "new campaign of education" for the laudable purpose of convincing unprejudiced minds throughout the land that a protective tariff is essential to national progress and prosperity. In furtherance of this plan, Henry Hall, Esq., business superintendent of the Tribune, has sent circular letters to gentlemen known to be the friends of protection, or to be engaged in industries whose success must depend upon its continuance as well as to every industrial and development company in the south.

One of these letters was received by Major G. B. West, of Tredegar, Ala., where he is at the head of a land and industrial company which has $[illegible]000 capital. Born and educated at the North, and imbued with its ideas, he has always been a protectionist of the Henry Clay school, and an earnest Republican. He has an intimate acquaintance with most of the prominent Southern and Northern men, to whose wisdom, ability, enterprise and capital the South, in large measure, is indebted for its prosperity.

The following is Major West's scathing reply to the Tribune's Appeal for assistance in its undertaking:

TREDEGAR, ALA., Dec. 31, 1890.

Henry Hall, Business Superintendent Tribune, New York City—My Dear Sir: I have read with interest your esteemed circular letter of the 24th inst, on the subject of the new "Campaign of education" undertaken by the the Tribune. You will pardon me for expressing the conviction that the movement is much like locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen.

Three years ago I pleaded very hard with leading Eastern protectionists to meet the flood of free trade propaganda in the South, and to spend some reasonable effort and means in the encouragement of the strong, respectable, but unorganized, protection sentiment in our mineral States.

At that time I knew numbers of Southern business men who were Republicans at heart, and who would have come to the front with enthusiasm and force if the party had offered any guarantee that the next Rebublican adminstration would turn its back upon the objectionable negro and white people who then held control of the party organizations in the South. Such a policy would certainly have led to the formation of a strong intelligent and wealthy phalax of protectionists to stand by your party organizations, strong enough to have dominated several once doubtful States in this section.

At the time I write of, leading members of the American Protective Tariff League held out the idea that should the Republican party win in the impending Presidential campaign, something not only tangible, but great, would be done to bring out the latent protectionism here and party leaders were at the same period profuse in promises that a reorganization of the party in the mineral Southern States would be accomplished in such a way as to give control to respectable elements of society, and to make it possible for decent people to take active interest in party affairs.

These prospects and promises encouraged us greatly, and especially after a delegation of prominent protectionists visited President-elect Harrison at Indianapolis and received satisfactory assurance as to what would be the policy of his Administration in the matter.

A Southern Protective Tariff League was put in process of organization. Leading cultivated and wealthy men in Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama and Louisiana were actively engaged in the movement. A call for a convention at Chattanooga was printed and ready to send out. The writer, in conjunction with several others, commenced the publication of the Southern Protectionist. We appealed to the Northern organization for assistance, to push the educator everywhere throughout the South. We were told that all the money of the Northern cult would be needed for the Congressional elections of 1891, and that, if we wanted to undertake any Southern propaganda, we must find the means ourselves.

Next, it became manifest, very soon after the inauguration of President Harrison, that the party organization in the south was not to be changed; that none of the assurance extended to the Southern protectionists were to be given practical effect. The elements generally recognized were quite as bad as ever. Conviction universal on these points dissolved our embryo Southern Protective Tariff League. We stopped publishing the Protectionist and suspended the fight. Then the Force bill gave the coup de grace to the whole thing. Republicans engaged in every department of material development, production or trade, everywhere, protested unanimously against the bill. Their protests have been unheeded.

Except as to negroes and a few politicians, the Republican party died in the South with the force bill. Respectable men of affairs and family—miners, manufacturers and merchants—in this section, much prefer a low tariff without the force bill to a high tariff with the force bill and consequent race and social disturbances.

You will find that thinking Republicans here, who understand the social question of the section much better than eastern doctrinaries can be expected to, would not be well pleased to have their interests and progress attacked by a national party which is only humanitarian in the case of the negro, while it is at the same moment highly and violently ultilitarian in oppression of the colored races, even to the extent of violation of solemn treaty obligations.

In short, what with indifference at a time when action might have been productive of good, with the violation of promises and the commitment of the party irretrievably to a policy vastly obnoxious to every element of decency in the South, our Northern protectionists and Republicans have at a blow murdered protection and respectable Republicanism in all the Southern States with the conditions of which the writer is at [illegible]

Both elements are dead beyond the power of a first-class miracle. You will only waste your money in trying to work on them in any of the commonwealths I have named above. With respect, truly yours, G. B. WEST.

TOLEDO, O., Jan 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen;—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours truly,

MARVELOUS ENDURANCE.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time.

No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swolen aukles, etc. Dr. Franklen Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only relirabber emedy. SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

RELIEVE THE FARMER.

Under the George system, the government will no more own and control land and "rent it out to the highest bidder" than it does now. Land, under his system will continue to be owned by individuals precisely as it is now. It will descend to heirs and be devised to legatees precisely as it is now. Not a single law relative to land ownership and control now upon our statute books will be changed in carrying out his doctrines to the fullest extent. A man's right, under the present system, to enjoy the exclusive possession of a tract of land is conditioned upon the payment of a tax upon its value. And so it will be under the George system, without the slightest change in the machinery now in use for the assessment and collection of taxes on real estate.

Henry George simply proposes to reform our present absurd and barbarous system of levying taxes, a system which discourages enterprise and thrift and encourages monopoly and greed.

Take the case of a young man here in Texas, who, we will say, by working on shares, has finally saved up a little capital and who now proposes to become the owner of a farm of his own. He is going to get a piece of wild land, break it up, grub it, fence it and cultivate it. He has a wagon, a pair of horses, a few household utensils, a wife, plenty of children and a little money. He does not dream of getting rich; he merely hopes to secure a competency by faithful work. He looks around for a location. He naturally desires to settle near town, where he will be handy to market, and where his family can enjoy the society of neighbors and the benefits of church and school privileges. He finds just such a town. He finds tens of thousands of acres of vacant land all around this town and close to it. Just the kind of land he is looking for. No one is using it, and it lies there idle, waiting for the hand of industry to be applied to it. But he finds that the speculators have got there ahead of him. They are keeping it for an increase in value. In order to get hold of a hundred acre tract of this land he must mortgage himself to some speculator. He must bind himself to pay over to a speculator all that he can possibly save in excess of the barest possibilities of life for a term of years. He feels that the land is already above his means, so he turns away, drives out twenty miles and buys a hundred acres out of a thousand acre tract held by another speculator, for which he pays $200, and then settles down in the wilderness.

His children can scarcely get to school at all. It is miles to any church. He has to haul his cotton five miles to the nearest gin. He wastes a great deal of time on the poor roads between his home and the town where he does his marketing, hauling his produce over thousands and tens of thousands of acres of land just as well adapted to raising it as that which he has been compelled to select so far away. He works to far greater disadvantage than he would had he been permitted to settle nearer town, hence he produces less, and therefore must buy less.

Now, why have the speculators seized this vacant land and taken it out of the reach of this industrious farmer? Do they propose to use it? Do they propose to do any thing with it by which labor can be employed, and the sum total of the world's wealth increased? Do they propose to invest a dollar in the cultivation and improvement of this land? By no means. They propose that some one else shall do the work and have the worry, and take the chances of the crops failing. Yet they propose, nevertheless, to get rich out of this land. How? By holding it in idleness, by driving labor off from it, and compelling labor to pass it by and settle on far less eligible and desirable tracts. One of these speculators paid $1,000 for a piece of this land. It is now worth $5,000. Whose labor has put an additional value of $4,000 upon this piece of vacant land? Not the labor of the present owner, nor the labor of any previous owner, because no one has ever done a stroke of work upon the land. It has resulted from the increase of population. It has been put there by the community. The speculator sells the tract for $5,000 and thus makes $4,000. He has not, however, increased the sum total of the world's wealth one iota by the transaction. He has simply drawn to himself $4,000 worth of wealth which other people have produced—wealth which labor has been compelled to pay over to him for the bare privilege of access to one of the gifts of nature.

Well, our young farmer, after a year's hard work in fencing, breaking the sod, and putting up buildings, has added $300 worth of improvement to that hundred acre tract of land. By the sweat of his brow he has actually increased the sum total of the wealth of the world to the extent of $300. What happens now? Why, the tax-collector comes around and fines him for it by taxing these improvements. He has to yield up to the government in taxes on these improvements a portion of the fruits of his individual industry. He is robbed on account of taxes on these improvements of a portion of the values produced solely by his individual industry. The community did not put this additional value of $300 upon his land. He put it there by his own hard work. But who is putting values yearly on the vacant land adjoining, which the speculator is holding in idleness? Is it not the community that does it? Now, why should our young farmer be taxed any more for using his hundred-acre tract of land and giving employment to labor on it than the speculator is taxed for holding in idleness a tract of equal value and preventing labor from using it? Which act conduces most to the prosperity of the country? Why should not the speculator pay at least as much tax for the privilege of excluding labor from a hundred-acre tract of land as the farmer has to pay for the privilege of employing labor on a tract of equal value?

Under the present taxing system our young farmer must pay the government say 1 per cent. taxes on his land and improvements, amounting to $3 a year for the privilege of the exclusive possession of his hundred-acre farm. If he doesn't pay it his farm will be sold for taxes. The speculator from whom he bought, however, only pays $1 a year tax on the adjoining hundred acres of equally as valuable land. Has the farmer hurt any one by improving his hundred acre tract? If not, why should he be fined for it? On the contrary, by settling on one hundred acres of that thousand acre tract he has made the nine hundred acres more valuable, and when other hard working farmers settle in the neighborhood, they, by their labor, by their common energy and enterprise, will add yearly to the value of the speculator's holdings. But will they get any advantage from this enhancement in the value of his land, which they themselves have caused? Will he give them any portion of this unearned increment which they themselves have produced? On the contrary, should one of these farmers desire to increase the size of his farm, or to settle one of his children on adjoining land, he will have to pay the speculator for the very enhancement in the value of the land which has resulted from the application of his own labor upon his own land.

The first step in carrying out the George doctrine in Texas is simply exempting by law all personal property and improvement on land from taxation, and requiring taxes to be levied on land values alone. Such a law would be a direct benefit to every farmer in the State.

Here in Harris County, at least six-sevenths of the land is wholly unimproved, and probably one-third of the lots within the corporate limits of the city of Houston are vacant. On an average all over the United States about one-half of the taxable values of a country are in personal property and improvements on land, while the other half is in the land itself.

In Harris County we must raise say $200,000 a year to cover State, county and municipal taxation. Now, in order to raise the sum on one-half the taxable values in the county, as would probably be necessary were we to exempt personal property and improvements on the land from taxation, we should of course be compelled to double the tax on land values. This would double the tax now paid on any tract of vacant land. It would, however, reduce the taxes on farms and residences from fifty to five hundred per cent. A hundred acre farm in Harris County, the assessed valuation of which is $1,000, pays a tax of $10 a year. Now, what is the assessed valuation of wild land in the neighborhood similar in quality to such a tract, and which is likely enough owned by a non-resident speculator? Is it more than a dollar an acre? Is it more than one-tenth the assessed valuation of the improved farm? To the owner of such an improved farm I say, if the first step even in carrying out the George doctrine were adopted, the assessment of the speculator's land would be doubled, but your farm would be assessed at precisely the same valuation as his land adjoining of equal value with your own, regardless of the improvements. You would thus be assessed at $200 instead of $1,000, and your taxes would be $2 a year instead of $10, a reduction of taxation in your case of five hundred per cent. Yet people say that the farmers will never be such fools as to adopt the George theory. Time alone will show.

Henry George teaches that the more farms that are opened up and improved the more machinery, buildings and factories are erected, the more coal beds and mineral deposits are developed, the more residences are built, the more will labor be in demand and the better wages will the laborer get. The more wages the laborers get the more will they have to spend, the more will they buy and the better will times be all around. Why, then, should the man who improves land, who builds a residence, a storehouse, a factory or a tenement on land be fined by a tax gatherer on account of his enterprise and his willingness to do some thing with his money which gives employment to labor? If any one is to be fined, why should it not be the man who, instead of putting his money into productive enterprises, attempts to forestall labor by buying up the vacant lands, the undeveloped coal bed and mineral deposit, with the purpose of extorting blackmail from labor, a bounty for the bare privilege of making nature useful to mankind?

By taxing improvements, buildings, tenement houses and factories, we discourage the investment of capital in productive enterprises which give employment to labor. By taxing land values alone, by increasing the burden of taxation on land values, we do not lessen the amount of land, but we cheapen its price, we make the speculator who is holding it in idleness a little more anxious to sell, we make the land owner a little more anxious to improve. A tax on land values alone, therefore, instead of retarding enterprise, stimulates enterprise.

Now, suppose this first step had been taken when our young farmer went forth seeking land for his own farm. If it had cost speculators twice as much in taxes to hold vacant land around that town would they have been as eager to buy it up in the first place? Would they not have been a little more shy about investing in it, and hence would not its price have been considerably less? and hence could not our farmer have got just as good a piece of land for the same price a good deal nearer town? and hence would not his family have had more social advantages and better church and school privileges? and would he not have saved a good deal of time in going to mill and market, and would he not have worked to better advantage in a great many ways, and therefore have produced more and hence have been able to buy more? and if his merchant were relieved from the payment of taxes on his store house and stock of goods, would not this lessen the cost of his doing business, and hence lessen the selling price of his goods, also to the farmer's advantage. H. F. RING, Houston, Tex.

ELIJAH IS TRANSLATED.

LESSON VII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 15.

Text of the Lesson, II Kings ii, 1-11. Commit Verses, 9-11—Golden Text, Gen. v, 24—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

After the story of Ahab and Naboth, as in the last lesson, we have the record of Ahab's repentance, the league of Jehoshaphat and Ahab, the death of Ahab in battle according to the word of the Lord (I Kings xxii, 38), and also the death of Jehoshaphat. In II Kings i we have the record of the death, by fire from heaven at the word of Elijah, of two captains and their fifties, whom Ahaziah, the wicked son of Ahab, sent to Elijah; and also the death of Ahaziah, because of a fall which he had in his own house.

1. "And it came to pass when the Lord would take up Elijah into heaven by a whirlwind."

We have now come to the record of Elijah's last day on earth in a mortal body. Suddenly he appears before us in I Kings, xvii, 1, and now as suddenly he is to be taken from us. Like Aaron and Moses, he is to be taken away in perfect health (Num. xx, 28; Deut. xxxiv, 7); and like Enoch, he is to be taken without dying.

"Elijah went with Elisha from Gilgal."

2. "And Elijah said unto Elisha, Tarry here, I pray thee; for the Lord hath sent me to Bethel."

By comparing Gen. xii, 6, and Deut. xi, 30, it would seem that Abram's first altar in the land was not far from Gilgal. In Gen. xii, 8, we see his second altar at Bethel. Here also Jacob saw the ladder set up on the earth whose top reached unto heaven (Gen. xxviii, 12, 19).

"As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they went down to Bethel."

This is the steadfastness of purpose which has something in view and gets it. See chapter iv, 30; Ruth i, 16, 17; II Sam. xv, 21; Phil. iii, 13, 14. There is nothing like indifference here, but on the contrary a wholeheartedness which indicates intense desire.

3. "Knowest thou that the Lord will take away thy master from thy head today?"

This was the question of the sons of the prophets at Bethel. We will find more of them and a similar question at Jericho.

"And he said, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace."

Elisha was well aware that Elijah was to leave him, and like Jacob with the angel, he was in his heart clinging and saying, "I will not let thee go except thou bless me" (Gen. xxxii, 26). There would be more of the spirit and power of God in believers today if there were more turning away from man, and eager waiting upon God such as is seen in Jacob, Elisha, Paul and others.

4. "And Elijah said unto Elisha, Tarry here, I pray thee; for the Lord hath sent me to Jericho."

This is met by the same refusal as at Gilgal, and is followed (vs. 5) by the same question from the sons of the prophets at Jericho as that asked at Bethel. He heeds not Elijah's request, nor is he moved by the repeated reminders that Elijah is about to leave him.

6. "And Elijah said unto him, Tarry, I pray thee, here; for the Lord hath sent me to Jordan."

If a redeemed soul will stay at Gilgal (reproach rolled away, salvation obtained) there they may stay and be saved as by fire; if they will go farther to Bethel (house of God and revelations of glory) and consent to tarry there, thinking and talking of their future happiness, they may still, though saved, be without much reward; if they press on to the city of palm trees (Deut. xxxiv, 3), pleasant but barren (vs. 19), they may rejoice in being blessed with all spiritual blessings, and the good things which He will not withhold from them that walk uprightly, and yet live largely a selfish life and bear little fruit.

7. "And fifty men of the sons of the prophets went and stood to view afar off; and they two stood by Jordan."

Fifty afar off looking on, only two really in the business on hand, one of them about to be taken and the other eager for one thing, desiring it most earnestly; and yet all the fifty-two are among the prophets.

8. "And Elijah took his mantle and wrapped it together, and smote the waters, and they were divided hither and thither, so that they two went over on dry ground."

The last we heard of this mantle it was covering Elijah's face as God talked with him at Horeb in the still small voice, and a little later it was thrown upon Elisha as he was plowing (I Kings xix, 13, 19). Now it is like Moses' rod stretched out over the Red sea, or like the Ark of the Covenant on the shoulders of the priests at this same Jordan five hundred years before.

9. "Ask what I shall do for thee before I be taken away from thee."

Jordan, the river of judgment, has been crossed; Elisha would not tarry at any delightful experience, but on, and on, and now in the power of resurrection he stands with Elijah on the verge of separation from him and hears this great question. It is as if Elijah said, Why have you clung to me? Why have you so perseveringly followed on? What is it that you so earnestly desire? Ask it now that you may receive it.

"And Elisha said, I pray thee let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me."

10. "And he said, Thou hast asked a hard thing; nevertheless if thou see me when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee; but if not, it shall not be so."

A hard thing for Elisha, and perhaps he knew not what he asked. Elijah knew what it had cost him to obtain the measure of the Spirit which he had; what separation, what loneliness, what death to the flesh, what trials, what persecutions, and if Elisha is to receive a double portion of the Spirit will it not be a hard thing for him? Has he counted the cost?

11. "And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder."

Can you imagine the subject of their conversation, as the one knew that any moment his companion might be gone, and the other knew that any moment he might cease to be a mortal man? We are sure that nothing trifling would be spoken, but only things concerning the awful realities of time and eternity. Elijah would surely speak of the necessity of standing in everything with God and for God, and would warn his companion against the sins into which he himself had fallen.

See God in the whirlwind in Job xxxviii, 1; xl, 6; Ezek. i, 4; Nah. i, 3; Zech. ix, 14. The whirlwinds with which we are familiar dash all things earthly to pieces, but if we are heavenly people nothing can harm us, not even a cyclone. It may take us to heaven, and that will be a great gain.

is a proud, and that proud marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.
"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton N. Y."
REPEATED TRIALS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.
"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER Bowne, Mich."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain 9 years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.
There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine. The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889 where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognize its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.
The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured therefore, of having the very latest and best.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years,
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates it cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

A THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

Remarkable Statement of Personal Danger and Providential Escape.

The following story—which is attracting wide attention from the press—is so remarkable that we cannot excuse ourselves if we do not lay it before our readers, entire.

To the Editor Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat:

SIR. On the first day of June, 1881, I lay at my residence in this city surrounded by my friends and waiting for death. Heaven only knows the agony I then endured, for words can never describe it. And yet, if a few years previous any one had told me that I was to be brought so low, and by so terrible a disease, I should have scoffed at the idea. I had always been uncommonly strong and healthy, and weighed over 200 pounds and hardly knew, in my own experience, what pain or sickness were. Very many people who will read this statement realize at times that they are unusually tired and cannot account for it. They feel dull pains in various parts of the body and do not understand why. Or they are exceedingly hungry one day and entirely without appetite the next. This was just the way I felt when the relentless malady which had fastened itself upon me first began. Still I thought nothing of it; that probably I had taken a cold which would soon pass away. Shortly after this I noticed a heavy, and at times neuralgic, pain in one side of my head, but as it would come one day and be gone the next, I paid little attention to it. Then my stomach would get out of order and my food often failed to digest, causing at times great inconvenience. Yet, even as a physician, I did not think that these things meant anything serious. I fancied I was suffering from malaria and doctored myself accordingly. But I got no better. I next noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing—also that there were large quantities one day and very little the next, and that a persistent froth and scum appeared on the surface, and a sediment settled. And yet I did not realize my danger, for indeed, seeing these symptoms continually, I finally became accustomed to them, and my suspicion was wholly disarmed by the fact that I had no pain in the effected organs or in their vicinity. Why I should have been so blind I cannot understand.

I consulted the best medical skill in the land. I visited all the famed mineral springs in American and traveled from Maine to California. Still I grew worse. No two physicians agreed as to my malady. One said I was troubled with spinal irritation; another, dyspepsia; another, heart disease; another, congestion of the base of the brain; and so through a long list of common disease, the symptoms of many of which I had really had. In this way several years passed, during which time I was steadily growing worse. My condition had really became pitiable The slight symptoms I had at first experienced were developed into terrible and constant disorders. My weight had been reduced from 207 to 130 pounds. My life was a burden to myself and friends. I could retain no food on my stomach, and lived wholly by injections. I was a living mass of pain. My pulse was uncontrollable; in my agony I frequently fell to the floor and clutched the carpet, and prayed for death. Morphine had little or no effect in deadening the pain. For six days and nights I had the death-premonitory hiccoughs constantly. My water was filled with tube-casts and albumen. I was struggling with Bright's Disease of the kidneys in its last stages!

While suffering thus I received a call from my pastor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, at that time rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of this city. I felt that it was our last interview, but in the course of conversation Dr. Foote detailed to me the many remarkable cures of cases like my own which had come under the observation. As a practicing physician and a graduate of the schools, I derided the idea of any medicine outside his regular channels being in the least benefical. So solicitous, however, was Dr. Foote, and I finally promised I would waive my prejudice. I began its use on the first day of June, 1881, and took it according to direction. At first it sickened me; but this I thought was a good sign for one in my debilitated condition. I continued to take it: the sickening sensation departed and I was finally able to retain food upon my stomach. In a few days I noticed a decided change for the better, and also did my wife and friends. My hiccoughs ceased and I experienced less pain than formerly. I was so rejoiced at this improved condition that, upon what I had believed but a few days before was my dying bed, I vowed, in the presence of my family and friends, should I recover, I would both publicly and privately make known this remedy for the good of humanity, wherever and whenever I had an opportunity, and this letter is in fulfillment of that vow. My improvement was constant from that time, and in less than three months I had gained 26 pounds in flesh, became entirely free from pain and I believe I owe my life and present condition wholly to Warner's Safe cure, the remedy which I used.

Since my recovery I have thoroughly re-investigated the subject of kidney difficulties and Bright's disease, and the truths developed are astounding. I therefore state, deliberately, and as a physician, I believe more than one-half the deaths which occur in America are caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. This may sound like a rash statement, but I am prepared to fully verify it. Bright's disease has no distinctive features of its own, (indeed, it often develops without any pain whatever in the kidneys or their vicinity) but has the symptoms of nearly every other common complaint. Hundreds of people die daily, whose burials are authorized by a physician's certificate as occuring from "Heart Disease," "Apoplexy," "Paralysis," "Spinal Complaint," "Rheumatism," Pneumonia," and other common complaints, when in reality it is from Bright's disease of the kidneys Few physicians, and few people, realize the extent of this disease or its dangerous and insidious nature. It steals into the system like a thief, manifests its presence if at all by the commonest symptoms and fastens itself in the constitution before the victim is aware of it. It is nearly as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families, inheriting it from their ancestors, have died, and yet none of the number knew or realized the mysterious power which was removing them. Instead of common symptoms, it often shows none whatever, but brings death suddenly, from convulsions, apoplexy, or heart disease. As one who has suffered, and knows by bitter experience what he says, I implore everyone who reads these words not to neglect the slightest symptoms of kidney difficulty. No one can afford to hazard such chances. I make the foregoing statements based upon facts which I can substantiate to the letter. The welfare of those who may possibly be sufferers such as I was, is an ample inducement for me to take the step I have, and if I can successfully warn others from the dangerous path in which I once walked, I am willing to endure all professional and personal consequences.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 30.

OBITUARY.

Died at Tecumseh, Mich., on Sunday Feb. 8th, 1891, Mrs. Engelina wife of Hon. Alfred D. Hall. Mrs. Hall was born in Dinxpalo Kingdom of Holland, April 19th, 1838, and was the daughter of Rudolph and Petronella Heesen. In company with her parents she came to this country in the year 1846. The family found a residence first at Youngstown, Ohio. Afterward they removed to Cleveland, Ohio, and in 1860 to Tecumseh, Mich. On Feb. 15th, 1865, she was united in marriage to Hon. A. D. Hall. From that time on her life may be said to have been uneventful, in that it was constantly spent in the same place and in the faithful performance of those quiet yet important duties belonging to the position of wife and mother. In a higher sense however it has been eventful; in the sense of having been greatly useful, and of having kept home bright by its untiring round of loving service, most cheerfully performed. If it be a wife's part to look well to the ways of her household and to cause the heart of her husband to safely trust in her, she performed that part well. If it be the part of a mother to train her children rightly and to make them confide in, love and honor her, she performed that part also well. If it be proof of a virtuous and a righteous life, that all grieve when it is ended, then hers was such a life.

Mrs. Hall became a Christian in her childhood and a member of the Presbyterian church, in 1862, and has all ways proved herself a faithful and consistent Christian, true to her profession to the last. On Sunday night Feb. 1st. she was seized with a chill while at church, which proved to be the prelude of a fatal illness. A violent attack of pneumonia followed the chill, under the force of which she gradually sank, until, surrounded by loving and sorrowing ones, she sank into insensibility and entered into rest. Mr. D. T. Hall, of Baker & Hall, Tecumseh, and Mrs. W. H. Wiggins of Adrian, children of a previous marriage of Mr. Hall, mourn with Mrs. Hall's own children, four of whom survive her, the loss of a mother, and the bereaved husband the loss of a well beloved wife. W. H. B.

FUNERAL OF Dr. N. H. KIMBALL.

The funeral obsequies of the late Dr. Nelson H. Kimball of Adrian, were held at his residence last Friday afternoon. The Old Light Guard of which he was Captain attended in a body, and a large concourse of citizens paid their respects to the honored dead. Many friends of the family outside of Adrian, also availed themselves of the privilege to look once more upon the face of him, whom in life they had learned to love and esteem. The interment, which was private, took place Saturday morning.

A biographical sketch appeared in last week's HERALD, giving a brief story of his eventful life. In the ranks of the medical profession in Lenawee County, he stood at the head. For many years he was the peer and associate of such distinguished physicians as Doctors Spaulding and Stevenson of Adrian, and Doctors Patterson and Hamilton of Tecumseh. Until his own health began to fail he possessed a very extensive and lucrative practice. In the line of his profession he enjoyed the utmost confidence of his own clients and the respect and friendship of his professional associates. He was a student of medicine all his life, was a great reader and kept abreast of the times in medical and surgical lore.

Personally he was a man of few words and yet one of strong convictions upon all subjects. His unswerving devotion to family and friends drew people toward him and held them as with hooks of steel. Although having a large practice, his kindness of heart interfered with and checked his accumulations, so that he could not be accounted wealthy when he passed away. Many a poor man has been befriended and started on the pathway of business success by the Doctor's quiet aid. Those who knew him best in the years of his activity and usefulness will feel that they have lost a personal friend. They will deeply sympathize with his bereaved widow and can truthfully say: "A good man, a worthy citizen, a noble husband has been gathered to his fathers."

MACON CENTER CHIPS.

If current remarks are to be taken as an indication, the Tecumseh Opera House will have a crush to hear Hon. Daniel Dougherty.

Last week, while sawing wood, Lafe Kelley had his left thumb seriously cut with the buzz saw. A portion of the bone had to be removed, but Dr. Morden saved the member. It will take a good while for it to heal but "Lafe" says it's a good deal better than no thumb.

Nettie Bard is reported better, with every prospect of recovery, much to the joy of her many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Harmon were among the delegates to the F. W. Q. M. at Bedford, Monroe Co., last week.

Have you a farm to rent? Several would-be renters in quest of a place.

Will Schreder, who has been working Jim Aten's farm for some time, goes to Jacob G. Roberts' place this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Rice Hendershot are preparing to take possession of their new home, the farm lately owned by Mrs. Rufus Hall, as soon as the agreement will permit. The people of East Tecumseh are very glad of the prospect of having Mr. and Mrs. H. for neighbors.

FRANKLIN UNION LITERARY AND LYCEUM

The above Society met at the residence of Mr. Ezra Simmons, Feb. 6th, 1891. Notwithstanding the roads were not in the best of condition, it proved to be the largest crowd of the season. It was about 8:30 when we were called to order by the president, and after a somewhat lengthy business meeting the following program was listened to:

Song—Choir.
Dec.—Herbert Munger.
Dec.—Howard Whelan.
Music—Amy Alexander.
Rec.—Bertha Mudgett.
Song—Mr. and Mrs. Dibble.
Dia.—Ella and Herbert Munger.
Song—Mr. and Mrs. Langdon.
Dec—J. S. Allen.
Song—Mr. Patchen.
Rec.—Lena Alexander.
Rec.—Loa Spaulding.
Song—Amy Alexander.
Rec.—Mabel Bunting.
Essay—Bertha Taylor.
Rec.—Laura Russell.
Music—Seth Simmons and others.
Song—O. Whelan and B. Billington.

After a short recess the meeting was again called to order, but on account of the lateness of the hour the debate was adjourned and it was decided to have a short musical entertainment instead.

The next meeting will be held at Mr. Dunn's Feb. 27, 1891. The question for debate is, Resolved that—"Our ignorant voters are more detrimental to our prosperity than the saloon. Clarence Wisner, aff., and Hollis Taylor, neg.

CO. C. ATTENTION!

The following commusication has been rec'd from Inspector General H. B. Lathrop. Let every member of the Company pay strict attention to its requirements and return at once to the Armory whatever State property he may have in his possession.

W. H. HAYDEN,
Officer Com'd'g Co.

The Inspector General proposes to soon make an inspection of the Company, and property belonging to the State, and you will have all such property at the Armory.

Commanding officers of companies will be notified of date of inspection.

Very resp'y,
H. B. LATHROP,
Brig. Gen. and Inspector Gen.

I feel it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so entirely without solicitation. I have used it more or less half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind since I was a little boy and I never hoped for cure, but Cream Balm seems to do that. Many of my acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill.

NORMAL NOTES.

An innovation has occurred. Boys are allowed to attend Miss King's talks to the girls.

The newly-elected officers of the several societies and the Students' Christian Association have assumed their duties.

About sixty seniors are being taught how to develop the young idea in the training school this term.

The Schubert Male Quartette of Chicago filled their date on the lecture course Jan. 21, and the Detroit Philharmonic Club Feb. 5. Both were fine entertainments.

The second Public of the year was held in Normal hall Jan. 30. It was a representation of Mt. Olympus and a council of the Greek and Roman Gods and Goddesses. There were twelve characters in Greek and Roman costumes, and the program was both entertaining and instructive.

The visiting committee of the State legislature was here Feb. 6th to look over the appropriation question. A reception was held for them in the evening at the Normal. Music was furnished by the Normal choir and several members responded to the request for a speech. Tecumseh students had the pleasure of shaking hands with their former teacher, Prof. D. A. Hammond, who was on the reception committee.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Miss Julia Wood has resumed her studies at school again.

Remember, there will be a debate held in the A room to-morrow, to which the public is invited.

Mr. Will and Fred McNair gave us a call last Monday morning.

The question for debate to-morrow is, Resolved—That Elizabeth was a greater queen than Victoria. Affirmtive—Raynor Anderson, Julia Wright, Gertrude Howell; negative—Grace Heesen, Minnie Pomeroy, Franc Snell.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The chairman of the finance committee reported that the committee had examined the sexton's yearly report and found it correct. On motion the report was adopted.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

The sexton reported three adult interments for January. On motion the report was accepted and ordered filed.

PETITIONS AND APPLICATIONS.

A petition was presented from David Zeluff, asking that a street lamp be placed on the corner of Maumee and Cummins streets, near the south line of his land. On motion the petition was laid on the table.

H. S. Lee asked permission to tap the water main in order to supply water for the Lilley House. On motion the petition was referred to the committee on fire and fire limits.

On motion permission was granted to Richard Goodall to erect a sign post on Evans street near shoe shop.

An aplication was received from Wm. C. Jordan for the position of village sexton for the ensuing year on the same terms as in 1890.

NEW BUISNESS.

The following bills were received and referred to the finance committee:—

Tecumseh Electric Co., street lighting for December, $143.00; street lighting for January, $145.00; E. A. Hodges, street commissioner, $4.00; A. E. Kennedy, freight bill and exchange, on draft $1.20.

On motion of Mr. James the council ordered two additional electric lights rected, one at the intersection of Chicago and Ottawa streets and one at the intersection of Chicago, and Pearl streets.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The finance committee reported favorably on the above bills as read and on motion orders were directed drawn on the treasurer for the several amounts.

On motion the council then proceded to the election, by ballot, of a sexton for the year 1891. The whole number of votes cast was six, of which Wm. C. Jordan received five and Albert Hyde received one. Wm. C. Jordan, having received a majority of all the votes cast, was declared elected sexton for the year 1891.

The president appointed councilmen Smith, Heck and the recorder board of registration to sit Feb. 28, 1891; and councilmen James, Elliott and the recorder an election board for the annual charter election, to be held March 2.

The council then adjourned.

CHAS. F. FIELD Recorder.

SELLING "CHEAP" PORTRAITS.

Many residents of Evanston, Irving Park and other suburbs are complaining of the treatment received at the hands of a portrait company which does business under a weighty title in this city.

Agents have been scouring through the suburbs hunting up people who wish to accept "free" crayon portraits. Each canvasser carries a beautiful sample and makes voluble promises. Any person desiring a picture free of charge merely agrees to purchase a frame as set out in the contract. The sum of 25 cents is usually demanded to make the contract more binding. The frames range in value from "$3.50 upward." The people who make the contracts say that the prices of the frames are principally "upward," and that the chance of getting a cheap picture "for advertising purposes" is very small. Many of them turn over valuable photographs to the agent and have no chance of recovering them except by carrying out the terms of the contract and paying a big price for a doubtful portrait in a cheap frame. It is claimed that the representations made by the agent are not recognized at the "studio."

This method of giving away portraits and charging only for the frames has long afforded a rich harvest for some Chicago concerns, but it was supposed that the scheme would no longer work except in the rural districts. Some of the suburbanites, however, take to it with surprising readiness.—Chicago Daily News.

The above extract, from the Chicago Daily News, will interest many of our readers who are receiving every few days a printed circular offering similar inducements. Experience has led us to adopt the plan of consulting our own local dealers, who are always anxious to secure our patronage by honest dealing and low prices, before giving our trade to unknown parties.

A PLEASANT PARTY.

The private party at the Armory on Monday evening was given by Lelma Stewart, Bert Baker, Augustine Cummins, Percy Fitzsimmons and Levi Hayden. The supper was furnished by the Walla Walla girls. Dancing constituted the principal enjoyment of the evening. Twenty couples were present from the village and eight couples from Adrian. Misses Allie Saviers and Jennie Carlett of Toledo were also present. The hall was tastily decorated with curtains, flags and tapestry. The music was provided by George Knapp and Miss Jennie Root and was very nicely rendered. Dr. and Mrs. Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hicks and Mrs. Corey acted as chaperons. The party was given in honor of Misses Minnie Corey and Georgia Woodward and was highly enjoyed by all present.

A RARE INDIAN RELIC.

John O'Leary has an Indian relic in the family which he prizes very highly, being a beautiful moccasin that was once the property of the celebrated chief, Sitting Bull. Mrs. O'Leary's nephew, John Martin, of Fort Wayne, Ind., was in the new state of Washington last summer, serving as Deputy Marshal. While there he formed an acquaintance with many of the Indians, among them Jumping Bull, a brother of Sitting Bull. Upon Mr. Martin's return home last fall, he came through South Dakota and stopped purposely to see Sitting Bull, who received him in a very friendly manner. Upon taking his departure he requested the Chief to give him some little article to remember him by. Sitting Bull complied with the request by giving him a pair of his squaw's moccasins. One of these Mr. Martin sent to Mrs. O'Leary, and this is how Mrs. O'Leary happens to possess a moccasin once owned by Sitting Bull.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 12, 1891.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

How are you, Capt. Hayden? Let us shake.

The bad roads in the County make business dull in town.

Harry Dunn of Chicago was in town two or three days the first of the week.

Lt. Will McNair was home from Washington from Friday until Tuesday.

Have you ever used any of Tremaine's bacon? If not, try it. It is a prime article.

There was a tremendous rush for reserved seats at Adamson's last Saturday morning.

Try M. J. Tremaine's sugar cured hams and shoulders. They are the best in the market.

A branch of the order of the King's Daughters has been organized at Adrian, with thirteen members.

Henry Smith's paper mill is booming now. It is turning out more paper than ever since the repairs were completed.

A new No. 8 high arm Singer sewing machine for sale. Call at this office and see it. This is a chance for a big bargain.

Mrs. L. A. Chapman was suddenly called to Grand Rapids yesterday, by reason of the serious illness of her son Vincent's wife.

Dr. Snyder has taken 180 subscriptions for the ten-cent edition of Henry George's Free Trade and Protection, and he is still gathering them in.

Mr. C. M. Miner entertained a brother, who resides at Cleveland, the first of the week. He went to Cambridge Monday to visit friends there before returning home.

M. J. Tremaine, Manager of the Creamery, has put up this winter a large quantity of sugar cured hams and bacon. Those who have used them pronounce them prime.

It will be remembered that some son of Satan stole the carpet in the Tecumseh Episcopal church some time ago. Well, a new one has been provided, with a chain and padlock on it.—Adrian Times.

We have for sale a brand new Wheeler and Wilson New No. 9 sewing machine. This is considered the best machine now on the market. Call at once before the chance is gone.

The Kid band made their first public appearance Saturday evening and executed several pieces of music on the street. They have made most commendable progress and their playing was a surprise to all. Several of our citizens were treated to a serenade.

All persons who wish a ten cent copy of Henry George's Free Trade and Protection can leave their subscriptions at this office at any time, or they can procure blanks here and forward their own subscriptions. Tecumseh ought to furnish 500 subscriptions for this book.

The front-page cartoon in Puck of February 11th entitled, "All She Has to Hang On To," is a graphic representation of the desperate condition of the Republican party. The Blaine rock of reciprocity is her only hope of salvation, and she is clinging to that for dear life with what little strength is left in her feeble old body.

Teachers desiring examination questions for use at the end of the winter term of school, can obtain them by dropping a card to the Secretary, giving the No. of the district, name of township and your address, and the questions will be sent sealed at once.

Respectfully,
E. A. WILSON, Sec.

Hudson is possessed of a strange feature. In the very midst of its business blocks, Dr. E. M. Nix has erected one of handsomest residences in southern Michigan. It stands between two large brick blocks, with a printing office whanging away on one side, and one of the largest creameries in the State doing business on the other.

Married.—At the parsonage of the Reformed Church of Macon, by Rev. J. I. Gulick, Mr. Frank Gilmore, of Macon, to Miss M. Adele Freer, of Ridgeway, Mich. The young couple were at once conducted to their own home, prepared for them, and at once commenced the business of life as agriculturists. We anticipate for himself and his young bride the happiest of wedded life.

Pres.—J. T. Boyce.
Vice Pres.—H. Pennington.
Sec.—Sam Boyce.
Treas.—L. G. North.
Manager—C. W. Benedict.

E. L. Russell and S. W. Boyce were re-elected members of the board for a term of 3 years, and H. Pennington to fill vacancy for a term of 2 years.

Will you be my valentine?

Saturday will be a busy day for the postoffices.

Yesterday was Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent.

The Opera House will be occupied every evening next week.

Geo. W. Stacy, of East Buffalo, is spending the present week on the old farm at Newburg.

Mrs. Beach and Mrs Carr, of Chicago, were the guests of Mrs. Judge Stacy yesterday.

Regular meeting of the Chapter, R. A. M., next week Wednesday evening, February 18th.

The Sackett-Kinzie Company will hold the boards at the Opera House five nights next week.

An interesting service was held at the Baptist church last Sabbath evening, five new members receiving the rite of baptism.

Miss Louise Ladd, of Adrian, who has been passing a week among Tecumseh friends, returned home yesterday forenoon.

There will be a regular meeting of the Odd Fellows Lodge next Tuesday evening, for work in the 3d degree. A full attendance is desired.

Zack Cook has rented his Raisin farm to Rans. Haviland for a term of years. Mr. Cook should now take up his abode in Tecumseh village.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Hayden, of Milan, were guests of Wm. Hayden's family last Tuesday. They came out to attend the Lotus Glee Club Concert.

Supervisors James, of Tecumseh, Keyser, of Clinton, and Bey of Ogden, were in Adrian Monday and Tuesday, as a committee to revise the county fee book.

Miss May Farley has obtained a position as stenographer and typewriter in a business office at Youngstown, Ohio, and will leave for that city next Saturday.

Mrs. Judge Stacy and L. Loana Stacy were in Adrian last Friday and Saturday, the object of their visit being to attend the funeral obsequies of the late Dr. Kimball.

Samuel Satterthwaite, of Raisin, was bitten in the face by a vicious colt last Friday. Luckily his injury is not dangerous, but it is quite serious, and will confine him to the house for some time.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church will convene for the regular monthly tea meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 18th. Business meeting at 4 p.m. Supper served from 5:30 till 6:30 by Mrs. Wm. Heck's committee.

Representative Shull has introduced a bill in the House providing that any person who shall wilfully or maliciously give libelous information to a newspaper shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by $100 fine, or 90 days in jail, or both.

The sudden death of Mrs. A. D. Hall last Sunday cast a gloom over the community. She was a woman of more than ordinary force of character, and was very highly esteemed. The funeral obsequies, held yesterday afternoon, were very largely attended. A fitting memorial sketch appears elsewhere in this issue.

The Governor's levee tendered by the Detroit Light Guard, on Tuesday evening, was a brilliant affair. It was the big social event of the season in that city. Among the distinguished guests present were Gen. Miles, ex-Govs. Feich and Begole, ex-Gov. Fairchild, of Wisconsin, and several local celebrities. The sixth levee was a stunning success.

The W. C. T. U. chicken pie supper on Thursday evening, Jan. 29th, was a success, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather. Fifteen dollars were added to the treasury and three new members to the society, which numbers over fifty, besides eleven honorary members, officers, superintendents, etc. Members are thoroughly organized to work unitedly for the overthrow of the saloon curse and for the relief of the sick, poor and poverty stricken, made so principally by this vampire.

Commencing with Monday evening, Feb. 16th, the Sackett-Kinzie Co, will appear at the Opera House for five nights, with change of play nightly. It is one of the best troupes on the road, and is favorably spoken of by the press wherever it has been. They play the latest sensational dramas written, and agree to refund the admission fee to any person who is not satisfied with the performances. On Monday evening "City Life" will be given. If you go once, you will go again.

The first instalment of "Some Familiar Letters by Horace Greeley" will be a feature of the March number of Lippincott's Magazine. This is a remarkable series of letters written by Horace Greeley to an intimate friend, which, by revealing the inherent nobility of Greeley's nature, will tend to remove many unfounded prejudices. The letters cover the later and most interesting period of Greeley's life, the period immediately preceding and during his great political campaign.

Dr. North will leave to-morrow afternoon for Groton, N. Y., and will return in five or six days.

Dr. J. F. Jenkins received this morning a sample of Prof. Koch's lymph, the first that has been received in Tecumseh.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Pardington of Brooklyn, N. Y., are spending the present week with Tecumseh friends.

Prof. A. F. Clark of Saline is endeavoring to organise a class in vocal music here. Prof. Clark is a superior teacher and he ought to work up a fine class in Tecumseh.

A special convocation of the Sunday School workers of Eastern Michigan will be held at the Woodward Ave. Baptist Church Feb. 16, 17 and 18. Mrs. Slayton and perhaps others will represent Tecumseh at this meeting.

The Loyal Legion meetings will be held at Mrs. Jennie Hall's, on Chicago street, every two weeks until further notice. A good program will be given on Feb. 14th. Mr. Babbitt will address the young people at that time.

The Democratic electors of the Township of Tecumseh are requested to meet at the Council rooms in the village of Tecumseh, on Saturday, Feb. 14th, at 3 o'clock, p. m., to elect delegates to the County Convention that meets at Adrian Feb. 19.

BY ORDER OF TOWNSHIP COM.

THE LOTUS GLEE CLUB.

The concert given by the Lotus Glee Club last Tuesday evening was a musical entertainment of rare merit. Of the quartette itself every member is a musical artist. Their solos showed voices of the highest culture and their choruses evinced a wonderful training in harmony. The recitals by Miss Minnie Marshall were exquisite, and she captivated the audience completely. Nearly every number on the program was favored with an encore and the club was very generous as well as decidedly happy in their responses. The program as rendered was fully twice as long as the printer made it and the final serenade came only too soon to satisfy the auditors. At half past seven the prospect seemed good for an illustration of the "dark continent," but the surplus water was finally pumped out of the machine and the gas turned on. Barring this little faux pas, all went merrily. The concert itself was one of the finest musical programs ever presented to a Tecumseh audience.

The latest discovered metal, lighter than hard wood and stronger than steel. The Michigan Stove Co., after a series of scientific experiments, are enabled to make an admixture of this wonderful metal with their regular high grade iron, with the result of producing smooth castings, additional strength, and preventing cracking; thereby rendering stoves made of this admixture more durable than WROUGHT IRON or STEEL. The "GARLAND," which are the product of this Co., are the only stoves made having that advantage. Raum Is Not Guilty

Say Republicans of the Committee.

DEMOCRATS WILL SUBMIT A MINORITY REPORT.

Bradley Tanner Is the Only Employe of Raum's Office Who Was in the Refrigerator, and He Didn't Get Very Cold—Other Washington News.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—The special committee of the House that investigated the charges against General Raum, the commissioner of pensions, has completed its report of the inquiry and Representative Morrill, the chairman of the committee, will submit it to the House Saturday. The report was agreed to by the three Republican members of the committee and a minority report will be signed by the Democratic members of the committee.

In reviewing the charge that General Raum was selling worthless stock in a refrigerator company to employes in the pension office and that he had promoted them in consideration of their investment, the report says, there was an entire absence of any evidence showing or tending to show that any refrigerator stock had ever been offered for sale or purchased by any of the employes of the pension office, or that there was any stock held by any one for the benefit of the employes or any of their families, the only exception claimed being Bradley Tanner. The committee says that Mr. Tanner (who is General Raum's private secretary) spent four days in the company's employ, and wrote a few letters for them while he was on his regular yearly leave of absence, but that he was never interested in the Universal Refrigerator company, directly or indirectly, and that his promotion was due to commissioner Tanner. There is no evidence, the report says, to show that Commissioner Raum has ever devoted any of the business hours of the office to matters relating to the refrigerator company.

In reference to the charge that George E. Lemon, a pension attorney of this city had been granted special favors by the commissioner in his official capacity because of notes endorsed for Mr. Raum by Lemon, the committee state it ascertained that Mr. Lemon did endorse two of Mr. Raum's notes amounting to $12,000—not $25,000 as charged—that Mr. Raum had been known by Mr. Lemon for twenty-five years and was regarded by him as perfectly responsible, and that Mr. Raum voluntarily gave Mr. Lemon stock in a Virginia mine to the par value of $100,000 as security for the payment of the notes. Report says that at the time of the endorsement, Mr. Lemon had not even an intimation that the completed files order was contemplated.

After Pension Lawyers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Assistant Secretary Bussey has written a letter to the commissioner of pensions calling attention to circulars distributed among pensioners and claimants by pension attorneys, which he characterizes as "Unprofessional and Illegitimate Methods." The chief purpose of these circulars, Mr. Bussey says, is to create dissatisfaction among claimants with the adjudication of their claims by the proper officers of the department and to awaken in them groundless expectations of increased allowances, the attorneys evident object, he says, being to secure compensation for valueless services, or to convert the prosecution of claims into a mere experiment based upon the remotest chances of success—a mere lottery in the practice. Their circulars generally inform pensioners that they are drawing small pensions which they can have increased.

The assistant secretary says that allurements held out by these attorneys to the soldiers are based upon false pretenses, tending to mislead honest but uninformed applicants, and at the same time are calculated to arouse prejudices among soldiers against the legitimate work of the pension bureau, which follow the inevitable disappointment to which they are exposed by irresponsible agents. He directs the commissioner of pensions hereafter to notify all pension attorneys to send all circulars used by them to the pension office and if any of them contain illegal enticements, they are to be reported to the Secretary of the Interior for disbarment.

The Spinner Memorial.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The ladies "Spinner Memorial association," after electing officers, discussed for a while the form which the memorial shall take—whether a hospital or a statue. There was a great diversity of opinion expressed at the meeting, but finally, without reaching a conclusion, it was decided to go ahead and raise a fund first, and in the meantime gather from contributors to it their views as to the most suitable form for the memorial.

Cannon to Succeed Windom.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—A report is current that Representative Cannon is going to be secretary of the treasury. Mr. Cannon has not been informed of it, and a matter of fact, the president has not got to the point where a choice can be made. The Illinois representative, however, is much more of a probability for Secretary Windom's successor than is generally supposed.

DINGLEY'S DEVICE

To Push Along the Elections Bill From the House.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The House spent the morning on the sundry civil bill. Mr. Dingley introduced the following amendment to the rules: "That it shall be in order to move to amend a general appropriation bill with any bill that has passed the House and been sent to the Senate and has not been returned from the Senate favorably, or adversely acted upon by that body within six months from the time of the passage of the bill by the House." This is looked upon as relating especially to the election bill.

IS SECRETARY NOBLE'S ASTONISHING STATEMENT.

The Pow-wow at Washington Between the Sioux Delegation and Representatives of a Government Notable in Both Treaty Making and Treaty Breaking.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Secretary Noble had a long pow wow with the Sioux Indian delegation at the interior department about the recent Pine Ridge troubles. Secretary Proctor was also present. John Grass, American Horse, and Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Horses talked. Secretary Noble made a short address to the Indians through the Rev. C. Cook, of the Pine Ridge agency, who acted as interpreter. The secretary reminded the Indians at the outset that the government kept its promises, made at the time of the agreement with the Sioux and had listened to their complaints. There had been serious trouble since and now they had come again to see the Great Father, who the secretary assured them wanted to do anything he could to make them contented. He admonished them to tell short stories, and then he would listen to all.

John Grass was the first and principal speaker. He spoke in a very deliberate manner, and his interpreter's words were closely listened to. He attributed the recent trouble among these Indians to the Messiah craze. They did not want to be driven into a wilder life on account of this trouble and had come for instruction and the co-operation of the Great Father. He said promises had been made to them, only to be broken. He urged the secretary hereafter to appoint the young Indians to the minor positions at the agency. He did not want any military authority at Standing Rock. The Indians were satisfied that the agents were honest, and wished civil officers to have charge of Indian affairs.

American Horse was the next speaker. He said that it would be two or three months before a satisfactory settlement of the trouble was reached. His people had been anxious to follow in the road the Great Father had marked out, but the recent trouble had thrown them back fifteen years. He knew that it was the intention of the government to civilize, them, but the government had made mistakes and civilization would be impossible until these mistakes were corrected. The government, American House said, should appoint Indians as clerks, etc., at the various agencies, and the Indians should have the right to name the agents or be given a voice in their selection, and the government could not confer a great favor upon them by appointing intelligent Indians to minor places.

High Hawk and Hollow Horn Bear made brief remarks. Medicine Bull, the oldest Indian in the delegation, said his hand was clean from the blood of the late fight. He spoke feelingly for his posterity and the children of other Indians.

FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT

PASSENGER COACH ROLLS DOWN FIFTY FOOT EMBANKMENT.

Conductor Fatally, and Three Other Passengers Seriously Injured.

BELLAIRE, O., Feb. 7.—A frightful accident occurred on the Bellaire, Zanesville & Cincinnati railway, in which five or six passengers were badly crippled and a conductor will lose his life. A coach on a local train overturned and, rolling fifty feet down an embankment, was completely demolished. George Robinson and wife had their ribs, and three men had their arms and legs broken. William Swain, conductor, was badly burned and cut with glass from the broken windows.

INTO A SHAPELESS MASS.

AKRON, O., Feb. 9.—Clarence, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Kenninger, met a horrible death here, probably the most frightful in the history of Akron calamities. Besides the breaking of his back and neck all of the main bones of the body were fractured. In his childish glee he hung to the rear end of a farmer's wagon that was heavily laden with hay; suspending himself from the back by his hands, he braced his feet against the axle. His feet must have slipped, and in attempting to gain another hold on the axle his feet were drawn between two spokes and the body was carried part way around the inside of the hub, until it was crushed in between the wheel and the rack. He was killed instantly and never even gave a cry. When first seen by the bystanders the body was forced into an almost unrecognizable mass, and blood flowed freely from nose, eyes and ears.

BUT HE DIDN'T DIE.

And Now Will Have to Answer for Murder.

OMAHA, NEB., Feb. 9.—A young insurance agent, H. M. Rodgers, who came here from Chicago last week attempted suicide Sunday after writing a letter addressed to the United States Mutual Life Insuarnce company, of New York, confessing the murder of his sweetheart last summer near Mercer, Pa. He did not mention names, but admitted having assumed the name by which he was known. When he realized that he would live he made an effort to secure the letter, but the authorities had been apprised and secured the confession and took charge of Rodgers. Mercer authorities have been wired. He is intelligent and of good address.

SCORE ONE FOR LYMPH.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 8.—Mr. A. W. Walters, chief clerk of the local freight office of the Iron Mountain railroad, who entered the Missouri Pacific hospital January 21, a consumptive, left that institution last evening cured. All the known tests fail to reveal the slightest trace of consumption or tuberculosis of the lungs, and as far as medical experts are able to ascertain, Koch's lymph has performed the wonderful cure. Walters was a consumptive for more than a year.

As From the Dead.

Three Miners are Rescued at Nanticoke,

AFTER BEING SHUT IN BY FLOOD SINCE WEDNESDAY.

They are Weak but Still Alive—How the Accident Happened and How They Escaped Death.

PITTSBURG, PA., Feb. 6.—A special from White Haven, this state, says a dreadful disaster has occurred there, at mine known as Slope No. 8, near there, and seventeen men at work in the mine were drowned.

Following is a list of those who lost their lives: Edward Gallagher, married, miner; Henry Ball, married, miner; Jas. Griffith, married, miner; Joseph Matuscowitz, Polander, married, miner; Lawrence Reed, married, miner; Wasil Finko, Hungarian, single, miner; Joseph Orsok, single, miner; Bernard McCloskey, single, miner; Patrick Kelley, Thomas Jake, John Barnes, James Balack, Michael Smith, Joseph Ward, Samuel Porter and Mike Polosh, all laborers. It will take ten days before the mine can be pumped clear and the bodies recovered.

NANTICOKE, PA., Feb. 9.—Three men returned to earth this morning as from the grave. They are John W. Riner, William Crogle and Michael Shelants, miners in the employ of the Susquehanna coal company. Wednesday last these men with others, were working in No. 3 colliery of the old Harvey workings, about a mile from this city. They were driving the dip from the main tunnel to the cross heading. In doing this they came near the old working which had been abandoned and which was used as a reservoir for holding mine drainage. This they inspected and in a moment a pick was crashed through the old board barricade and the water was let loose. It came in a tremendous wave, filling the gangway full, and swept the men before it. When the men reached the surface they found that three of their companions were missing. Rescue parties at once began to search for them in the hope that they would be found in some of the dry tunnels of the mine, and have worked day and night since. This morning they were taken out alive, but very weak.

SCATTERED HIS BRAINS.

WILMINGTON, PA., Feb. 7.—The boiler of an oil well being drilled on the Hamilton farm exploded at 11:30 in the morning, killing Fred Johnston instantly and scattering his brains and skull several rods around. The engine was torn down and pieces of the boiler thrown 500 feet. Johnston had been to the boiler and turned around when the explosion occurred, cutting off the entire back part of his head. Three men near the hole had remarkable escapes, not receiving any injuries, although only about fifteen feet from Johnston. One piece of the boiler weighing two tons was carried 500 feet up over a hill, tearing great steep furrows in the ground.

FIVE HUNDRED MEN

READING, PA., Feb. 7.—The large bolt and nut works of J. H. Steinbergh & Son was completely destroyed by fire. The fire originated in the forging department and quickly spread to the adjoining buildings including the machine shop, threading department, warehouse and office, all of which were burned to the ground. The loss is estimated at from $300,000 to $350,000, with an insurance of probably $250,000. The firm employed 550 men and boys who will be thrown out of employment. It is probable that the works will be rebuilt at once. Many valuable patterns were destroyed and a member of the firm says they cannot be replaced.

HE WAS LYNCHED.

Something of the Way They Do Down in Texas.

SAN ANGLO, TEX., Feb. 8.—Jesus Salcida, a Mexican, recently from Fort Stockton, was found dead hanging to a tree near Knickerbocker, thirty miles south of here, Saturday morning. On Wednesday night he was at a friend's house in Knickerbocker and three mounted white men stepped up and requested him to go down the road with them a short distance. That was the last seen of him alive. There is no clue as to the identity of the perpetrators, nor is there any cause known for the lynching.

INVENTIVE GENIUS

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—An ingenius invention by which it is proposed to transport visitors to the world's fair to the different buildings in the exposition is now on exhibition here. It consists of a railway of moving platforms operated by electricity, the mechanical principle applied being that of obtaining two motions from a revolution of one wheel. Four platforms moving at different rates of speed, it is claimed, will carry 4,480 seated passengers, every hour any distance. It is also proposed to utilize the invention in surburban traffic.

MURDER EXPOSED.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 8.—Mrs. Dr. Louise Holson, of No. 2315 Market street, and George Dashman, clerk in a shoe store, were arrested last evening and placed in jail charged with manslaughter in procuring an abortion on Miss Laura Fitts, of No. 2806 Morgan street. The operation was performed last Wednesday night and the young lady died the following morning. Dashman is married and moved in good society.

Cut His Throat With a Razor.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Feb. 7.—Dail M. Davidson, an advertising solicitor for the Daily American, committed suicide at his room on North Vine street, by severing his jugular vein with a razor. When found he had been dead some time, and was lying with his head in a small tub, which he had placed to catch the blood. Davidson was just recovering from a big spree. Mr. Davidson came to this city about five months ago from Louisville, Kentucky.

EUPEPSY.

PILES, PILES, PILES.

Loose's Red Clover Pile Remedy, is a positive specific for all forms of the disease. Bleeding, Itching, Ulcerated and Protruding Piles. —Price 50 c. For sale by J. J. Orr.

WHAT IS SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CARLILE, Nauright, N. J.

A NEW POLITICAL PARTY.

The Confederation of Industrial Organizations.

On Friday of last week the Confederation of Industrial Organizations was formally named and adopted a list of demands, and will now proceed in the work of educating the laboring masses in the principles of political economy as they are understood by the Farmers' Alliance, white and colored; the Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association, the Knights of Labor and the Citizens' Alliance, the organizations which up to this time are in the Confederation. The meeting was held at one of the parlors of the Kenmore House, in Washington, and delegates from all the organizations above named were present. T. L. Gantt, the secretary, had been suddenly called home, and J. J. Rogers, of the colored Alliance, took his place. Colonel L. F. Livingston, from the committee on business, made a report suggesting that the first thing to be done was the adoption of a list of demands, and this was done with the following result:

First—We demand the abolition of national banks as banks of issue, and as a substitute for national bank notes we demand that legal tender treasury notes be issued in sufficient volume to transact the business of the country without damage or especial advantage to any class or calling, such notes to be legal tender in payment of all debts public and private; and such notes, when demanded by the people, shall be loaned to them at not more than two per cent. per annum upon non-perishable products as indicated in the sub-treasury plan, and also upon real estate with proper limitation upon the quantity of land and amount of money.

Second—We demand a free and unlimited coinage of silver.

Third—We demand the passage of laws prohibiting alien ownership of land, and that Congress take prompt action to devise some plan to obtain all lands now held by railroads and other corporations in excess of such as are actually used and needed by them be reclaimed by the Government and held for actual settlers only.

Fourth—Believing in the doctrine of equal rights to all and special privileges to none, we demand that taxation—national, State or municipal—shall not be used to build up one interest or class at the expense of another.

Fifth—We demand all revenues—national, State, or county—shall be limited to the necessary expenses of the Government, economically and honestly administered.

Sixth—We demand a just and equitable system of graduated taxation on incomes.

Seventh—We demand that the most rigid, honest and just State and national control and supervision of the means of public communication and transportation, and if this control and supervision does not remove the abuses now existing, we demand the government ownership of such means of communication and transportation.

Eighth—We demand that the Congress of the United States submit an amendment to the Constitution providing for the election of United States Senators by the direct vote of the people of each State; also the President and Vice-President by a popular vote.

Ninth—We demand that in each State a system shall be provided and faithfully executed which will insure an honest and accurate registration of all voters; a free, fair, secret and official ballot, and an honest, public count; and demand that each State Legislature shall make it a felony for any improper interference with the exercise of the registration, ballot or count.

After adopting the platform the committee proceeded to name the new organization the Confederation of Industrial Oganizations and elected Ben Terrell, of the Farmers' Alliance, president, and John W. Hayes, general secretary and treasurer of the Knights of Labor, secretary and treasurer. Messrs. Ben Terrell, A. W. Wright and J. J. Rogers were elected a committee on by-laws: President L. L. Polk, of the National Farmers' Alliance, was given the privilege of the floor and made a speech, in which he fully indorsed the list of demands.

It was decided to form a national committee, which will consist of one member from each organization in every State in which they are organized, and a national chairman for that committee. It will be the duty of this national committee to decide upon the details of the best way to carry on the work of organization and education on the lines of the list of demands given above.

On Saturday the Confederation of Industrial Organizations finished its work and adjourned until February 22, 1892, when a general meeting of delegates will be held to decide definitely what action shall be taken in order to carry out the demands which have been formulated as the platform of the confederation. The delegates to this convention will be elected distinctly with a view to deciding whether or not a third party is necessary. It was decided to form an executive committee consisting of the chairman of the executive committees of the various organizations and the chairman of the confederation. This will make the executive committee consist of Dr. C. W. Macune, of the National Farmers' Alliance; General Master Workman T. V. Powderly, of the Knights of Labor; R. M. Humphrey of the Colored Farmers' National Alliance; Ralph Beaumont, of the Citizens' Alliance, and Ben Terrell, chairman of confederation.

DO POOR CROPS HELP US?

Rosy Outlook for the Farmer as Seen by Uncle Jerry Rusk—Mr. Statistician Dodge Reports Short Crops—Do the Farmers Think Short Crops Mean Prosperity?

Secretary Rusk, of the department of agriculture, and Mr. J. R. Dodge, the statistician of the department, ought to "get together." It is really a pity that two such eminent protectionists should take such contradictory views of the agricultural condition of the country.

The secretary has recently issued his second annual report, and at about the same time Mr. Statistician Dodge made a report on the yield of crops per acre. The two gentlemen take strongly divergent views as to the present agricultural situation. The secretary—Uncle Jerry, as everybody calls the good old gentleman—congratulates the president and the country upon the generally improved outlook in agricultural matters. He makes a reference to the agricultural depression of 1889, when the Harrison administration went into office, and then he professes to find a vast improvement at the present time, with a still brighter outlook for the future.

He sanguinely announces that "the cloud which seemed to rest gloomily upon American agriculture has been lightened, while the wise, economic legislation already secured holds out still brighter promise for the future." It is the so called "farmer's tariff" which makes Uncle Jerry happy and hopeful. His cheerful outlook into the future is caused solely by the existing higher prices for many farm products. He gives a comparative table, showing the increase in price of a number of farm products, and has the delightful simplicity of mind to attribute such increase largely to the higher tariff rates recommended by him in a previous report. How refreshing this "simple childlike faith!"

But why are those prices higher? Mr. Statistician Dodge supplies the reason, and strangely enough he, though a rabid protectionist, does not attribute these higher prices to the influence of McKinley's higher duties on farm products—"tin whistle" duties, as Ben Butterworth called them. On the very first page of the report on the average yield of crops per acre it is stated that the average yield of corn for 1890 was the lowest ever reported, except the crop of 1881, and that the average yield of 1889, with which he compares it, was nearly one-half larger. The statistician finds, too, that the crop failure for 1890 was principally "in the corn surplus states." The causes of this failure were many. In one county the crop has suffered "all possible drawbacks;" in another are "half filled ears, soft and unmerchantable;" in another, "damaged by excessive rains;" elsewhere, "by midsummer drought;" elsewhere, "by frost;" elsewhere, "by worms;" here, "by hot winds;" there, "by hailstorms in August," etc., for almost five dreary pages.

All these disasters naturally resulted in a short crop. The crop of 1889 was over 2,000,000,000 bushels, and that of 1890 was nearly 500,000,000 less. This shortness of crop resulted in higher prices, and it is this fact that makes Uncle Jerry happy. But what do the farmers think? Do they prefer to work hard all summer and make very poor crops, the surplus of which they may sell at higher prices, or to produce a large crop with the same labor, and sell their large surplus at lower prices?

By far the largest part of our corn is consumed on the farm, and so far as this portion of the west is concerned higher prices avail nothing. On the contrary, many farmers are themselves at this time buyers of corn. Many Illinois farmers whose corn crop failed are said to be buying corn to feed their stock.

Uncle Jerry's hopefulness for better times for the farmers, owing to the "wise economic legislation already secured," is without any foundation whatever so far as corn is concerned. During the fiscal year 1890 we imported just 1,626 bushels all told, while we exported 101,000,000 bushels. The old duty was 10 cents a bushel; the McKinley duty is 15 cents. A duty of 1 cent or $1 a bushel would be equally worthless to our farmers, for no possible duty on corn can raise the price with us.

Statistician Dodge reports that the potato crop yielded the lowest average, with two exceptions, ever reported. He says, also, that the acreage planted in potatoes was small in comparison with other years. These two facts, low acreage and short crops, the statistician thinks, "amply warrant the advance in prices now ruling in all the markets." We produce about 200,000,000 bushels of potatoes in average years, and our imports in ordinary years are about 2,000,000 bushels—or one bushel imported for 100 that we raise. In years more favorable to our growers, however, our imports sink to less than 1,000,000 bushels. In 1889 only 471,000 bushels came in.

In ordinary years, therefore, the McKinley duty of twenty-five cents a bushel can have no appreciable effect on the home price. It is only in a year of scarcity, like the present one, that the duty becomes protective and lays its burden upon the consumer. This burden of the potato tax, however, rests partly upon the farmers themselves, for a large part of the potatoes we import are used for seed, the potatoes grown in the colder regions of Canada being preferable to our own, as they mature more rapidly.

Corn and potatoes are but samples of the general character of the duties in the so called "agricultural schedule." Through the entire schedule runs the manifest intention to deceive the farmer, to give him a stone when he asks for bread. Any farmer of the most ordinary intelligence can see that as soon as the facts are stated to him.

MEXICAN AND McKINLEY TARIFFS.

Comparative Duties on Live Animals in Mexico and the United States.

In the so called "farmers' tariff" in the McKinley law a duty of $30 a head is levied on horses. Mexican ponies are worth in Mexico about $10 each, which makes the duty equal to 300 per cent. ad valorem. This is done under the pretense of helping our farmers, yet it is principally the farmers themselves who buy these mustangs.

On the New Mexican frontier, however, the people have learned a new way to evade the McKinley duty and get their prices. They buy them in Mexico, and drive them across into New Mexico, where of course they are seized by the ever vigilant custom house officers. The mustangs are then sold at auction, and are bought up by their owners at about the market price of $10 each. In this way the ranchmen get their ponies for only two prices instead of four, as McKinley would have them do.

We boast of our civilization, and are inclined to look down upon the Mexican people as far below us in the scale of progress, yet we make our people pay $30 apiece extra for $10 mustangs, while the Mexican government makes its people pay only $3 apiece as duty on all the horses and mules we sell them, however fine they may be.

The difference between the Mexican and the McKinley ideas of tariffs may be seen from the following figures of duties on live animals:

	Mexican Duty.	McKinley Duty.
Sheep	$0 35	$1 50
Lambs	0 05
Hogs	2 25	1 50
Cattle	3 00	10 00
Mules	2 00	30 00
Horses	2 00

McKinley doubtless thought he was doing ourselves a great deal of good and the Mexicans much harm by putting a duty on silver lead ores, but the result seems to have been precisely the opposite. The Mexican minister to Washington says: "The exclusion of ores has, so far, been advantageous to us, because several reduction works are being built in Mexico for the treatment of the same, which used to be done in the United States when crude ores came in free of duty in the shape of raw material. Such ores as cannot be worked profitably in Mexico will be sent to Europe for treatment since the doors of the United States have been shut to us."

These ores, too, were made dutiable under the pretense of helping our own people; but where is the gain to us? Our miners have been compelled to pay higher charges for smelting; the price of lead has been made higher, and has fluctuated greatly since the McKinley bill was put on. Many lead using industries have been injured by the higher prices as well as by the fluctuations in prices. The Mexicans are now shipping their lead through our territory to Europe, where it is smelted or resmelted, and some of it finds its way back into this country to pay two cents a pound duty. Tariff obstructions thus cause our people needless expense, and nobody is benefited except a handful of carbonate lead mine owners in Colorado.

The Level of Wages.

The fifth annual report of Carroll D. Wright, United States commissioner of labor, is devoted entirely to railroad labor. The differences between the wages of men doing the same work in different parts of the United States are shown to be very great. The following table exhibits these differences in detail:

AVERAGE DAILY RATE OF WAGES.

	New England.	New York.	Georgia.	Ohio.
Brakemen	$1 80	$1 73	$1 26	$1 86½
Conductors	2 82	2 54	2 58½	2 61½
Engineers	3 32½	3 15	2 91	3 07½
Firemen	1 89	1 72	1 29½	1 79½
Laborers	1 51	1 23½	88	1 21½
Tel. operators	1 42½	1 34½	1 50½	1 47
Switchmen	1 78	1 27	1 11	1 53½

	Texas.	Northwest States.	Pacific States.	Average.
Brakemen	$1 95	$1 75½	$1 96	$1 78
Conductors	2 92½	2 85½	3 00	2 63
Engineers	3 55	2 79½	....	3 22½
Firemen	2 04	1 90½	....	1 79½
Laborers	1 21	1 30	1 87½	1 26
Tel. operators	1 67½	1 38½	2 09½	1 43½
Switchmen	2 30½	2 15½	2 20	1 50½

These figures are very important in their bearing upon the tariff question. The protectionists assert, in season and out of season, that if it were not for the tariff wages with us would at once sink to the European level. In order to make good that claim they ought first to explain why wages do not sink to the same level in all parts of our own country.

The firemen on railroads, for example, do precisely the same kind of work in all parts of the country, yet they earn $2.04 in Texas and only $1.29½ in Georgia. Engineers earn $3.55 in Texas and only $2.79½ in the northwestern states. Ohio pays its brakemen 6½ cents a day more than New England does, but New England pays its switchmen 29½ cents more than Ohio. Engineers in New York get 35½ cents a day more than in the northwestern states, but switchmen are paid 88½ cents more in the northwest than in New York.

The same differences and cross differences run through the whole table. Why do not wages sink to the same level here in our own country? What right have the protectionists to assume that our wages would sink to the European level if it were not for the tariff?

Helping Labor.

The high McKinley duties were professedly imposed to help labor. Few cases, if any, have been made public where wages have been raised since Oct. 6. But there are many cases where wages have been reduced. The wages of potters in Trenton, N. J., and in Ohio have been reduced. In Paterson, N. J., the wages of silk weavers have been reduced, and the weavers went on a strike. The wages of cotton weavers at several points in Rhode Island have been reduced. In the iron industry a reduction of the wages of the puddlers at Pottstown, Pa., has been reported, and 1,000 workmen in the rolling stock mills at Ormiston, Ala., have struck because their wages were not paid at all. At Pittsburg, Pa., the Oliver iron and steel mills have shut down and thrown 8,000 workmen out of employment.

Is protection helping labor?

PRONOUNCED HOPELESS, YET SAVED.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my Lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's Drugstore, regular size, 50c and $1.00.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many customers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, Knightstown Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction." Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

ONE DOLLAR WELL INVESTED.

If you have bad breath, constipation, pain in the small of the back, discolored skin, nervousness, or dizziness your only wise course is to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. It will cleanse the blood of all impurities, regulates the Kidneys and Liver, and thus restore a healthy glow to your checks again. All druggists; one dollar a bottle.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, tetter, chappep hands, chilblains corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box for sale by John J. Orr.

BRONCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skillful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the consoler of the afflicted.'"—Jaime Rufus Vidal, San Cristobel, San Domingo.

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

Hon. L. H. Salsbury of Adrian was in town Tuesday.

A. F. Freeman of Manchester was here Wednesday.

David Halpin moved into the Jacobs house last Thursday.

W. O. Silvers made a trip to Adrian the first of the week.

Mrs. Mary Codling returned from Manchester last Friday.

C. D. Keyes returned from Sand Lake this week Monday.

W. D. VanTuyle has purchased the Kies property, east of the Lancaster House.

Miss Myrtle Shoards [illegible] fr the postoffice this week on account of sickness.

Mrs. Charles Johnston and daughter Mina, of Detroit, came last Friday for a few days' visit.

W. S. Kimball attended the concert at Tecumseh Tuesday night and took the train from there for Chicago.

George R. Brown is thinking strongly of becoming a citizen of Clinton, and is looking for a suitable house.

Bert Roff, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, arrived here unexpectedly last Monday. He will remain until next week.

Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Tuttle gave a very pleasant progressive pedro party last Friday evening. About 40 were present.

Rev. Reeves held services Wednesday at 10:30, appropriate for the day. The full Morning Prayer and Litany were read.

Mr. Wright of Chicago, who has been a guest at the home of Mrs. E. D. Fenn in Bridgewater, returned to Chicago Monday.

Mr. Robert Clark and Miss Jessie Clark, of Highland, visited friends here last week. They are guests at Will Dewey's in Bridgewater this week.

Mrs. James Hause left here last Friday for a visit with friends in Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor and Saline. She expects to return the latter part of this week.

It is generally believed that a stock of dry goods will soon be placed in E. R. Smith's block. We hope it is true for Clinton and vicinity is surely able to support two good dry goods stores.

The Catholic Society give a supper and entertainment at the Town Hall on St. Patrick's Day. At that time people will be given an opportunity to cast their vote (and a nickel) for their favorite of five young ladies. The one receiving the most votes will be presented with a gold watch.

The ladies of the M. E. Society feel pleased with the result of their efforts in arranging the entertainment for last Saturday evening. The program was an especially good one, and the principal feature, "The Mistletoe Bough," was one of the finest things that amateurs have ever placed upon this stage. Most of the costumes were elegant and the parts were well cast and ably sustained.

AUCTION SALE.

R. C. Paine, will sell at auction at his residence, one and one-half miles south of Ousted, Friday, Feb. 13th. 1891. THE BUCKEYE STATE.

News Gathered by Wire and Mail for Hasty Readers.

MASSILON, O., Feb. 6.—By a rear end collision on the Cleveland, Lorain and Wheeling road C. W. Lainman was killed and John McConnell, a brakeman, so badly hurt that he cannot live.

Captured a New York Crook.

DELAWARE, O., Feb. 7.—Officer Lynch has arrested Frank Burrows in a box car in the East Side, as answering the description of a man wanted at Warsaw, Wyoming county, New York, for breaking jail last August and assaulting an officer. Burrows is now in the county jail here awaiting the New York authorities.

A Glass Trust.

FINDLAY, O., Feb. 9.—Five table glass houses in Pittsburg, one in Wheeling, one in Fostoria and one in Findlay, have joined in an application for a charter for a new trust combination to be known as the United States company with a capital of $1,000,000, though it is said larger sums are involved. This is the beginning of a combine that will soon embrace all the table glassware factories in the country.

Women on a Strike.

FINDLAY, O., Feb. 7.—Fifty women employed in Bell Brothers' pottery works went on a strike this morning, because the management refused to treat with male employees of the works who have been out since the first of the year. The entire factory is now closed down, and nearly two hundred persons are out on the strike, because of a reduction in the wage schedule.

ENRAGED BURGLARS

Get No Money But Let $8,000 Worth of Wine Run to Waste.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 8.—Burglars Friday night broke into Edward Feys wholesale wine house on Colorado avenue. Maddened at getting no money they allowed four thousand gallons of wine, worth eight thousand dollars, to run into the cellar.

Wrestling Match at Lancaster.

LANCASTER, O., Feb. 9.—Otto Ronaldo, of California, and Sebastian Miller, the German heavy-weight wrestlers, engaged in a three-bout match at the opera house. Ronaldo took the first bout in twelve minutes, downing his man with the double-nelson. Miller took the second bout in ten minutes and third in nine minutes. Miller had the advantage of about ten pounds in weight.

Wrecked a Saloon.

FINDLAY, O., Feb. 7.—Friday a Leipsic man opened a saloon in the village of Benton Ridge, ten miles west of this city. Saturday morning he was greatly surprised to find that during the night the saloon had been visited and completely wrecked. All the liquors had been poured out, and the furniture broken. All the citizens plead innocence. The community is strongly temperance, and a saloon will not be tolerated. The saloon man says that he will try it again.

A Babe Scalded.

WESTERVILLE, O., Feb. 7.—A horrible accident occurred at the farm of Ed Wilcox, about three miles north of here, late yesterday afternoon. The family were heating some water on the stove, and had just filled a barrel with scalding hot fluid, when the barrel tipped over and the seething mass was thrown upon Wilcox's three months old babe, who was sleeping in a cradle near the fire. The child was so horribly scalded that he lived but a short time, and died in the most awful agony.

Dead and Unidentified.

EATON, O., Feb. 9.—Three young men boarded a south-bound freight train at Eaton about 3 o'clock p. m. Upon being discovered by the train hands they tried to make their escape by jumping off the train while it was going at a very fast rate. Two of them succeeded in alighting without any trouble, but one of the three slipped and fell under the train, which passed over his right shoulder, almost severing his right arm. He was conveyed to the undertaker, Mr. J. M. Lefferson, where the coroner held an inquest. The two boys who were fortunate in making their escape have not been found, and the name of the deceased is unknown and there is nothing about his clothing to show his identity. They were beating their way on the train.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 7.—At a meeting of the Loyal Legion General Jacob D. Cox addressed the commandery. He referred to the letter that had been given publicity of late written by the Confederate general, C. Kirby Smith, and proceeded to read another letter from the venerable Mrs. Mary Kirby Smith Eaton, of Washington, D. C., mother of Colonel J. L. Kirby Smith, who was killed at the battle of Corinth. Mrs. Eaton in strong and forcible language disputes the right of the Confederate general to use the name "Kirby," and replies to the published letter of the latter in a manner described by one who heard the letter read as "raking him fore and aft." This letter, if published, would be one of the greatest sensations in military circles since the war, but the officers of the commandery and General Cox decline to let it be made public until Mrs. Eaton has been consulted.

THROUGH THE HEART.

An Ohio Young Man is Shot—A Mysterious Case.

WARREN, O., Feb. 7.—The following telegraph dispatch from Denver, Colorado, has been received. The young man Porter referred to, but recently went from here to Denver to take charge of a publishing concern: "William F. Porter, of Warren, Ohio, was shot and instantly killed in this city at 1 o'clock this morning by Elson B. Giddings, his bosom friend. It is claimed that the shooting was accidental, though that has not yet been clearly established. The two young men were preparing to retire, and had removed their shoes, when a proposition to drink a bottle of wine was entertained, and it was after the glasses were drained that the shot was fired, piercing Porter. Death resulted instantaneously. When the room was entered Porter was found lying on the floor, his shirt front covered with bloody finger marks, caused by Giddings, who had felt to ascertain if life was extinct. Giddings hid the revolver and fled to his home, where he is now a raving maniac. It is claimed that the revolver was discharged accidentally, but this is not clear.

A CONGRESSMAN DIES.

Hon. James Phelan of the Memphis Avalanche is Dead.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Telegrams received here announce the death of Hon. James Phelan, representing the Memphis, Tenn., district in this and the last congresses. He had been in bad health for a year past, suffering from lung trouble, the result of overwork.

He was the youngest member of the last House a graduate of Heidelberg and a hard student, his close attention to studies connected with the congressional work undermining his health and ending in consumption. He visited Nassau last autumn in hopes of regaining his health but too late. His death occurred on January 30, the remains arriving at New York Saturday. He was for years editor and proprietor of the Memphis Avalanche and vice president of the Western Associated press.

Eighteen Nations

SUBSTANCE OF A NEW CONVENTION OF CIVILIZED NATIONS

Which the Senate Is Now Asked to Ratify on Behalf of the United States.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The Senate, in secret session has removed the injunction of secrecy from the treaty entered into at Brussels last July between the United States and a number of other powers for the suppression of the African slave trade. The treaty has not yet been ratified by the Senate, and Secretary Blaine in his letter transmitting it to the president says that as the act provides for the deposit of ratifications at Brussels by July 2 next, it is very desirable that the Senate should take action during its present session. The act embraces provisions for the repression of the slave trade and the restrictions of the importation into and the sale in a certain defined zone of the African continent, of firearms, ammunitions and spiritous liquors. The act is signed by the representatives of eighteen nations, including the President of the United States, nearly all of the European sovereigns, and the Shah of Persia, the Sultan of Turkey and the Sultan of Zanzibar. As a means of effecting the abolition of the slave trade, an international bureau is to be established at Zanzibar, as well as strongly occupied posts in Central Africa, the construction of roads and railways and the establishment of steamboats on inland waters, supported by fortified posts.

In the afternoon the Senate held another executive session at which the treaty was read. After a brief discussion it went over without action.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 8.—In the federal court Mrs. Leddy, of Akron, O., got judgment yesterday against the Citizens' street railway company for five thousand dollars. There were peculiar circumstances. Last May her husband was a passenger here on the defendants car, an open summer conveyance, sitting on the front seat with the driver, the brake whirled around and discharged a pistol in the driver's pocket, killing Leddy. The federal court sustains the widow's claim against the company.

SHOT HER FATHER.

A Startling Tragedy Reported from France.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—A startling tragedy is reported from Blois. A wealthy man of high social standing and a member of the municipal council has been shot by his daughter, who fired five shots from a revolver at her father with fatal effect, death resulting in a few moments. The woman has surrendered herself to the police. The motive of her act has not been made public. It is reported that she has made a full confession to the authorities, acknowledging the terrible crime and justifying it.

DYNAMITE!

LEEDS, Feb. 7.—A quantity of dynamite was discovered in the gas works here this morning. A fuse was attached but it had not been fired. There was enough dynamite to destroy the entire works and there would have been frightful loss of life, as the men work night and day. A recently discharged employe is supposed to be the planner of the intended outrage.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Fatal Fire in a Maine City Poor House—A Defective Chimney the Cause.

MILLERVILLE, ME., Feb. 6.—The city poor house was burned at one o'clock. One inmate, a girl of fifteen years of age, was burned to death. Thirteen escaped. The cause of the fire was a defective chimney. Loss $3,000, uninsured.

NINE ORPHANS BURNED.

Conflagration in a Moscow Children's Asylum.

MOSCOW, Feb. 6.—Fire broke out last night in an orphan asylum in this city and spread with alarming rapidity through the building, which was entirely destroyed. Nine children lost their lives before they could be rescued.

The New Italian Cabinet.

ROME, Feb. 9.—Marquis Di Rudini has completed his cabinet and it is officially announced as follows: President and minister of foreign affairs, Marquis Di Rudina; finance, Colombo; interior, Nicotera; justice, Ferrais; public works, Branca; treasury, Luzatti; war, Pedoux; marine, Canevaro; education, Villari.

THE FARMERS ON TOP.

Kansas Railroads Roughly Handled by Them.

TOPEKA, KAS., Feb. 9.—The railroad committees of the legislature ignore arguments and will recommend a two-cent passenger rate and a twelve per cent. reduction in grain rates. Both will pass.

The Fly Affects Illinois Wheat.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Feb. 9.—There is a general complaint among the farmers of Sangamon county of damage to the winter wheat by the Hessian fly, and it is thought that the greater part of the best wheat in the county is affected.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

BRITTON BUDGET.

Mr. Jesse Exelby visited Britton last Sunday.

William Babcock went to Toledo on business last Friday.

Mr. Alex. Gibson, of Australia, is visiting his father and mother, in our village.

We hear that James Gibson will work for Walter Exelby the coming summer.

Mrs. DuBois and Mrs. Ousterhout were visiting Mrs. Arthur Underwood last week.

Mr. Zeluff, of Toledo, was on a visit to Britton friends last week; he returned to Toledo on Monday.

John Exelby and wife, of Detroit, were called to our village Monday evening by the serious sickness of Mrs. George Exelby.

Dave Sloan has arrived home again and the people of Britton will be anxious to see him and welcome him again in their midst.

The Britton Dramatic Club had a meeting this week (Tuesday) to settle up business. Particulars of meeting too late for press. Will be furnished next week.

On account of the serious sickness of Mrs. George Exelby, the dance advertised for Friday, Feb. 20th, has been postponed until a later date. Particulars will be furnished later.

We regret to say that Mrs. George Exelby is still very sick and grave fears are entertained as to her recovery. Dr. Stephenson, of Adrian, was sent for last Sunday and was fully satisfied with the course of treatment adopted by Dr. Hendershot.

The young folks of Britton had a surprise party on Mrs. Luella Haynes, last Thursday evening. A most enjoyable evening was passed. About fifty young people were present and everything went off in good order. The supper table was well supplied with delicious cakes of all kinds, which the young folks did ample justice to. Games of all kinds were indulged in, and Prof. Kniffen entertained the company with a few fine solos.

They say a certain party went into our drug store the other day and asked if he could not obtain something to drive from his mind the thought of his sorrow and bitter recollection. And our worthy clerk nodded and put up a little dose of quinine and wormwood and rhubarb and epsom salts and a dash of castor oil and gave it to him, and since then that young man has been thinking of nothing else in this world except new schemes for getting the taste out of his mouth.

Dr. Thomas Smith bought a watch from Cass Zeluff the other day and gave him a note for the amount, endorsed by Fred Dubois. Cass wishing to speculate, traded the note for a horse and the other afternoon auctioneered the horse off to the highest bidder, on the streets of our village, Will Osgood buying it for the sum of 25 cents, but he (Will) not having the change, he paid the value in the shape of a twenty-five cent whip, the horse be dear at that low figure.

NORTH-EAST FRANKLIN.

Districts Nos. 1 and 3 are preparing for exhibitions, to be held at the close of the winter term.

A number of young people from the Center district drove out to attend the Demorest contest in Raisin, Saturday, taking dinner with the family of Miss Wheeler, their teacher.

Surprise parties are getting so thick that they have to hold three in one evening. The Misses Dunn were treated to one Friday night, and also the families of John Butrick and George Poucher.

The place of holding the Demorest contest has been changed to the Congregational church. The date remains the same, the evening of Feb. 20. Music by the Tecumseh Prohibition Glee Club. A large attendance is hoped for. Admission free.

A debate has been arranged between the Springville and Franklin Lyceums to take place at Conlin's hall, Tipton, on the evening of Feb. 21. The question is: "Resolved, That the Negro has suffered more at the hand of the whites, than has the Indian." Franklin has the affirmative. Four speakers have been chosen from each Lyceum, those from this town being Thomas Conlin, leader; assisted by G. W. Allen, L. E. Taylor and Hollis Taylor. A lively and interesting time is anticipated.

The opinion of an old and well-known merchant is given in a few words, viz: "I think Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is the best cough medicine that is made."

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

N. M Hindes is on the sick list at present.

Daniel Linn went to Dundee Saturday afternoon.

A. R. Arner visited friends at Dundee Sunday and Monday.

Little Mary Culbertson has the scarlet fever and is very sick.

The Pastor will begin a series of revival services Sunday evening.

We are glad to learn that Lulu Rapplee is improving rapidly.

Prof. W. H. Rieman spent Saturday and Sunday at Cone with friends.

Samuel Barlow is in poor health this winter from rheumatic trouble.

Mr. and Mrs. Riggs of Saline, visited his brother Wm. Riggs during the past week.

The L. C. S. will not meet this week Friday evening, but will hold over for two weeks.

Jennie Root of Tecumseh, was in the village last week, working up a class in music.

Prof. E. A. Wilson is very dangerously sick with typhoid fever. Saturday his friends thought he was dying.

D. W. Smith began teaching school in Dist. No. 3, Monday morning as Miss Rappleye is not able to return to her work at present.

Prof. H. C. Wilson of Constantine, was called home Saturday by the severe sickness of his brother, and returned Monday, as Prof. E. A. Wilson's condition was a little encouraging.

The Ship social to be given at the home of Mrs Ella Waring, in the near future, promises to be a grand affair. The log for the occasion is receiving special attention by those on the committee.

The ladies of the Home Missionary society will give a public meeting in place of the regular services Sunday evening. It is hoped there will be a good attendance as this society is a worthy organization and needs the support of all citizens.

The attendance was not what it should have been at the reading circle on Wednesday evening at the Library. The Program was one of the finest that has been given this winter and passed off without a ripple. Dr. Nelson and Salome Clark are the committee to prepare the program for the next one to be given in four weeks.

Mrs. Jacob Barrett was happily surprised by her parents and other relatives, on Friday of last week, it being her 47th birth day anniversary. The kind friends, after spending a pleasant afternoon were served with refreshments. The occasion will long be remembered by Mrs. Barrett as she was made the recipient of several very useful presents.

Tickets for the Dougherty Lecture, which will be given Thursday evening of next week under the auspices of the Tecumseh Musical and Lecture course, at the Opera House, may be had of Miss Clark by calling at the Library. As Mr. Dougherty is one of the finest orators in America, those who fail to hear him will have something to regret all their lives.

MACON MUSIC.

William H. Osborn is going to move back to his farm this spring and run the entire business himself. It would seem as though it was quite a responsibility for one of his years to assume, but his many old friends are very glad of the good news nevertheless.

The timber fever has struck B. F. DePuy and the trees in that vicinity will soon begin to crash. For an advocate of the "save your timber" doctrine this is a little odd. In truth the gentleman was heard to say, less than a year ago, that if a man deliberately sacrificed his valuable timber to enrich his coffers, it might be accepted as conclusive evidence that the man must be insane. From this argument is adduced that the legislative committee of the "Farmer's Union" must be suffering an attack of mental aberration.

To the question, Which is your favorite poem? there may be a great variety of answers; but when asked, Which is your favorite blood-purifier? there can be only one reply—Ayer's Sarsaparilla, because it is the purest, safest, and most economical.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the pas 30 years, and am satisfied I should not be alive today if it had not been for them. They cured me of dyspepsia when all other remedies failed."—T. P Bonner, Chester Pa. Ayer's Pills are sold by all druggists.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Mr. Elmer Luce of Napoleon, spent Sunday last at his uncle's, C. W Luce.

A large number of young people met at the home of Geo. Poucher last Friday evening, in view of surprising his daughter Maud. The evening was spent pleasantly and at a late hour each sought his own home, reporting a good time.

The Demorest contest, under the White Rose Club, will be held at the Congregational church, Friday eve. Feb. 20th. No admittance fee will be required. All are invited to attend.

The little daughter of Jewett and Libbie Whelan has been seriously ill but is better at present.

The young people of the M. E. church completed the organization of the Epworth League, last Saturday evening. They will hold their meetings on Saturday evening of each week and invite all to attend.

The Farmers' Club was held at the home of Mason Camburn, last Friday evening and was well attended.

Milburn Gibbs was called to Battle Creek last week to relieve the night operator at that place.

The Tipton Association, P. of I. will hold an open meeting, Tuesday evening, Feb. 24th, with the following program.

Music—Minnie Kemp.
Sel. Read.—S. N. Munger.
Violin Solo—Mrs. A Cooley.
Dec.—Arthur Joseph.
Dec.—G. W. Allen.
Rec.—Lula Taylor.
Paper—Hollis Taylor.
Dec.—Ray Kemp.
Song—C Vedder.
Chip Basket—Edith Taylor.
Song—Mr. Patchin.
Music—Tipton Orchestra.

ONSTED ODDS.

Some of our day laborers have been working for the company at Devils lake.

Mr and Mrs. R. B. Moore of St. Johns, have been visiting among relatives here lately.

C. B. Onsted and family, of Ottakee, Ohio, visited relatives in this vicinity last week.

The shoats belonging to Lonnie Halsted of East Rome, and all the hog kind he had, were given Paris green last Friday night by some ill disposed person or persons by which they all died. Such actions as that should be dealt with to the full extent of the law. Mr. H. is a hard working man and is not blessed with the wealth of a Vanderbilt or Gould and he feels his loss very severely.

The Hoosier Hummers displayed their musical talent to an appreciating and large audience at the church here on Wednesday evening of last week, and the people wish them to come again.

RAISIN RACKET.

The Literary Society at the Seminary is the means of doing some good work this term.

The Superintendent that has been hired for the next year was at the school the first of the week, making arrangements and getting some idea of the work he has to do.

Meetings began at the Valley church Thursday of this week. They are carried on by Kenworthy and Lewis. A considerable interest is manifested.

Samuel Satterthwaite who was so seriously hurt by a colt week before last, seems to be doing as well as could be expected, but it will be some time before he will be sound again.

The Demorest contest at the Valley church Saturday P. M, was a success n every way. A glee club from Rolin furnished first class music for the occasion. The medal was given to Mr. Gillespie of Tecumseh. This makes the third one that they have had at the Valley.

Robert and Reuben Westgate have been buying several head of cattle that they are feeding. Rob made a good thing on his lambs and now he is going to try his luck with cattle.

Do you snore? If you do, sooner or later you will become a victim of nasal catarrh. We advise you to use Old Saul's Catarrh Cure, a safe and pleasant and sure remedy for catarrh. 25 c.

The difficulty of administering medicine to young children is entirely overcome by using Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup, the safest, most pleasant and efficient remedy for the little ones. Price 25 cts

EXCITEMENT IN ROCHESTER.

The Commotion Caused by the Statement of a Physician.

An unusual article from the Rochester N. Y. Democrat and Chronical, was recently republished in this paper and was a subject of much comment. That the article caused even more commotion in Rochester, the following from the same paper shows:

Dr. J. B. Henion, who is well-known not only in Rochester but in nearly every part of America, sent an extended article to this paper a few days since which was duly published, detailing his remarkable experience and rescue from what seemed to be certain death. It would be impossible to enumerate the personal enquiries which have been made at our office as to the validity of the article, but they have been so numerous that further investigation of the subject was deemed necessary.

With this end in view a representative of this paper called on Dr. Henion, at his residence, when the following interview occurred: "That article of yours, Doctor, has created quite a whirlwind. Are the statements about the terrible condition you were in, and the way you were rescued such as you can sustain?"

"Every one of them and many additional ones. I was brought so low by neglecting the first and most simple symptom. I did not think I was sick. It is true I had frequent headaches; felt tired most of the time; could eat nothing one day and was ravenous the next; felt dull pains and my stomach was out of order, but I did not think it meant anything serious.

"The medical profession has been treating symptoms instead of disease for years, and it is high time it ceased. The symptoms I have just mentioned or any unusual action or irritation of the water channels indicate the approach of kidney disease more than a cough announces the coming of consumption. We do not treat the cough, but try to help the lungs. We should not waste our time trying to relieve the headache, pains about the body or other symptoms, but go directly to the kidneys, the source of most of these ailments."

"And did all these cases have simple symptoms at first?"

"Every one of them, and might have been cured as I was by the timely use of the same remedy. I am getting my eyes thoroughly opened in this matter and think I am helping others to see the facts and their possible danger also."

Mr. Warner, who was visited at his establishment on N. St. Paul street, spoke very earnestly:

"It is true that Bright's disease had increased wonderfully, and we find, by reliable statistics, that from '70 to '80 its growth was even 250 per cent. Look at the prominent men it has carried off, and is taking off every year, for while many are dying apparently of paralysis and apoplexy, they are really victims of kidney disorders, which causes heart disease, paralysis, apoplexy, etc. Nearly every week the papers record the death of some prominent man from this scourge. Recently, however, the increase has been checked and I attribute this to the general use of my remedy."

"Do you think many people are afflicted with it to-day who do not realize it, Mr. Warner?"

"A prominent professor in a New Orleans college was lecturing before his class on the subject of Bright's disease. He had various fluids under microscopic analysis and he was showing the students what the indications of this terrible malady were. 'And now, gentlemen,' he said, 'as we have seen the unhealthy indications, I will show you how it appears in a state of perfect health.' and he submitted his own fluid to usual test countenance suddenly changed—his color and command both left him and in a trembling voice he said: 'Gentleman, I have made a painful discovery; I have Bright's disease of the kidneys; and in less than a year he was dead. The slightest indications of any kideny difficuly should be enough to strike terror to anyone."

"You know of Dr. Henion's case?"

"Yes, I have both read and heard of it."

"It is very wonderful, is it not?"

"No more so than a great many others that have come to my notice as having been cured by the same means."

"You believe then that Bright's disease can be cured."

"I know it can. I know it from my own and the experience of thousands of prominent persons who were given up to die by both their physicians and friends."

"You speak of your own experience, what was it?"

"A fearful one. I had felt languid and unfitted for business for years. But I did not know what ailed me. When, however, I found it was kidney difficulty I thought there was little hope and so did the doctors. I have learned that one of the physicians of this city pointed me out to a gentleman on the street one day, saying: 'there goes a man who will be dead within a year.' I believe his words would have proved true if I had not fortunately used the remedy now known as Warner's Safe Cure."

"Did you make a chemical analysis of the case of Mr. H. H. Warner some three years ago, Doctor? was asked Dr. S. A. Lattimore, one of the analysts of the State Board of Health."

"Yes, sir."

"What did this analysis show you?"

"A serious disease of the kidneys."

"Did you think Mr. Warner could recover?"

"No, sir, I did not think it possible."

"Do you know anything about the remedy which cured him?"

"I have chemically analyzed it and find it pure and harmless."

The standing of Dr. Henion, Mr. Warner and Dr. Lattimore in the community is beyond question, and the statements they make cannot for a moment be doubted. Dr. Henion's experience shows that Bright's disease of the kidneys is one of the most deceptive and dangerous of all diseases, that it is exceedingly common, but that it can be cured if taken in time.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, FEB. 19.

A New York syndicate, with a capital of four millions has established silver smelting works across the border in Mexico, where there is no McKinley tax law in force. Another illustration of the benefits of this benign tariff.

The sugar trust struck a snag down in New York a few days ago, but it has been successfully re-organized with a capital stock of fifty millons and is again ready for business on New Jersey soil. Major McKinley's tariff bill is getting in its work every day.

The front page cartoon in Puck of February 18th, entitled, "Reciprocity," is a capital illustration of Mr. Blaine's pet scheme. The Reciprocity idea is very good in theory, but until the tariff on raw material is removed, it is not likely to be of much benefit to American industries.

The Brazilian Reciprocity treaty knocks a big hole in the McKinley tariff wall. Reciprocity is good as far as it goes. Free trade in streaks is better than none at all. Bro. Blaine is on the right track and he may become as good a tariff reformer yet as Grover Cleveland.

The dead lock in the Illinois legislature still continues and is becoming decidedly interesting. The Democratic phalanx of 101 votes stick faithfully by Gen. Palmer, without wavering. They have a popular majority of 30,000 behind them and they intend to fight it out on this line, if it takes all summer.

The Atlanta Constitution gives this terse presentation of the tariff situation: The McKinley bill has given the people high goods and low wages. It protects everything except labor. It is largely responsible for the present financial depression. Neither bribes nor bayonets can perpetuate the power of a party committed to the support of such a robber tariff. In a country like ours, where the people are armed with the ballot, no party can league itself with the rich against the poor without being destroyed. It is political suicide.

The old hero, William Tecumseh Sherman, has finally surrendered to the only enemy he ever feared. The last struggle with Death he fought with the same brilliant persistency which has marked all his campaigns, but he fell with colors flying, and has joined the great majority. He was the last survivor of that illustrious trio—Grant, Sherman and Sheridan—who finished the war and crushed the greatest rebellion of history. In the fullness of years, with the highest honors resting upon him, he lays down his earthly life, and his memory will always be enshrined in the hearts of the people. In the annals of our country he will rank among its greatest military chieftains.

The prospects of the passage of the silver bill now before Congress are not flattering. The present measure is a radical one—In fact many of the friends of silver regard it as too radical. The unlimited and independent free coinage of silver might drive gold from circulation and actually produce contraction of the circulating medium, in which event it would do more harm than good. To make the United States mints a dumping ground for the silver of the whole world might be a hazardous experiment. But the free coinage of American silver would be entirely safe, and that is bound to come, sooner or later.

Grover Cleveland's letter on the silver question is receiving more notice than its real merits deserve. It is simply a modest statement of his individual opinion, which accords with that of most eastern Democrats, that free, unlimited, and independent coinage at this time would be an unwise experiment. There isn't a word in the letter attempting to dictate party policy, nor a word that the people's desire for free coinage should be suppressed by a Presidential veto. If Grover Cleveland were in the White House it is safe to say that he would respect public opinion on this question.

The eastern newspapers very generally commend Cleveland's silver letter, which was to be expected. In the West it is regarded as an honest expression of individual opinion and a warning not to be too hasty. It is a wise and conservative deliverance from an eminent New York Democrat, and will be productive of good results. The West and South are united in a demand for the free coinage of American silver and they will insist upon that demand, but it is not good policy to croud through a radical and extreme measure that might produce a reaction and injure the very cause it is intended to serve.

The February No. of the Forum contains an elaborate leader from the pen of Senator Carlisle, entitled "The Vanishing Surplus." Some of the statistics given therein are absolutely startling, and the figures can be relied upon as accurate. No man in public life is better posted on the national finances and no man is more cautious in his public statements. Mr. Carlisle takes his facts and figures from authorized reports and estimates a deficit in the national treasury of $14,000,000, on July 1 of the present year. Place these facts in juxtaposition: At the beginning of the Harrison administration there was a cash balance in the treasury a surplus—amounting to $150,000,000. At the end of the next fiscal year, June 30, 1891, there will be a deficit of $14,000,000 and at the end of the next fiscal year, 1892, a deficit of $84,000,000. The legislation already enacted admits of no decrease in expenditure. Where has the money gone? This is the record of the present administration in the third year of its rule. "In 1872 pensions consumed only $28,500,000. In 1890 this was increased to 106,936,000. This year it will be $133,000,000; and the country will be unexpectedly fortunate if the expenditures for this purpose stop short of $200,000,000 per annum. This review of the nation's finances under republican administration by so able and conscientious a man as Senator Carlisle should be studied by every citizen of the republic. Facts figures and results are there for taxpayers to ponder. The reasonable conclusion of the whole matter is thus given: It is the confirmed and incurable habit of the party now in power to dispose of the public money in a wasteful and extravagant manner, and there is no reason to suppose that it will cease to pursue this course until the treasury is exhausted. What was two years ago the richest public treasury in world will be substantially bankrupt long before the term of the present administration expires."

The mayor of Detroit has been indulging in some very common sense remarks on the subject of taxation. In a recent message to the council he discussed at some length the topic of municipal taxation, using this vigorous language, which would be suited to some other latitudes as well as Detroit:

We paid last year, in round numbers, $350,000 to keep up a fire department, which protects railroad property with the same vigilance that it does that of any of our citizens. We made a present to the roads of this protection. We expended a like sum in maintaining an efficient police department, which watched as faithfully over the property of the railroads, as though the officers and members of the force had been paid out of the millions of Vanderbilt and Jay Gould, instead of by the hard earned money of our citizens. We spent a quarter of a million dollars in repaving streets for the railroad company trucks to wear out; yet not a cent did those corporations contribute. We laid out $400,000 on the education of the young of Detroit for the general good. Yet, although this dissemination of intelligence benefits the railroad companies as much as any one, they paid nothing towards it. It cost us $130,000 for lighting our city last year, and we did it without the help of the railroads. We have from time to time invested $4,000,000 in a system of sewers, and we drain the property of the railroads for love of them, inasmuch as we get nothing for it.

What is the cause of this outrageously unjust and inequitable condition of affairs? The generosity of Legislatures of a long time ago in providing, in special and general charters, that railroad companies should pay a certain small specific tax to the state in lieu of all other taxation. That may have been a good thing when it was passed, but if it ever was right, it has ceased to be so now. If railroads were infants then, they are giants now. So powerful, indeed, have they become, that it has been openly stated that they own legislatures and control courts of justice. I hope and believe it will not prove to be so in Michigan.

Harper's Weekly, in offering some comments upon the passage of the McKinley tariff bill, says: "It is not a tariff in itself to which objection is made. There is no disposition to resort to direct taxation. But it is the unreasonable and exorbitant rates of the new tariff and its inequitable distribution which have stirred public feeling so deeply, and have elicited strong protests even from friends of protection. The present generation in the country understands the question much more clearly than before Mr. Cleveland's famous message. It sees, for instance, that under the plea of a just protection of American labor fairly distributed upon intelligible principles among the whole body of citizens; a tariff is the result of a contest of individual interests, each striving for the utmost advantage that it can seize, the producer demanding a bounty, and the manufacturer free raw material."

Admiral Porter's death removes from this earthly arena one of the brightest naval chieftains of the war. He ranks second only to Farragut in the importance of his naval achievements during the war. One by one the old war heroes are dropping away and before many more years are gone, they will be known only upon history's imperishable roll.

GLASS AND GLASSWARE DUTIES

Taxes and Extra Taxes on Glass—Protection For the Manufacturer and Burdens For the Consumer.

The new duties in the glass and glassware schedule of the McKinley law show some large advances upon the rate in the old law. All kinds of glassware are advanced considerably, and the same is true of the smallest size plate glass, polished cylinder and crown glass, and the largest sizes of common window glass. The following table gives some of the advances:

Glassware.	Old Rate	McKinley Rate.
Plain	40 per cent.	60 per cent.
Cut, decorated, etc	40 do	60 do
Lamp chimneys	40 do	60 do
Polished cylinder & crown not over 10x15	2½c. per sq ft.	4c. per sq. ft.
Polished plates not over 10x15	3c. do	5c. do
Silvered, not over 10x15	4c. do	6c. do
Decorated		10 per cent. additional.
Bohemian	45 per cent.	60 per cent.
Disks for optical instruments	45 do	60 do
Shades	45 do	60 do
Tubes	45 do	60 do
Eye-glasses	45 do	60 do
Pebbles	45 do	60 do
Toys, china	35 do	55 do

On common window glass, larger than 24 by 36 inches, the old duty was 2⅜ cents per pound: the McKinley duty is 3¼ cents. The protection in the window glass duties is further reinforced by the requirement that all imported glass of this kind must be packed in boxes containing only 50 square feet.

While the duties here quoted are high they do not tell the whole story of the protection given the glass men. The customs-administrative law, which went into effect on the 1st of last August, assesses the same duty on the boxes or crates containing goods as on the goods themselves. The packing makes a considerable item of expense in handling glassware. Furthermore, the same law requires that no allowance be made for articles broken in transit, unless the broken articles amount to ten per cent. of the shipment, in which case the Government takes the broken or damaged articles, sells them at auction, and pockets the proceeds. In the shipment of glass and glassware a considerable portion is always broken; and the losses thus entailed form an additional protection to the domestic manufacturer over and above the high rate of duty in the McKinley law.

And all duties and all this extra expense mean just so much additional burden to the consumer. How these burdens accumulate under the McKinley law may be seen from an actual importation as recently reported by a Boston broker. A merchant not long ago imported from Antwerp an invoice of medium table glassware, paying for it $1,775. On landing it at the custom house the McKinley duty was found to be $1,065, thus making the entire cost $2,840. The duty under the old law would have been $742.30, or $322.70 less than the McKinley duty.

The old rate on table glassware was 40 per cent.; the McKinley rate is 60 per cent., or an increase of 50 per cent. upon the old rate. This increase is said to have been put on by McKinley for the benefit of the glass manufacturers in his district. One of the Philadelphia manufacturers, who went before McKinley to ask for a higher duty, had much to say about the pauper laborers of Germany, who "eat meat only once a week," and yet confessed that workers in our American glass factories have work only about nine months in the year.

A SHODDY MILL FAILS.

A shoddy mill in Massachusetts has just closed its doors as the result of the McKinley law. It ran in a kind of shoddy which is imported entirely; and as the McKinley duty on this particular kind is 30 cents a pound—or equal to 300 per cent.—the manufacturer found it impossible to pay this enormous duty.

The owner of this particular mill was evidently not one of the shoddy men who, as was reported in the trade journals last summer, were clamoring for the passage of the McKinley bill. These were the manufacturers who use American-made shoddy; and their anxiety for the passage of the McKinley bill was caused by their knowledge that under it the cost of woolen clothing would be increased and the use of shoddy clothing would be promoted.

The use of shoddy has extended enormously during recent years. According to the statistics of the tenth census, 1880, the total amount of raw material consumed in the manufacture of woolen goods was as follows:

	Pounds.
Domestic wool	222,904,534
Foreign wool	73,200,638
Camel's hair	1,584,119
Mohair	159,678
Buffalo hair	571,925
Hair of other animals	5,974,142
Cotton	48,000,857
Shoddy	52,153,326
Total raw material	404,434,978

The wool used is reported as wool in the grease, and should be reduced at least 60 per cent. to obtain the amount of pure wool consumed. The legal ratio of loss is 66.66 per cent. Thus only 118,476,891 pounds of pure wool were consumed. This shows that the composition of woolen goods made in 1880 was 108 parts of adulterants to 118 parts of pure wool. In 1870 the shoddy mills alone used 19,372,002 pounds of raw shoddy, and in 1880 they used 52,136,926 pounds of raw shoddy on a scoured basis.

The making of shoddy was a comparatively unimportant business only a few years ago. Already it is a prosperous and growing industry and regards itself as an entirely respectable member of our families of National industries. A recent number of the American Wool Reporter contains the advertisement of twenty-eight shoddy dealers.

Early last year the same journal gave a description of the Muhlhauser Shoddy Mills, of Cleveland, O., "the most extensive shoddy mills in this country, and probably the largest in the world." The correspondent of the Reporter said:

The production of these mills is very large, and since the new addition has been in operation, 20,000 pounds per day has been turned out, yielding an annual product of about 6,000,000 pounds. Their last pay roll shows over 480 hands employed; their help are mostly Bohemians. They have 800 sorters to keep the material ready for the machinery. This plant was first established in 1871.

It is interesting to note the success which has attended the firm in its business and the steady manner in which it is increasing, the demand for their shoddies growing larger and larger every year.

But as the use of shoddy increases the use of wool decreases; and this is why the shoddy men were so well pleased with the McKinley bill and its high wool duties. The legitimate woolen industry languishes, while the shoddy industry prospers. The issue of the Wool Reporter, already quoted, contained an editorial on the woolen industry, in which these words were used:

Careful estimates place a number of idle woolen looms as high as 60 per cent of the whole number. These figures seem excessive at first glance, but careful consideration of the woolen situation will remove all doubt as to their correctness. The present heavy weight season has been meager in results, and some weeks since in the Wool Reporter's Review of the New York goods market, it was stated that the business for the present season would be from one third to one-half of that accomplished in an average season. It is a dreary subject to contemplate.

In 1888 there were fifty-six failures in the woolen business with liabilities amounting to $3,600,000. In 1889 the failures were seventy-two, and the liabilities $10,400,000. The figures for 1890 are not yet published; but it is certain that they will show an increase, as there have been many failures since the McKinley law went into operation.

"THE DISCOUNT" CHARGE.

Republican Organs Admit That Our Manufacturers Sell Machinery Cheaper to Foreigners Than at Home.

When the campaign was at its height the Cleveland Leader, one of the leading protection organs of Ohio, denied vehemently that our protected manufacturers sell their wares cheaper to foreigners than in the home market. Since the election, however, this organ has felt the pressure removed, and in discussing the new mower and reaper trusts it admits that "the retail price of American-made farm machinery and sewing machines is often lower abroad than here,"

Even so long ago as the first of last September the Philadelphia Manufacturer, the organ of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Club, admitted that our manufacturers make special discounts to foreigners and even defended them for doing so. It said:

If an American is to sell abroad an article which costs more to produce here than it costs in other countries he must meet the lower foreign price. The fact that he makes a fair profit upon his ordinary trade enables him to bid low for an extension of his trade. A factory making a hundred mowing machines a month for the home market can make five more a month at much less cost than if it had only five to make.

But the American consumer will consider it pretty hard on him to pay for protection which protects principally the foreigner.

The facts about "export discounts" were first brought out at length in a pamphlet brought out by the New York Reform Club, and this pamphlet has been the cause of the heated discussion of the subject during the past six or eight months. The farmer will get an idea of what these discounts to foreigners mean in articles which he uses from the following figures taken from the Reform Club's pamphlet:

	In "Home Market."	To Foreigners.
Lock Lever Hay Rakes	$15.00	$14.21
Self-dump Hay Rakes	18.00	17.12

Tariff Reform in New York.

The Reform Club, of New York City, has organized for a series of tariff debate at the Agricultural fair held throughout the State. The first discussion was at Hudson, between Congressman Springer, of Illinios, who talked tariff reform, and Congressman Horr, of Michigan, who talked protection. There was a large and enthusiastic attendance. The next day the gentlemen met at Margaretville. Here there was a crowd of 3,500 people. They had come to hear a tariff talk, and listened with the greatest interest and the keenest appreciation. It was so evident to the managers of the fair that this debate was the great drawing card, that they dispensed with the racing. When the ordinary, unregenerate American citizen would rather hear a man talk tariff than see a horse run, is it not reasonable to consider that the tariff is a subject that has a very lively interest for him? These meetings, which are to be continued all through the campaign, are sure to result in much good. The work is an educational one, and it has been going on in New York pretty steadily for two years.

The French Duty on Dried Apples.

France is, with the exception of Germany the largest buyer of American dried apples. During the fiscal year 1889 our exports of dried apples to France reached 3,522,000 pounds. The present duty on this fruit is 6 francs per kilo (53 cents per 100 pounds); but the new duty, as proposed by the commission now at work on the French tariff, will be 6 francs as the minimum and 9 francs as the maximum duty.

The higher duty which is equal to about 80 cents per 100 pounds, will almost certainly be collected on our dried apples, as the higher duties in the French tariff are aimed at the products of those countries which levy duties injurious to French industries. The great irritation in France over the McKinley law makes it practically certain that our products will be taxed by France at the highest legal rate. In that case our farmers will not sell 3,522,000 pounds of dried apples to that country. This is of itself but a small matter; but it is only an example of the spirit that the McKinley law is sturing up in foreign countries against us in the direction of driving our products out of their markets.

Does it hurt the Clothes?

We hear that some woman said of Pearline—"it's the greatest thing I ever saw for easy washing and cleaning. In fact it does [illegible] I'm afraid of it." She regards the [illegible] as "too good to be true."

How absurd to suppose that the universal popularity of Pearline is due to anything but wonderful merit.

How absurd to suppose that millions of women would use PEARLINE year after year if it hurt the hands or clothing.

How absurd to suppose that any sane man would risk a fortune in advertising an article which would not stand the most severe (and women are critical) tests.

That's just what PEARLINE will stand—test it for easy work—quality of work—for saving time and labor—wear and tear—economy—test it any way you will—but test it. You'll find PEARLINE irresistible.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—they are not, and besides are dangerous. 166 Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

WHAT IS SAPOLIO?

It is a solid handsome cake of scouring soap which has no equal for all cleaning purposes except in the laundry. To use it is to value it.

What will SAPOLIO do? Why it will clean paint, make oil-cloths bright, and give the floors, tables and shelves a new appearance. It will take the grease off the dishes and off the pots and pans. You can scour the knives and forks with it, and make the tin things shine brightly. The wash-basin, the bath-tub, even the greasy kitchen sink will be as clean as a new pin if you use SAPOLIO. One cake will prove all we say. Be a clever housekeeper and try it.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. THERE IS BUT ONE SAPOLIO.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

MR. VAN GRIP'S FORTUNE.

In 1840 Mr. Van Grip purchased from the Van Snort estate a lot of land fronting on Broadway, below Fulton street, for $25,000. An old building stood on the lot at that time, and Mr. Van Grip had it torn down and a new building erected in its stead. The new building cost $100,000 and created no little stir and gossip in New York in those days. Besides giving a minute description of it in their news columns, the Bugle and Bladder treated the subject editorially and in glowing terms praised the enterprise and public spirit of Mr. Van Grip, and wound up with a wish that New York were blessed with more men like him. Enterprise and public spirit were not Mr. Van Grip's only virtues. He was a religious, God-fearing gentleman, a loving husband, a good father, a thorough business man who was not too proud to look after his own affairs, which he always kept in the straightest order, keeping accurate accounts of all his transactions so that at any moment he could tell exactly how he stood with respect to any particular one of them; in short, he was a model man—a man to be looked up to and copied.

Years rolled by, bringing poverty, hunger and rags to many and riches, plenty and fine linen to a few. The civil war broke out, and thousands of hot-headed patriots left home and kindred to sacrifice their lives on the altar of freedom. Hitherto it had been a cast iron rule with Mr. Van Grip to personally represent himself on all occasions where matters of any moment were at issue, but in this case he was satisfied to appear by proxy. So he hired an agent to represent him at the "front," and remained at home himself to look after the interests of society and to see that the business of the metropolis was carried on in a ship-shape manner. The public weal demanded this, and, as Mr. Van Grip was a heavy tax-payer, the city could not very well spare him. He was one of her representative men.

In 1886 Mr. Van Grip died, in the language of the eminent divine who officiated at the funeral services, "universally regretted," and was peacefully laid to rest in the family plot, where a handsome marble shaft records his many virtues for the edification of future generations.

Early in 1887 the lot of land and the building (now an old one) on Broadway were sold in partition proceedings for the snug little sum of $350,000. I have incidentally remarked above that Mr. Van Grip kept accurate accounts of all his transactions, and I here take the liberty of glancing at the accounts relative to this particular one, not to satisfy any morbid curiosity, but simply with a view of learning a lesson from the enterprise and public spirit of the exemplary gentleman.

The account is written in a neat hand, every "i" is dotted and every "t" is crossed, and it is most beautifully ruled off in red ink. On the debit side are entered payments for taxes, water rates, insurance, repairs, etc., and interest at the legal rate on the $125,000 invested; and on the credit side appear the amounts of rent received. For the first three years (1841-3) the debit and credit sales of the accounts exactly balance. During the following seven years (1844-50) the credits exceed the debits by $5,500; from 1851 to 1860 the excess of credits over debits is $11,000; from 1861 to 1870 this excess amounts to $12,500; from 1871 to 1880 the excess amounts up to $14,000; and from 1881 to 1886, inclusive, it is $8,000; the grand total of excess of rents over and above payments for taxes, insurance, water rates, repairs, etc., and the amounts which Mr. Van Grip allowed himself for interest on the principal sum invested during the forty-six years being $51,000.

Now let us work out two little problems, one in subtraction and the other in addition. From the price at which the property was sold in 1887, namely, $350,000, deduct the cost price, namely, $125,000, and there remains $225,000, to which add $51,000, and we find the net profit on this little transaction was $276,000. Of course, I have not taken into consideration interest on the surplus of receipts over disbursements which accrued annually from 1844 to 1886, and of which surplus Mr. Van Grip was sufficiently enterprising and public spirited to take appropriate advantage.

Two hundred and seventy-six thousand dollars! Phew! To think of it makes my head swim. What genius! What enterprise! What public spirit! Compare this with the puny efforts of twenty pigmy contemporaries of Mr. Van Grip. Those twenty clods of humanity started in the race with him. They drudged and delved for twenty years (1840-60), and as the result of their drudging and delving averaged $525 a year per man, they all earning during the twenty years $210,000, which these good-for-nothing fellows squandered as fast as they earned it. The war broke out and the whole twenty marched off to the "front," from which six of them returned alive to resume their drudging and delving. For the next twenty-two years (1865-86) the total amount earned by those six nobodies was $66,000, or $500 yearly a man. This they likewise spent as fast as they earned it, in riotous living and pampering of the flesh. And then those six nobodies died and were buried out of sight and into their miserable graves, whereon not as much as a wooden stake is placed to remind the passer-by that such pigmies lived.

Here we have the bright example of one enterprising, public-spirited gentleman, earning and saving on one of his transactions as much as twenty nobodies earned and squandered. Just think of it!

We have said one of his transactions, for this was only one of a number of like ones in which Mr. Van Grip had been engaged during those forty-six years. When that worthy gentleman died his estate was found to be worth over $2,000,000—"all in realty," as the lawyers expressed it. Any reader of the The Standard, if he wishes to form a fair estimate of the enterprise and public spirit of this great man, can do so, approximately at least, by working out a little problem in the rule of three. For instance, suppose the earnings of Mr. Van Grip over and above those of ordinary men for those forty-six years to form a like proportion of the $2,000,000 to that which they actually did of the $350,000, we can find out in a jiffy how much his entire earnings during that period amount to. Let us see:

350,000 : 2,000,000 : : 276,000.

Multiply our second term by our third and divide the product by our first. There you are, sir, $1,577,142.85; that is the amount of Mr. Van Grip's extra earnings during the forty-six years.

Again, if it takes twenty nobodies in uncertain circumstances and conditions forty-six years to earn $276,000, how many nobodies, working under similar circumstances and conditions and for a similar period, will it take to earn $1,477,142.85?

Multiply our second term by our third and divide the product by our first. Answer 114 78857-276,000 nobodies. A fraction of a nobody does not amount to much, so will discard the fraction and call it 114.

It warms the cockles of my heart to contemplate him. Just think of it. He earned and saved more than 114 of the ordinary run of men earned and squandered.

Pondering over these figures an idea occurred to me, and as I am not one of those who keep their light under a bushel, I give it to the readers of The Standard. It is this: The sole object of life nowadays is money. Granted. There are over 50,000,000 human beings in these United States at the present writing. Now, suppose that one-fifth of these are able-bodied men (which they are not, but we will suppose so), engaged in a terribly earnest pursuit of that object, and suppose again that in every 115 of these 10,000,000 there is one Mr. Van Grip and 114 incapable nobodies. Now let us figure out that and see what it comes to:

Proceed as we have done above and we find that there are 86956 12-23 Mr. Van Grips and 9,913,043 11-23 incapable nobodies who are unwilling or unable to accomplish any thing toward the object referred to—money.

Now I have come to the idea. Listen: Let those 9,913,043 11-23 incapable nobodies be quietly choked, or burned, or, perhaps, it would be cheaper to dump them into the sea, and then after that has been done let us strangle all the nobody infants as fast as they appear and save and carefully raise the Van Grip infants; if—but, hang it, here comes this terrible "if!" How are we to recognize the Van Grip infants? There's the rub. Perhaps some reader of The Standard may devise a mode of obviating this little difficulty.

Some men are curious animals. I related the facts above written to my friend Pete Drudger, and instead of appreciating the enterprise and public spirit of Mr. Van Grip as they deserve, he metaphorically tore that respectable gentleman's memory to tatters, said he never did an honest day's work in his life, said he was nothing but a bloated spider who lay idly in his hole, and watched an opportunity to prey upon the poor nobodies, said that the $1,557,142.85 of right belonged to the 114 nobodies I spoke of, then branched off into some nonsense about "unearned increment," or some such stuff, and finally wound up by calling me a fool, and said that if my "idiotic idea" about burning, choking and drowning could, by any possible means, be carried into execution, I should be the first victim, as he had never known a more incapable nobody than I am; whereupon I left him. There is no use in trying to reason with such men.

OWEN FITZSIMONS.

The single tax idea is steadily commending itself to earnest thinking men. It is a rank injustice that a man should hold property vacant, with nominal taxes, and gain the increment of value produced by the improvements made by his neighbors, who pay taxes upon those improvements. The bed rock of taxation is this: no tax on the products of labor. This principle is world-wide. It applies with equal force to the town, the State, the nation, the world. By its adoption labor would receive a healthy stimulus, and would create wealth as never before. Throughout the world the burdens of taxation have fallen upon labor, and in all forms of indirect taxation the burden falls with almost equal weight upon all, regardless of their circumstances. But place this burden upon land values only and at once the basis of taxation becomes absolutely equitable, land speculation becomes unprofitable, and the inducements to labor to place improvements upon the land and to advance to its more general ownership are vastly multiplied.—Building and Realty.

WHEN the idea of individual ownership, which so justly and naturally attaches to things of human production, is extended to land, all the rest is a mere matter of development. The strongest and most cunning easily acquire a superior share in this species of property, which is to be had, not by production, but by appropriation, and in becoming lords of the land they become necessarily lords of their fellow-men. The ownership of land is the basis of aristocracy. It was not nobility that gave land, but the possession of land that gave nobility. All the enormous privileges of the nobility of mediæval Europe flowed from their position as the owners of the soil.—Progress and Poverty.

"To whomsoever the soil at any time belongs, to him belong the fruits of it," is a truth that becomes more and more apparent as population becomes denser and invention and improvement add to productive power; but it is everywhere a truth—as much in our new States, as in the British Islands or by the banks of the Indus.—Progress and Poverty.

THE tax on land values is the only tax of any importance that does not distribute itself. It falls upon the owners of land, and there is no way in which they can shift the burden upon any one else.—Progress and Poverty.

ELISHA THE SUCCESSOR.

LESSON VIII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 22.

Text of the Lesson, II Kings ii, 12-22. Commit Verses, 13-14—Golden Text, Zech. iv, 6—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

12. "And Elisha saw it."

He had asked for a double portion of the spirit of Elijah, and the reply was, "If thou see me taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee" (vs. 10). Now we are told that he saw the chariot and horses of fire, and the whirlwind which took Elijah to heaven, and we will expect, therefore, to see in him the spirit of Elijah.

"And he cried, My father, my father! the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof."

12, 13. "And he took hold of his own clothes and rent them in two pieces. He took up also the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and went back and stood by the bank of Jordan."

Thus he discards himself, puts himself off and puts on Elijah. Jesus our Master has ascended, and has left on earth many who believe in Him to be His witnesses. He has also sent down the Holy Spirit to live in us, and be in us the power for service and testimony, and the work can be done only as our golden text tells us.

14. "And he took the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and smote the waters and said, Where is the Lord God of Elijah?"

He now acts in the name of Elijah, using the mantle of Elijah, and looking to the Lord God of Elijah. So did Peter and John when they said to the lame man, "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk" (Acts iii, 6). Or to take an older illustration, so did David when he said to Goliath, "I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel" (I Sam. xvii, 45).

"And when he also had smitten the waters, they parted hither and thither, and Elisha went over."

The same power that had been manifested on behalf of millions, and so recently on behalf of two men, is now put forth on behalf of Elisha only. God will lavish His omnipotence on one man who is willing to stand for Him; but it was not simply for the sake of one man, but for the sake of many that He might be glorified.

15. "The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha."

Thus testified the sons of the prophets who from Jericho had witnessed the dividing of the waters.

"And they came to meet him, and bowed themselves to the ground before him."

They worshiped God in Elisha, or as Paul says, "They glorified God in me" (Gal. i, 24). Thus Potiphar saw God in Joseph, and so also did the keeper of the prison and Pharaoh the king (Gen. xxxix, 2, 3, 23; xli, 38). Thus the king of Babylon saw God in Daniel and his companions (Dan. ii, 47; iii, 28). And the time is coming when all nations of the earth shall see God in Israel, and bow down to Him and worship Him (Jer. iii, 17; Ezek. xxxvi, 23; Zech. viii, 23).

16. "Let them go, we pray thee, and seek thy master; lest peradventure the Spirit of the Lord hath taken him up and cast him upon some mountain or into some valley."

The sons of the prophets request that fifty strong men should go and rescue Elijah from possible difficulties in which the Spirit of the Lord might have left him.

17. "They sent him, therefore, fifty men, and they sought three days, but found him not."

At first Elisha refused to allow them to go, but when they urged and insisted he finally consented, and this is the result.

18. "And when they came again to him (for he tarried at Jericho) he said unto them, Did I not say unto you, Go not?"

The energy of the flesh can only be shown its folly by allowing it to prove its helplessness. These fifty were sure that they knew better than Elisha, but their vain efforts have now done for them what they would not let his words do, that is, convince them of their folly.

19. "Behold, I pray thee, the situation of this city is pleasant, as my Lord seeth; but the water is naught and the ground barren."

Pleasant to the eyes, but unfruitfulness and death was in it; how like the tree of the knowledge of good and evil in the garden of Eden. There is only life and fruitfulness where the Spirit of God is, and however pleasant or attractive a person or a work may appear, without the Spirit all is death and barrenness. Observe how the people of the city see in Elisha one whom they believe can help them, because the Spirit of God was in him. People seldom go to those who live far from God for help.

20. "And he said, Bring me a new cruse, and put salt therein. And they brought it to him."

In Deut. xxix, 23; Jer. xvii, 6; Zeph. ii, 9, salt is associated with desolation and barrenness, and every Bible reader is familiar with the Salt sea (Gen. xiv, 3; Josh. iii, 16, etc.), in which it is said nothing can live. But in Lev. ii, 13, we read that every offering to the Lord required salt; in Num. xviii, 19, we read of a covenant of salt, and in Matt. v, 13, believers are called the salt of the earth, while in Col. iv, 6, we are told that our conversation should be seasoned with salt. We need not stumble over these seeming contradictions when we remember that Jesus Himself is to some a savor of death unto death and to others a savor of life unto life (II Cor. ii, 15, 16). "Salt is good" (Mark ix, 50; Luke xiv, 34), but neither land nor water is always blessed thereby. "God is good" (Luke xviii, 19), but not all are blessed by Him.

21. "And he went forth unto the spring of the waters and cast the salt in there."

Not the stream, but the fountain whence the stream flows must be healed. The sinner cannot be healed by any mere reformation of conduct; he must be born again, or have placed in him an entirely new fountain, born from above (John iii, 7, margin).

Not Elisha, not the salt, but "Jehovah that healeth thee" (Ex. xv, 26). The salt was the symbol, Elisha the instrument, but the worker, the healer, the power, was Jehovah Himself. From the throne of God and of the Lamb flows the river of the water of life (Rev. xxii, 1). "They have forsaken Me, the fountain of living waters" (Jer. ii, 13). He complains of His people, and "If any man thirst let him come unto Me and drink" (John vii, 37), said Jesus on the last day of the feast.

21, 22. "There shall not be from thence any more death or barren land. So the waters were healed."

All earthly streams produce only barrenness and death, but when the waters issue forth from the sanctuary then everything shall live whither the river cometh (Ez. xlvii, 9, 12). Happy the soul that can say, "All my springs are in thee."

The NATIONAL HYMN AS REARRANGED FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR.

SANTA CLAUS SOAP

My Country: 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where our fathers died;
Land where our Mothers cried,
Over the wash-tub tied
Let freedom ring.
My native country thee—
Land of the noble, free—
Thy name I love;
I love thy tucks and frills
But oh: what laundry bills;
My soul with horror thrills;
When I think of thee.
Let music swell the breeze,
And blow through all the trees
Hail SANTA CLAUS:
Let tired mortals wake
And gladly try a cake,
Let all for cleanness sake,
Join the applause.

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT

Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters

"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX,
12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."

REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now, I am well after taking two bottles.

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It started in the third place in 1890, where it will remain 3 years and then move up to second place in 1893, where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889 where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower award of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grand est advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

WHEELER & WILSON M'F'G CO.,

Sold by J. S. Kinney, Tecumseh.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE LAST OF THE GREAT TRIO.

Schoolboy and Cadet—The Scion of a Very American Stock—Disappointed in Not Getting Into Mexico and in Getting to California—Marriage and Civil Life. In Louisiana—Civil War—And the Rest Is Familiar History.

GEN. W. T. SHERMAN.

It is interesting to note the stock from which heroes spring. The Sherman family came from Sussex, England. One branch produced Roger Sherman, William M. Evarts and George F. Hoar. Another gave us the two brothers, Senator John and Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman. The father of these two distinguished men, Charles R. Sherman, was a judge of the Ohio supreme court, and during the war of 1812 had acted as commissary of subsistence. Being a great admirer of the Shawnee chief Tecumseh, when the child destined to become one of the great chieftains of the civil war was born Judge Sherman gave him for a second name "Tecumseh."

William Tecumseh Sherman was born at Lancaster, O., on the 8th of February, 1820. His father died when he was 9 years old, and the boy was taken into the family of Hon. Thomas Ewing, who always treated him as a son. At the Lancaster academy he studied the ordinary branches, besides Latin, Greek and French. Mr. Ewing being a United States senator, and having a cadet's appointment at his disposal, notified the youngster to prepare for West Point. In 1834, however, Sherman was employed as rod man with the engineers locating the Hocking Valley canal, receiving a silver half dollar a day for his work.

Leaving Lancaster in the latter part of May, 1836, he went to Washington to report to Senator Ewing, traveling over the great National road to Frederick, Md. There he was told that he could take cars to Washington, but "not having faith in the novel and dangerous railroad," he says in his memoirs, he stuck to the coach. From Washington he went to Baltimore by rail, thence by boat to Havre de Grace, thence by rail to Wilmington, Del., and thence up the Delaware by boat to Philadelphia. After a few days of delightful sightseeing he took boat to Bordentown, rail to Amboy, and boat to New York. There he met William Scott, the husband of one of his cousins, "a neatly dressed young fellow," he says, "who looked on me as an untamed animal just caught in the far west, 'fit for gunpowder' and nothing else." The steamer Cornelius Vanderbilt took him to West Point, where he arrived on June 12.

Sherman was a good scholar. He stood sixth in a class of forty-three, and but for the demerits for his inattention to rules and regulations would have stood even higher. Upon graduation he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Third United States artillery, to report at Governor's Island, New York, where he was assigned to the command of a company of recruits preparing for service in Florida.

In Florida, South Carolina and California.

Gen. Zachary Taylor was then in chief command in Florida, and Col., afterward Maj. Gen., Worth commanded the Eighth infantry at St. Augustine. Sherman went with his company to St. Augustine, and seems to have learned more there about spearing fish than shedding blood. The Seminole war was over, the Indians were scattered, and the duties of the soldiers were principally hunting up the fragments to send west. He said then that the policy was the worst possible. Florida, almost surrounded by water, was the best place on the continent to control and civilize Indians, and was intrinsically worth much less to the whites than the Indian territory.

After three years in Florida and a visit home he was detailed to assist Col. Churchill, inspector general of the army, in taking depositions in upper Georgia and Alabama concerning "losses by volunteers in Florida by reason of the failure of the United States to provide sufficient forage." This duty took him to Marietta, Ga., where he became familiar with the ground over which twenty years afterward he was to lead a great army. His peregrinations extended from Bellefonte, Ala., to Atlanta, Ga., and his knowledge of the region was so minute that twenty years later, giving an order to Gen. McPherson to ascend Kenesaw mountain, he said, "Half way up you will find a plateau and peach orchard—a good place for your men to take breath before the assault." He had visited the orchard many times during his former stay.

Early in 1846 he was a first lieutenant at Fort Moultrie. Singularly enough, the company was commanded by Capt. Robert Anderson, who fifteen years later was to hold the fort while the storm of civil war was gathering about it. Gen. Taylor was at this time at Corpus Christi, Tex. Sherman was ordered north on recruiting service and assigned to duty at Pittsburg, Pa. Here he heard of the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma, and chafed under the quiet duties of a recruiting officer.

Impatient to reach the scene of active operations, he left his corporal in charge of his recruiting office and took what men he had gathered to Newport Barracks, opposite Cincinnati. "I then reported in Cincinnati," says Sherman, "to the superintendent of the western recruiting service, Col. Fanning, an old officer with one arm, who inquired by what authority I had come away from my post. I argued that I took it for granted he wanted all the recruits he could get to forward, and did not know but he might want me to go along. Instead of appreciating my volunteer zeal he swore at me for leaving my post and told me to go back to Pittsburg."

He was soon, however, assigned to a company under orders for California, and on the 14th of July, 1846, sailed from New York. Thus was he deprived of the experience that others found so useful when the great war made the captains and lieutenants of '46–'48 the generals of '61–'65. While in California Sherman heard that the Mexican war was over.

Two years later he returned from the Pacific coast with dispatches to the war department, visited his mother and returned to Washington, where on May 1, 1850, he was married to Ellen Boyle Ewing, daughter of his foster father, then secretary of the interior. It was a "swell wedding" indeed—the most brilliant of that "season"—and there were present Clay, Webster, Benton, President Taylor and all his cabinet and many other distinguished men.

Mrs. Sherman died in November, 1888, at the home in New York, at the age of 64, after a happy married life of 38 years. She was buried at St. Louis.

After a bridal tour to Niagara and a business trip to California and return to Lancaster Lieut. Sherman resigned his commission and entered a banking firm in San Francisco. He remained through six stirring years; then came the panic of 1857; the bank was closed, and in 1859 he located in Leavenworth, Kan., as lawyer and real estate agent. He found the life insupportably dull, and eagerly embraced an offer (for which he was somewhat indebted to Maj. D. C. Buel, afterward general) to take the place of superintendent of the Louisiana Military academy. But he held it little more than a year, for the great conflict was at hand.

Opening of the Civil War.

His resignation was accepted on the 1st of April, 1861. He had already sought the presidency of a St. Louis horse railroad, and meanwhile visited his brother, Senator John Sherman, who introduced him to the president as just from Louisiana.

GEN. SHERMAN IN '65.

Gen. Sherman thus reports the interview in his memoirs:

"'Ah,' said Mr. Lincoln, 'how are they getting along down there?' I said, 'They are getting along swimmingly—they are preparing for war.' 'Oh, well,' said he, 'I guess we'll manage to keep house.' I was silenced, said no more to him and soon left. I was sadly disappointed, and remember that I broke out on John, damning the politicians generally, and saying: 'You've got things in a h—— of a fix, and you may get them out as best you can,' adding that the country was sleeping on a volcano that might burst forth at any minute, but that I was going to St. Louis to take care of my family and would have nothing to do with it."

The apparent cheerfulness and hopefulness of the president was doubtless discouraging then to many others, who did not know of the load behind it. Of all the eyes that looked into the future none saw farther than Mr. Lincoln's.

Sherman was elected president of the horse railroad, and entered upon his duties April 1, 1861. Twelve days after came the firing on Sumter. Sherman was offered the chief clerkship in the war department through Montgomery Blair, with a prospect of being assistant secretary of war, but declined. He says Frank Blair intimated to him that he would secure his appointment as brigadier general, and to the position Lyon afterward held, but that he declined this office. For the work to be done in the field Lyon was perhaps a better man than Sherman. Lyon was ready to act in those fermenting times when there was little or nothing to work with, while Sherman's strength was only developed when the means were at hand and the machinery in fine working order. Sherman formally offered his services by letter to the secretary of war on May 8, 1861. Six days later he was appointed colonel of one of the new regular regiments, the Thirteenth infantry.

Delays and Disasters of '61.

In June, 1861, he was assigned to the command of a brigade in the Army of the Potomac, and Bull Run was the first military contest of any kind that he saw or took part in—"when," he says, "for the first time in my life I saw cannon balls strike men and crash through the trees and saplings above and around us, and realized the always sickening confusion as one approaches a fight from the rear; then the night march from Centreville, on the Warrenton road, standing for hours wondering what was meant; the deployment along the edge of the field that slopes down to Bull Run, and waiting for Hunter's approach on the other side from the direction of Sudley Springs, away off to the right; the terrible scare of a poor negro, who was caught between our lines; the crossing of 'Bull Run' and the fear lest we should be fired on by our own men; the killing of Lieut. Col. Haggerty, which occurred in plain sight, and the first scenes of a field strewed with dead men and horses." Thus does Gen. Sherman graphically picture his entrance to his first battle.

Then followed the period of reorganization. McClellan was soon in command of all the armies of the United States. Sherman was made a brigadier general, and on the 24th of August was ordered, with his former classmate, George H. Thomas, to the department of the Cumberland to report to Gen. Robert Anderson, once captain of the battery in which Sherman served at Fort Moultrie, S. C.

Buckner was at the time supposed to be marching on Louisville; the state of Kentucky was endeavoring to preserve her neutrality, and there was a very small Union force at hand with which to make a defense. Sherman advanced to Muldraugh's Hill with such volunteers and home guards as could be collected. Gen. Anderson's health was not equal to the command of so many conflicting elements, and on the 8th of October, 1861, he published an order relinquishing his command, which fell on Sherman as next in rank in that department.

It is impossible for the student of war history to peruse the record of Sherman's administration in Kentucky and his subsequent advance to Atlanta without wondering that the same Sherman acted in both fields. Sherman in Kentucky found himself an unwilling commander. "Looking at his field," say Messrs. Nicolay and Hay in their "Life of Lincoln," "with a purely professional eye the disproportion between the magnitude of his task and the immediate means for its accomplishment oppressed him like a nightmare."

His impatient temper soon set his rather sarcastic tongue in most injudicious action. Secretary Cameron came in person to listen to his complaints and asked what he wanted.

"Sixty thousand men at once, and 200,000 before we are done," was his reply.

It is definitely recorded that for once in his life Simon Cameron was shut up. When he repeated this to Adjt. Gen. Lorenzo Thomas he added: "Sherman is crazy. He wants 200,000 men sent to Kentucky!" The next day it was in the papers that the secretary thought Gen. Sherman crazy—a newspaper correspondent was present to hear the remark. And every word that Sherman said to Cameron was in print within a week. In another week Gen. Sherman was "relieved and ordered to report at St. Louis"—to Gen. Halleck.

Shiloh and Vicksburg.

One of the most fortunate things that happened to Sherman and the Union cause was the order for him to report to Grant at Paducah. He had started out with the same disposition as other generals, who were destined to become gigantic failures, to magnify the difficulties in the way and take a discouraging view of his own resources. In Grant he found a man who was always ready to act with what materials were at hand, who from the first was looking at his front rather than his rear. Sherman was a man who could profit by the contact, and doubtless to this fact more than any other is due his final triumph as one of the great leaders of the war.

He was at Paducah when Fort Henry and Fort Donaldson were taken. On the 10th of March, by order of Halleck, he embarked his division at Paducah and at Fort Henry reported to Gen. C. F. Smith, by whose orders he joined Grant at Pittsburg Landing.

At the battle of Shiloh Sherman commanded his division. For the second time he had an opportunity to take part in a great battle, and in command of three or four times as many men as he led at Bull Run.

On the 11th of April Gen. Halleck arrived at Pittsburg Landing and assumed personal command. Commanding his division with the right, Sherman was a witness to Halleck's illustration of the art of war as laid down in the books by advancing an army of over 100,000 men, by regular siege methods, on Corinth, a place of no especial natural strength and defended only by dirt and about 50,000 Confederates. Grant knew that the siege of Corinth was a farce, but Sherman, who was full of impulse and still had a great deal to learn, spoke of it as "a victory as brilliant and important as any recorded in history."

Then came the operations about Vicksburg and on the Yazoo river. Sherman's command consisted of four divisions. He attacked the Confederate fortifications above the Chickasaw bayou and was driven back, having lost 1,900 men to a Confederate loss of 200.

His failure in Kentucky had been followed by his failure at Vicksburg, and he was neither trusted by the people nor by the administration. McClernand assumed command of Sherman's army, except two divisions, and Sherman issued a farewell address. Then with his two divisions he accompanied McClernand's army to Arkansas post. Here in the investment he was given the advance, and in the assault that followed exhibited, according to McClernand's report, "his usual activity and enterprise."

Sherman was assigned to the left of Grant's army when the latter prepared for the movement by which he should get to the rear of Vicksburg. Having been ordered to make a feint against Vicksburg, Sherman ran up to Haines' Bluff, disembarked under a heavy gunboat fire, and kept the enemy in momentary anticipation of an attack till he had reason to suppose that the crisis with the main army had passed. Then he joined Grant in time to engage in the general advance. The oft told history need not be retold here.

The Atlanta Campaign.

For his brilliant services in Mississippi Sherman was made a brigadier general in the regular army, and was left in command of the division of the Mississippi, embracing the departments of the Ohio, Cumberland, Tennessee and Arkansas. The army of the Ohio was under Schofield, that of the Cumberland under Thomas and that of the Tennessee under McPherson.

On the 10th of April, 1864, the total force of these three armies was 353,000 men—on paper. Those present for duty were 180,000. Out of this force Sherman prepared 100,000 men for active operations, leaving 80,000 to guard the immense territory, the lines of communication, railroads, bridges, depots, etc., behind him. The force of engines and cars required to carry food for his army he estimated at 100 locomotives and 1,000 cars.

There were but 60 locomotives and 600 cars at hand. Sherman instructed his master of transportation to hold all rolling stock arriving from Louisville at Nashville. In this way he accumulated sufficient cars and engines to transport food to his armies.

Gen. Joseph E. Johnston was in his front with an army of 42,000 men. Johnston was afterward joined by an additional force of 22,000 men. Thus the armies stood at 100,000 to 64,000. By the 1st of June Sherman had lost 10,000 men, and Johnston 13,000. The force then stood, Sherman 90,000, Johnston 51,000, showing a surplus of 39,000 for Sherman.

In a limited space it is impossible to give an account of the different battles fought in this campaign. It will be more interesting to note the features of the struggle, the objects to be gained and the advantages and disadvantages on either side. Sherman having a superior force, and being each day drawn farther from his base, was anxious to bring on a battle. Johnston must either fight a force exceeding his own by nearly 40,000 men, or at last demoralize his army by prolonged retreat. The two armies would come together; each would throw up breastworks; the country being mountainous, usually protected Johnston's right; Sherman would throw his surplus to his own right, on the outer extremity of which was his cavalry, and when about to get in Johnston's rear Johnston would retreat.

Sherman, grown impatient, decided to attack at Kenesaw. The armies of the Cumberland and the Tennessee marched forward to the assault. The result was a failure scarcely less bloody than Fredericksburg. Then Sherman once more threw out his flanking column and Kenesaw fell. Union pickets took possession one morning without a shot. Sherman, who with a glass was watching the pickets climb the heights and saw them go over the crest, at once ordered a quick pursuit. So the game went on till Sherman was in sight of the spires of Atlanta.

Then Johnston was relieved of his command by Jeff Davis, and Gen. Hood was put in his place. Hood fell upon Sherman's flank, McPherson was killed and the Union forces driven back with great loss. Sherman was held at bay in sight of Atlanta for a month. The check was discouraging, but the great flank movement forced Hood to evacuate.

A southern writer has told a story of the surrender of Atlanta in most graphic fashion. It was known that Sherman with his army was nearing the city, and the mayor, accompanied by a little band of citizens, rode out to meet the general.

A sudden turn in the road brought them face to face with a marching detachment of men in blue. A brief halt, a hurried explanation. A Federal colonel rode up to the spot and asked a few questions. The white flag, the appearance of the strangers in citizens' garb and the calm, measured words of Mayor Calhoun satisfied the officer, and an orderly was at once detailed to guide the visitors to the commander's camp.

When the mayor and his friends were introduced to Gen. Sherman they saw before them a man of 45 who looked fully ten years older. His bronzed face was seamed with lines of care, and his eyes told a tale of sleepless nights. His wrinkled brow and his rough, closely trimmed beard, together with his weather beaten field uniform, made him look like anything but a holiday soldier, and his appearance contrasted strikingly with the glitter and flaring colors of the imposing staff around him.

The stern commander, after a searching scrutiny of the faces before him, looked down at the ground, while Mayor Calhoun quietly informed him of the helpless condition of the city, and briefly surrendered it upon the condition that life, liberty and private property should be protected.

Then the general looked up again, and in a curt, businesslike way said that he would grant the conditions requested.

"But this is war, you know," he said in his abrupt way; "yes, ——— it, this is war, and I must place your town under martial law. That won't hurt good citizens, but it will play the devil with the bad ones."

Shortly after midday the streets were blue with companies and regiments of Federals.

All night the wagons and troops were moving into the city, and the next day the place was crowded.

A dozen generals occupied the best houses, in some cases compelling the original occupants to move into other quarters. Gen. Sherman established himself very comfortably in the present high school building, on the corner of Mitchell and Washington streets, and engaged for a housekeeper an old lady who two days before had been denouncing him as a savage for whom even the worst fate was too good. The two got along very agreeably, and in less than a week the housekeeper told her friends that the general was the nicest man in the world, and had been shamefully slandered.

The rejoicing in the north at the fall of Atlanta knew no bounds. Sherman from having suffered unpopularity became an idol. Many expected the war to end at once; but there was still a fox at large who must be caught. Hood had only imitated Beauregard at Corinth when the Confederate army disappeared before a superior force to turn up elsewhere.

But when we consider Sherman's onward movement, with a line of several

We have added to our Immense Stock of Furniture a complete line of WALL PAPER!

Our stock is all new and of the latest designs and patterns, gotten up for this season, 1891.

We Did Not Buy Any Old Patterns,

That were on the market last year,—so we have no old stock for you to select from. It is all fresh, clean and bright—
AND PRICES RIGHT.

Yours Respectfully,

Wm. McCOWEN.

A CHANGE.

Mac G. Fritz, successor to Fritz & Company, having purchased all interest in the Bazaar Stock formerly known as Fritz & Company, will continue the business, and with good goods and low prices will endeavor to merit a share of the public patronage.

RESPECTFULLY YOURS,

MAC G. FRITZ.

Village election on Monday, Mar. 2.

Mrs. Hattie Hurd has again taken up her residence in Tecumseh.

C. A. Wright & Co. have a new card this week. Subject, wall paper.

The village registration board will meet on Saturday of next week, Feb. 28th.

The Prohibitionists held a rousing state convention at Jackson on Tuesday last.

The Republican township caucus will be held to-morrow evening at the Council building.

Mrs. W. S. Dickinson returned last week from a lengthy visit at her old home at Waterloo, Ind.

The Tecumseh glee club will take part in the Demorest medal contest at Franklin to-morrow evening.

The sale of reserved seats for the Dougherty lecture will open at Adamson's next Tuesday morning at eight o'clock.

Chas. Skinner, Jr., got the nicest valentine of them all. A bouncing boy arrived at his house on Friday evening.

Lew Waldron is going to blow the windmill business stronger than ever this season. See his new card on the eighth page.

Landlord Patterson has an extra large family this week, and the dining room has been provided with an additional table.

During the Lenten season services will be held at St. Peter's church every Wednesday at 10:30 a. m., and Friday at 7:30 p. m.

Michael Wilson has already got some new maple sugar in the market. It is of prime quality,—in fact, his sugar is always prime.

The regular county teachers' association will be held in the rooms in the court house, in Adrian, Thursday and Friday, March 5th and 6th, beginning at 10 a. m. each day.

The temperance lecture at the M. E. church last Friday evening was a fine entertainment, and was listened to by a good audience. Eloquence and song were intermingled in a very attractive manner.

Fox's Flour Sifter is advertised in another column. This is a very useful kitchen article and ought to have a large sale. Headquarters in the Usborne block, second door east of the HERALD office.

M. P. Brown opened his photo gallery in Tecumseh seventeen years ago last Saturday, on St. Valentine's day. If there is an artist in Lenawee co. who can take better pictures, we should like to know where he is.

We regret to learn that Prof. E. A. Wilson is dangerously ill. His symptoms for the past two days have been more favorable, and his friends now hope for the best. He is at his father's in Ridgeway, where he happened to be when taken sick.

The sensational comedy-drama entitled "City Life" was the opening play of the Sackett Co. on Monday night. Notwithstanding the stormy evening they had a fair house, and the audience was more than satisfied. Their cast is a strong one throughout.

Since last week we have learned more particulars about the accident to Samuel Satterthwaite, of Raisin. The colt was not vicious. While buckling a surcingle about the colt it became frightened and seized Mr. Satterthwaite in the face. The latter is improving, and the prospects are favorable for his early recovery.

Owing to the inclement weather and the bad condition of the roads, the meeting at Macon Grange hall Tuesday night, for the purpose of organizing a branch of the Farmers' Alliance, was very lightly attended. The meeting was adjourned to Saturday. Feb. 21st, at 7:30 p. m., when a large attendance is hoped for.

A change has taken place in the firm of Whitenack, Bordine & Co., Mr. Bordine retiring from the firm. Delos Whitenack and associates will continue the business at the old stand, under the title of D. L. Whitenack & Co. The business will continue right along under Mr. Whitenack's efficient management as though no change had taken place. Here's success to the new proprietor.

A letter received from Fred Horton, of Wexford, shows that he is enjoying life in his new home. They have had a pleasant winter thus far, and very mild. The mercury has touched zero only one or two mornings, but there is plenty of snow and good sleighing. Lumbering is very brisk in that section. Crops were good last season. Wheat yielded from 17 to 47 bushels to the acre; oats about 50; corn from 60 to 120 bushels to the acre.

Daniel Dougherty next Thursday.

A cog must have slipped in the weather machinery somewhere.

Everybody will go and hear the silver tongued orator, Daniel Dougherty, next Thursday evening.

Miss Minnie Thompson, of Adrian, is spending the week as the guest of her cousin, Miss Edith Ingersoll.

Alf. Heesen, of Bay City, was at home last week, having come out to attend the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. A. D. Hall.

Miss Clarinda Walker, who has been spending the week with her sister, Mrs. Judge Stacy, returned to her home in Brooklyn on Monday.

Richard Wilson, of the Toledo business college, who has been spending a few days with relatives and friends in the village, returned home Tuesday.

D. A. Reynolds having decided to remove the Patrons' Guide to Lansing, offers the Lyons Herald for sale. This will be a good chance for some practical printer.

Miss Kate Jacobs, of Ann Arbor, who went to Germany last fall with Mabel Hayden to study vocal music, has lost her voice and expected to sail for America on the 18th.

The Home Magazine, conducted by Mrs. John A. Logan, enters its third year with a circulation of 200,000. It is now adding to its subscription list over 10,000 names each month.

There will be a "Quotation" social at the Macon Grange hall Friday eve, Feb. 27, for the benefit of the church. Refreshments will be served for 25 cents a couple. Everybody go and enjoy the fun.

Capt. Hayden has received orders from Adj. Gen. Farrar that the Co. C colors be draped, and that the prescribed mourning be worn for thirty days, in honor of Gen. Sherman and Admiral Porter.

The Consistories of the churches of Macon, South Macon and DeSpelder are requested to meet at the Center church, Tuesday, Feb. 24th, at 1 p.m., as there is important business to be transacted. By Order of Com.

The Sackett-Kinzie Co. are putting on some excellent plays at the Opera House this week. The plays themselves are good, and they are finely presented. Give them rousing houses to-morrow and Saturday evenings.

Daniel Dougherty gave his lecture on oratory at Detroit last Saturday, and the papers are all enthusiastic in its praise. Our citizens rarely have the opportunity of listening to such a distinguished speaker. It is safe to predict that the Opera House will be crowded to its utmost capacity next Thursday evening.

The Scientific American, referred to in another column, under the heading of "Patents," is the very best publication in this country for those interested in science, engineering, mechanics, inventions, etc. A copy of the Scientific American may be seen at the office of this paper, where subscriptions will be received.

The John D. Shull Camp, Sons of Veterans, will hold a box social Wednesday evening, Feb. 25th, at their rooms in G. A. R. hall. The public generally are invited to attend. How is it applied to Rectal Disease, and to the cure of all forms of Chronic Disease? He will be glad to enlighten you in person. Sufferers from Rheumatism and Neuralgia specially invited to see him. Consultation in German and English free.

The World Almanac and Bureau of Information for 1891 comes to us from the World Publishing Company, the cover embellished with a picture of the magnificent new building in which the publishing company is now domesticated. It is a capital political hand-book, the best in some respects that is published. An admirable index adds much to its value. Among the special features an excellent map of New York City. It will be sent, postpaid, to any address for 25 cents.

The retail merchants of Tecumseh met in the parlor of the Lilley House on Friday evening, Feb. 6th, and listened to an address by E. A. Fultz, of "The Merchants Retail Commercial Agency," 53 Dearborn-st., Chicago. The system in use by this Agency has for its purpose the protection of retail merchants. The legality, practicability and results of the system were fully explained. After consideration a motion was made that those present proceed to organize the Tecumseh branch of such agency. The following were chosen as officers:

President—S. W. Anderson.
Vice President—James Lowry.
Secretary—N. Satterthwaite.
Treasurer—C. A. Slayton.
Executive Board—F. D. Avery, S. W. Bordine and J. S. Kinney.

After further consideration an adjournment was made, to meet at the call of the President.

Philip Kehoe and Austin G. Hall have gone on an Eastern trip to Washington, Philadelphia, and Baltimore.

If we were to make a list of the six most eminent orators now living in this country Daniel Dougherty's name would be in the list. The opportunity to hear such a noted orator is seldom given to our citizens, and they will improve it by a large majority.

On Friday evening Feb. 6th, Mr. and Mrs. David McNair celebrated the 25th aniversary of their wedding by inviting in a large number of their friends, who spent a most enjoyable evening. After the company had assembled the anniversary significance of the occasion was made known. This fact had been kept so quiet befor that evening that no one mistrusted it, else a fine assortment of mementoes would have been carried in. The modesty of the host and hostess in keeping their silver secret, was only equaled by the royal manner in which they entertained their guests.

THE FARMERS' UNION.

The Farmers' Union met at the home of M. Smeltzer on Friday evening, Feb. 13th, and held its first oyster supper. By 8 o'clock the parlors were filled to overflowing, when the meeting was called to order and a short literary program given, after which supper was announced.

During the evening a most excellent musical program was given, in which the little girls, Nellie Landgraf and Fern VanDuzer, carried off the honors. With games, music and social intercourse the evening passed only too quickly. One hundred & twenty-six tickets were sold by the secretary, and as they separated for their homes all pronounced this meeting a most decided success. The next meeting will be held at the home of Thomas Welliver, on Friday evening, Feb. 27.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

At the regular meeting of Beers Relief Corps, No. 177, Monday evening, Feb. 16, 1891, the following Resolutions on the death of Mrs. M. E. Turner were adopted:

WHEREAS, The hand of death has removed from our midst our sister and co-worker, Mrs. M. E. Turner, and we deem it but just that a recognition of her many virtues be had; therefore

Resolved, That while we bow in submission to Divine will, we, the ladies of Beers Relief Corps, do sincerely mourn her loss, feeling we have lost an honored member, a strong supporter, and sincere friend, and her vacant seat here will long remind us of the sad loss we have sustained.

Resolved, That a copy of these Resolutions be placed on file in our Corps and one be published in the village papers.

The latest discovered metal, lighter than hard wood and stronger than steel. The Michigan Stove Co., after a series of scientific experiments, are enabled to make an admixture of this wonderful metal with their regular high grade iron, with the result of producing smooth castings, additional strength, and preventing cracking; thereby rendering stoves made of this admixture more durable than WROUGHT IRON or STEEL. The "GARLAND," which are the product of this Co., are the only stoves made having that advantage. Remember, when in need of a Cooking Stove or Range that your local dealer is not only here to-day, but you can put your hand upon him next week also.

UNPARALLELED OFFER TO ALL NEW SUBSCRIBERS TO

THE ARENA,

THE BRILLIANT BOSTON REVIEW.

The Publishers of THE ARENA take pleasure in announcing that they have just perfected arrangements by which they can send free, as a premium to every new subscriber of THE ARENA, the COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE for the ensuing year (old subscribers of the Cosmopolitan must remit fifty cents extra.) This is not only the most liberal offer ever made by a leading review, but

THE COMBINATION IS UNSURPASSED.

The subscription price of THE ARENA is $5.00; that of the Cosmopolitan is $2 40. But for $5.00 we will send The Arena and the Cosmopolitan, postpaid, for one year to new subscribers.

How THE ARENA is regarded by Leading Thinkers.

ALFRED RUSSELL WALLACE, LL. D., F. L. S., Author of "Darwinism," "Malay Archipelago," etc. The Eminent Scientist and Author writes:—

"I think you have succeeded in the very difficult task of improving on all existing literary periodicals. The articles deal with questions of vital interest to every thoughtful person."

Rev. CYRUS A. BARTOL, D. D, the Distinguished New England Clergyman:

"The place that was waiting for a periodical, not only free and able, but catholic and comprehensive,—fair to every thinker and just to all thought, while open to any subject, in which our common humanity was concerned,—in my judgment you fill."

OPINIONS OF CRITICAL JOURNALS.

"Full of mental stimulus, of breadth and vitality."—Boston Traveler.
"The Arena is a fine magazine of the best writings."—N. O. Picayune.

"At the head of magazine literature of a superior sort, and is more particularly designed for educated minds."—New York Times.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—This great offer—The Arena and the Cosmopolitan Magazine combined is only made to new subscribers of both magazines. Old subscribers must remit $5.50 when sending their order. Address THE ARENA PUBLISHING COMPANY, Copley Square, Boston, Mass.

SHERMAN DEAD.

The Gallant Old General Defeated

By Death Whom He Could Not Conquer.

THE HERO OF THE MARCH TO THE SEA IS NO MORE.

After Suffering Excruciating Agony, the Brave Old Man Passes Away at 1:50 in the Afternoon—His Great Career.

GEN. W. T. SHERMAN.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—General Sherman passed away exactly at 1:50 p. m. All the members of his immediate family were gathered at his bedside at the time, except his oldest son, Rev. Thomas E. Sherman, the Jesuit priest, who is now on his way to this country from abroad on the steamer Majestic. Grouped about him in his last moments were Senator John Sherman, the general's brother; his younger son, P. T. Sherman; his daughters, Mrs. Fitch and Mrs. Thackara, and the two unmarried ones, Miss Rachel and Miss Lizzie Sherman, who lived with him. There were also present his niece, Mrs. Colgate Hoyt and her son; Lieutenants Fitch and Thackara, the general's son-in-laws; J. M. Barrett, his private secretary; General Thomas Ewing, his brother-in-law, and Drs. Alexander and Green, who have attended him constantly during his last illness. They had all been watching by his dying bedside since the early hours of the morning, for when they were first summoned from their beds at 5:30 a. m. it was believed that he might die at any moment.

The dying General had been unconscious for several hours, and his fluttering pulse was so feeble that on several occasions it was almost impossible to tell whether he was living or not. His long struggle had completely exhausted him and it was only his remarkable vitality and will power that enabled him to cling to life so long after all hope had been given up. From time to time during the morning some of the family would leave the room, but only to be summoned back hastily when it was thought that the end was approaching. It was in this manner that he clung to the thread of life that remained for nearly five hours after he became completely unconscious. Dr. Alexander watched beside the bedside of the general incessantly, watching the slightest changes in his pulse and breathing. After eleven o'clock it was expected that every moment would bring the end, and telegrams were prepared to send to all his friends and the officers of the government at Washington as soon as dissolution occurred.

At the final moment there was no appreciable change in the appearance of the sufferer. He had been lying as one dead for several hours. Dr. Alexander, who had his hand on the general's breast, for he could not detect the heart beats in his pulse, was watching his face intently. He looked up quietly at just ten minutes to two and told the grief-stricken family that his patient had passed away.

General Ewing immediately left the room and went down to the door to announce the fact to the representatives of the newspapers who had been anxiously watching the house for four days. He was visibly affected by his grief at the death of his old friend and could say no more than to make the announcement that the general had passed away. A few minutes after this Secretary Barrett came to the telegraph office on Columbus avenue with a large batch of dispatches, which were addressed to President Harrison, each of the members of his cabinet and relatives and friends of the family at Washington and elsewhere. They contained the simple announcement that General Sherman had died at 1:50 p. m., and most of them were signed by Lieutenant Thackara.

General Ewing says that death ensued from the accumulation of mucus on the lungs. The general made an effort to throw it off, but had not the strength. He gave one convulsive gasp and that was the end.

Mr. Barrett was so completely prostrated by the sad event of the day that he could talk with no one, and he hurried back to the house as soon as he filed the dispatches.

General Ewing was seen and said: "General Sherman's death was absolutely painless, for he was unconscious for several hours. His previous sufferings had worn him out completely, and we all expected that death would come much sooner than it did. For some time before the end he scarcely seemed to breathe at all, and the respirations became fainter and weaker until gradually they ceased altogether. The old general has shown a wonderful amount of will power during his illness, and that alone has kept him up for the last two days. As long as he was conscious he was determined to resist to the end, and if his physical power had been a little greater he might have won. As it was the end came so easily that for a moment it was not possible to realize that all was over."

At 3 o'clock Undertaker Robert Wigger, a nephew of Bishop Wigger, and who buried Mrs. Sherman, arrived at the house and enbalmed the general's body. the funeral arrangements have been placed in the hands of General's Howard and Slocum. The funeral, it was stated, will be delayed until Thurday, so that Father Sherman, who sailed from Liverpool last Wednesday on the Majestic, may be present. The vessel is due next Wednesday. The body will then be taken via the Twenty-third street ferry to Jersey City. A special train of the Pennsylvania road will convey the body and all the members of the Sherman family to St. Louis, where General Sherman will be buried beside his wife.

The following official statement of the scenes at the death bed of General Sherman and the arrangements for the funeral was given out late in the afternoon by Lieutenant Fitch: General Sherman lay in bed from Friday morning until he died without speaking a word. He made the attempt to do so several times, but was unable to utter a sound other than a hoarse gasp. He apparently recognized those about him by a look of the eye. His tongue was swollen and his jaws were stiff some hours before he died. Signs of death were noticed half an hour before he died in the icy coldness of his finger tips. This coldness gradually extended to his hands and arms. He was unconscious for the last two hours he was alive. No priest or clergyman was present, neither was any called. The general did not suffer any pain for the last two days. All night long he lay in bed with his head high, but toward morning he worked his head lower until at the last he lay perfectly flat. Death came so quietly that those at the bedside did not realize that the general was dead until Dr. Alexander said "all is over." Death came with one long sigh. Immediately after his death Generals Howard and Slocum, who were on General Sherman's staff, were sent for. Some two weeks ago the general make known his wishes as to his burial. He particularly requested that his body not lie in state anywhere. He also requested that the funeral be a strictly military one. He said that he did not care particularly for any military observances here in New York, but that he did want a military burial in St. Louis, which would be participated in by his old comrades in arms. He also requested that the funeral rites be not in conformity with any particular form of religion. He wanted a soldiers burial. The body is now lying embalmed in the room where the general died. The features are natural with the exception of a slight swelling on the right jaw and under both eyes. The eyes are closed and the arms folded across the breast. In the house at the time death came, other than those in the bed chamber were: Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hoyt and their son Alfred; Miss Mary Ewing and the wife of General Fitzpatrick. Senator Sherman left the house early in the afternoon and went to the house of Mrs. Colgate Hoyt, where he will remain until the departure for St. Louis.

Over a thousand telegrams have been received from all over the country, the contents of which will be made public tomorrow. At eight o'clock this evening the detail of soldiers who are to guard the remains arrived at the general's late residence. The detail consisted of a corporal, two sergeants and six privates from Battery M., First U. S. artillery, stationed at Governor's Island. The detail was under the command of Lieutenant Rodman. Two soldiers were stationed at the door of the room where the body lay, two others were placed at the front door, and the other four will act as a relief.

Ransom Post Will Officiate.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 14.—Immediately on receipt of the news of the death of General Sherman, the following telegram was sent to P. T. Sherman, New York:

"In compliance with the wish of General Sherman, expressed in the following extract from his letter to Ransom post, of date of February 9, 1890: 'That the post, in its organized capacity, will deposit my poor body in Calvary alongside my faithful wife and idolized soldier boy.'

"The post tenders its services to take charge of the funeral ceremonies here, and will send to New York an escort and guard of honor. Please wire wishes of family L. B. RIPLEY,

"Commander of Ransom Post."

Emblems of Mourning.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Five of the executive buildings are draped in black. The war department for General Sherman, the navy for Mr. Bancroft, and Admiral Porter, the treasury for Mr. Windom, the interior for ex-Secretary A. H. H. Stuart, and the department of justice for Judge Devens. The flags of the capitol have been at half-mast for Representative Phelan, and but a very short time has passed for several months when the flag over the white house and those over the public buildings generally, have not been lowered for the death of some prominent public man.

The Funeral Arrangements.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—General O. O. Howard and General Henry W. Slocum were busy this morning completing the arrangements for the funeral of General of General Sherman, but are not yet prepared to make a formal announcement. They were selected by the family to take charge of the matter and have called into consultation General Daniel Butterfield and Lieutenant Treat. Probably no material change will be made from the programme already given out.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

A Train Dashes into a Chicago Street Car—Collision of Freight Trains.

CHICAGO, ILL., Feb. 14.—A twenty-sixth street crossing town car was knocked off the track this morning at Stewart avenue by a Chicago and Eastern Illinois train. The driver saved his life by jumping, while half a dozen passengers had a miraculous escape from instant death. Fred Rolls, Katie Byron and Lizzie Campbell sustained severe cuts and bruises.

A rear end collision between Illinois Central freight trains near Kensington early this morning resulted in demolishing one engine and several cars and greatly delaying suburban traffic. The engineers, firemen, and brakeman jumped for their lives, one engineer crushing his foot and one brakeman having a leg broken.

A NATURAL GAS EXPLOSION.

Three Persons are Terribly Burned at Lafayette, Indiana.

LAFAYETTE, IND., Feb. 13.—A natural gas explosion occurred at the residence of Mary Jenners, in which three members of the family were badly burned and their recovery is doubtful. Their names are: Mrs. Mary Jenners, burned in the face and arms; Thos. Northcut, seriously burned; Levi Brown, seriously burned about the face and body.

She Fooled the Coroner.

DETROIT, MICH., Feb. 16.—While a coroner's jury was holding an inquest over the body of Mrs. Andrew Orzeck, Sunday morning, who was supposed to have died Friday night, the woman was discovered to be alive. No physician had been in attendance and the case was probaly one of catalepsy or trance.

A Hero of the Sea

Falls a Sudden Victim of Heart Disease.

WHILE SEEMING TO GRADUALLY RECOVER FROM HIS ILLNESS,

Which Made Him an Invalid Three Years Ago, the End Comes Suddenly—His Great War Record.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Admiral Porter died at his residence here in the morning. His death was unexpected, for although he had been an invalid for a year or more, he had been reported better of late and there were no signs of a sudden termination. The disease was an affection of the heart.

David D. Porter, admiral of the navy, was 78 years of age and a native of Pennsylvania. His services during the late war were of a distinguished character, and he became the chief officer of the navy, admiral, in 1870. He had been unable to attend generally to official duties during the past two or three years and at one time his death was almost daily expected. Some months ago, however, a marked improvement in his condition was reported and since that time there had been no warning of the end which came unexpectedly.

So unexpected was the death of Admiral Porter that members of the family who were in the city and even some members of the family who were in an adjoining room were not present at his bedside until after he had breathed his last. There had been no indications of late of immediate trouble. At 8 o'clock in the morning his nurse observed unfamiliar symptoms and two of his sons who were in the house were summoned and a physician sent for. Within fifteen minutes he was dead, his two sons and the nurse being the only ones at the bedside. Even they did not realize the extent of the trouble until he had ceased to breathe. The physician who arrived shortly after his death made every effort to resuscitate him but it soon became evident that the spark of life was absolutely extinct.

Several members of the family who were in the residence or in the immediate vicinity, did not arrive until after death, so sudden and unexpected, was the end. The physicians state that death was due to fatty degeneration of the heart.

The President's Proclamation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The president officially announced the death of Admiral Porter in the following message to Congress:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

Admiral of the navy, David D. Porter, died at his residence in the city of Washington in the morning at 8:15 o'clock, in the seventy-eighth year of his age. He entered the naval service as a midshipman February, 2, 1829, and had been since continuously in the service, having been made admiral August 15, 1870. He was the son of Commodore Porter, one of the greatest of our naval commanders, his services during the civil war was conspicuously brilliant and successful, and his death ends a very high and honorable career. His countrymen will sincerely mourn his loss, while they cherish with grateful pride the memory of his deeds. To the officers of the navy his life will continue to yield inspiration and encouragement.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

The president also directed that the national flag be displayed at half mast upon all public buildings throughout the United States until after the funeral, and that public business in the departments at Washington be suspended on the day of the funeral.

The Funeral.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The funeral of Admiral Porter will take place from his residence, in this city, at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon. There will be simple service at the house, the Rev. Dr. Douglass, of St. John's Episcopal church officiating. The deceased will be buried with the highest naval honors. Commodore Ramsey has charge of the funeral arrangements. Rear Admiral Kimberly will be in charge of the escort, which will number 3,000 marines, soldiers and militia. The ball-bearers, which, however, are subject to change, will probably be as follows: Vice President Morton, Major General Schofield, U. S. A.; Rear Admiral Stevens, Rear Admiral Almy, Rear Admiral Rodgers, Rear Admiral Jouett, Rear Admiral Howell, Rear Admiral Crosby, Senator Hawley, Senator Manderson, Senator McPherson, Representative Boutelle and Governor Pattison, of Pennsylvania. The interment will be at Arlington, near the grave of General Sheridan, in the spot selected by Admiral Porter himself some time ago.

SMALL POX.

Two Thousand People are Quarantined in Pennsylvania.

ERIE, PA., Feb. 16.—Dr. Lee, of the State board of health, and Dr. Woods, of Erie, have completed the quarantining of the Johnsonburg (Elk county) small-pox district, as far as they can reach it.

Mrs. Patrick Halligan and a child died yesterday. There are thirty persons in the quarantine. Over 2,000 of the inhabitants in that section have been quarantined, and armed guards prevent people from getting on or off the trains.

It is Bred by Filth.

WICHITA, KAS., Feb. 16.—A number of small-pox cases have been reported among the Mennonites of Marion county within the past few days, and fears are entertained of a repetition of the scourge which killed scores of people in that community a few years ago. These people are uncleanly to a large degree, and so careless that all attempts to arrest the spread of the plague have heretofore proved futile.

A GANG OF YOUNG THIEVES

Caught in Crime at Leavenworth, Kansas.

LEAVENWORTH, KAN., Feb. 16.—Six young men, of bad repute locally have been arrested on suspicion of being connected with the six daring jewelry robberies and other crimes committed in this city within the last two weeks. They are said to be members of an oath-bound gang and were organizing a plot to rob the First National bank. The plan was frustrated by the arrest of two members of the gang, who confessd to save themselves.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

SOME ALLIANCE VIEWS

National President Polk on the Kansas Senatorship, and the Force Bill

At the national headquarters of the Farmers' Alliance there is double satisfaction over the Kansas Senatorship. President Polk is glad because Ingalls is beaten. He is also glad because Judge Peffer is elected. There is a particular reason for rejoicing over Ingalls' defeat. Not quite a year ago these Alliance people called upon Ingalls in Washington and urged him to take up their cause. The talk was free and extended. Mr. Ingalls asked questions and manifested much interest. The storm was beginning to gather in Kansas, but it was scarcely bigger than a man's hand. The Alliance delegation left Mr. Ingalls' presence with a feeling that it was probable they had enlisted a powerful advocate. They had his promise that he would give their propositions careful consideration, and write his reply. That reply never came. When his attention was again called to the matter the Senator said he was preparing a speech which would define his position, and which he hoped would be satisfactory to his farmer friends. Months went by. The speech was not made until a few days ago. The national officers of the Alliance feel that they gave Mr. Ingalls every opportunity, and that his defeat is on his own head.

"I have never doubted," said President Polk to-day, "since my first visit to Kansas last June, what the result would be in that State—that is, as to the defeat of Ingalls. I saw those people meant business. I regard the result of the Senatorial fight in Konsas as the greatest blow at sectionalism that has been struck for twenty-five years. For that reason, and none other, I rejoice. The Kansas Alliance has set an example in this terrific struggle which I trust will not be lost throughout the caunty. It was a glorious struggle of manhood and patriotism, and the whole Alliance of the United States stands with uncovered head to do honor to the gallant brethren of Kansas."

"I confess," said President Polk, "I have not shared the general apprehension that the force bill would become a law. My faith in the conservatism of the American people has not wavered. I have not believed that the force bill could pass. Every one familiar with the plans and methods of politicians for stirring up sectional strife coulb not fail to see that this innovation in our elective system, inaugurated just at the beginning of a great national campaign, would resolve itself necessarily into a bitter sectional question. Indeed, it is the general impression that sectional agitators hoped that this bill would become in the campaign of 1892 the veritable 'bloody shirt.' In the nature of things, its operation would revive the now waning sectional animosities with all the attendant evils. The South at the present stage of its industrial development and recuperation cannot afford to be plunged again into sectional strife. It presents an inviting field for capital seeking investment, particularly in industrial enterprises, and it needs the skill, energy and enterprise of a healthful immigration to build up its waste places.

"Sectionalism," continued President Polk, "has deterred capital and emigration, for the greater part of the last quarter of a century, from coming South. But within the past ten years the immense natural resources of the South have attracted there hundreds of millions of dollars, which have been permanently and profitably invested. This is only the beginning. These investors are not only satisfied, but are hopeful of realizing their most sanguine expectations. They feel and know that any agitation or disruption of the political status of the South to day must result in the stagnation of all lines of business and a sure decline of all material values. Hence they oppose this bill. The States of the South realize this danger to the fullest extent."

President Polk next referred to the recent action of the Southern legislatures. He said:

"The refusal on the part of these States to make appropriation for the World's Fair at Chicago was not intended as a bluff, as some Congressmen have asserted. That action was based on wise and prudent business principles. It is needless for the South to make heavy expenditures for the exhibit of her resources at Chicago with the view of inducing capital and immigration when there is an existing state of things which will surely repel that immigration and capital. The South is anxious to make a magnificent display of her resources at Chicago. But I think she would quietly decline to do so if this bill became a law. The overwhelming public sentiment, North and South, which is now rapidly crystalizing against all measures and policies that tend to keep up sectional strife cannot be disregarded by Congress. The legislatures of Illinois and Kansas have spoken. I am happy in the belief that they but voice the sentiment of the great mass of the people against sectionalism. That man must be blind who cannot see in the revelations of the past six months the doom of sectionalism and its propagators."

SUGAR AND JAM.

Opportunity For Building Up a Vast Industry—How Cheap Sugar Will Affect Jam Making—What Cheap Sugar Has Done For England—The Duty on Tumblers and Jars Still Too High.

The duty on raw sugar will not be abolished till next April, but the price of sugar has already begun to decline in anticipation of the removal of the duty. The sugar market is influenced by the knowledge that the tariff is a tax which the consumer is now paying; and the certainty that this tax on the consumer will be abolished April 1 is already operating to give the people cheaper sugar.

The old duty on raw sugar, which is still in force, is $1.40 per 100 pounds for the very lowest grade. The raw sugar made by the centrifugal process and testing 95½ degrees by the polariscope pays $2.22 per hundred—this being one of the best qualities of raw sugars brought in. It takes 112 pounds of this sugar to make 100 pounds of refined, and the duty paid on this raw sugar going into 100 pounds of refined is $2.48½.

This latter figure ought to represent the difference between the price of refined sugar in England and in the United States. Owing to the fact, however, that the duty will be abolished next April the difference between the price here and in England has fallen below $2.48½. The present price of granulated sugar in England is $3.75 per 100 pounds; in New York it is $6.12½—a difference of $2.37½.

The tariff difference in prices can best be seen by comparing the New York and London prices for two months in 1889, the month of March, when the difference was least, and the month of September, when it was greatest. Here is such a comparison on 100 pounds of granulated sugar at wholesale:

March 2-5	$4.46	$7.00	$2.54
March 5-11	4.50	7.00	2.50
March 12-18	4.46	7.00	2.54
March 16	4.50	7.125	2.625
March 17-22	4.50	7.25	2.75
March 23-25	4.625	7.50	2.875
March 26-31	4.741	7.75	3.009
September 1-4	5.35	8.25	2.90
September 5-8	5.01	8.25	3.24
September 9-11	4.68	8.25	3.57
September 12-17	4.74	8.25	3.51

As the price of sugar is so much lower in England than with us, its consumption is much greater. England consumes seventy-four pounds a year per person, the United States fifty, France twenty-eight, and Germany twenty. One reason for the large consumption in England is the fact that vast quantities of sugar are used there every year in making fruit jam, more than 300,000,000 pounds being consumed in this way alone. Much of this was exported to all parts of the world, and in this way the actual consumption of sugar in England is not so great as the figures make it appear. We are ourselves large consumers of English jams and preserves. England's consumption per capita ought, therefore, to be slightly reduced, and ours somewhat increased.

The cheapness of sugar in England is not due simply to the lack of a duty on sugar; it is further caused by the sugar export bounties of France and Germany. Our own drawback on refined sugars has also had the same effect as an export bounty, the American refiner being able to sell his product to the English buyer at about $3.80 per 100 pounds cheaper than the home buyer. George Medley, an English economist, says: "I hold that it is in a great measure owing to the folly of other nations that we occupy the commanding position we now do in trade, manufactures and navigation, and that were it not for that folly we should not be anywhere near it, absolutely or relatively." Dow Bramwell has estimated that foreign nations by their sugar bounties make England a present of about $1,000,000 every year.

The great fruit jam industry of England and Scotland has been built up as the direct result of cheap sugar. In London alone more than 6,000 workmen are employed during the season in making jam; and it was estimated even six years ago that there were 12,000 persons in the jam making business of England. Besides these there were 50,000 persons in the single county of Kent who were interested as growers, pickers and packers of small fruit for the jam industry. The great production of jam has given the working people a cheap and wholesome substitute for butter. This may be seen from the following words of an English country grocer:

We have just ordered eleven tons of jam. Years ago we never used to keep it. When it was high we could not sell it. Now it is an article of food for quite poor people. At the school treats children used to think bread and jam a great pleasure; now they would rather have bread and butter, they are so accustomed to jam.

The production of small fruits in the United States is hardly less than that of England. A conservative estimate places the value of our yearly crop of strawberries, cranberries, blackberries, currants, etc., at $18,000,000. This value would be much greater but for the fact that the growers are often compelled to sacrifice their fruit in a glutted market, and are even fortunate at times if they get back their empty baskets from the markets without actual loss.

The abundance of small fruits with us gives us an opportunity to become one of the greatest of jam producing countries. But the tariff stands in the way with its high duties on sugar and on tumblers and earthenware jars. The sugar duty will soon be abolished, and one difficulty will thus be removed. But McKinley has made the question of packing more difficult than ever. The old duty on tumblers suitable for packing jam was 1 cent per pound, equal to about 48 per cent.; the McKinley duty is 1½ cent per pound, equal to about 72 per cent. If common brown earthenware jars are used the duty is 25 per cent. in both old and new tariffs; but if these jars are glazed the old duty was 55 per cent., and the McKinley duty is 60 per cent.

It is interesting to calculate just how much the tariff operates toward preventing the growth of a jam industry with us. The two following tables are calculated upon the basis of the old tariff duties on sugar and on common brown earthenware pots (25 per cent. duty in both tariffs). The calculation is for one dozen jars of jam, each jar weighing one pound. Here is how the matter has stood in regard to sugar:

Greengages and damsons	60.45	26.97	33.48
Strawberries	65.10	39.81	25.29
Raspberries and black caps	58.59	35.43	23.16
Peach (marmalade)	60.45	36.97	23.48
Blackberry	60.45	36.97	23.48
Quince	60.45	36.97	23.48
Limes	60.45	36.97	23.48
Red cherries	60.45	36.97	23.48
Gooseberries	60.45	36.97	23.48
Red currants	60.45	36.97	23.48
Currant (jelly)	62.00	37.73	24.09

The next table gives the difference of cost on a dozen jars, and the last column of figures gives the combined extra cost on sugar and jars:

Kind of fruit.	U. S. cents.	England cts.	More in U. S. cents.	Total extra cost, cts.
Greengages and damsons	62.5	37.5	25	48.48
Strawberries	62.5	37.5	25	50.29
Raspberries and black caps	62.5	37.5	25	48.16
Peach (marmalade)	62.5	37.5	25	48.48
Blackberry	62.5	37.5	25	48.48
Quince	62.5	37.5	25	48.48
Limes	62.5	37.5	25	48.48
Red cherries	62.5	37.5	25	48.48
Gooseberries	62.5	37.5	25	48.48
Red currants	62.5	37.5	25	48.48
Currant (jelly)	62.5	37.5	25	49.09

The wholesale selling prices in London by the dozen are: Strawberry jam, $1.30; raspberry and black currant, $1.24; and other kinds ranging as low as 95 cents. There is, therefore, a tariff difference here against the American manufacturer and housewife equal to 40 per cent. and upward of the English wholesale prices.

After our jam industry gets free sugar the next step must be in the direction of cheaper tumblers and jams. Mr. Reed Jordan, who is perhaps the foremost jam manufacturer in the United States, says:

Give the American potters free chemicals and clay, give the American glass-tumbler manufacturers free chemicals and sand and they will need no protection. In fact the tumbler manufacturers need none now. Give us absolute free trade in sugar, glassware and earthenware so that we may be protected from trusts and combinations; give us absolute free trade in preserved fruits, including jams, and we will buy more small fruits from the farmers, pay them better prices and lower the price of our goods. We can then control the American markets, and build up a large export trade to South America, where there is a large demand for jam and other "sweets." Not only this, but we would be able to sell our goods in Glasgow, Dundee and London, the chief jam manufacturing centers of the world. We would be able to compete with them in their own markets, instead of being undersold by them in our own markets, as is the case today.

A Case For Free Raw Materials.

About eighteen years ago the duty on hides was removed, and since that time our tanning and leather goods industries have had the advantage of free raw materials. The result has been to vindicate in the completest manner the truth of the Democratic position in the present tariff agitation that free raw materials will not only encourage and develop our manufactures, but will enable them to put their products upon the markets of the world in successful competition with their foreign rivals.

From the very time when hides were upon the free list our leather industries began to expand, and our exports of sole leather and manufactures of leather have shown a steady and gratifying growth ever since. A late number of "Bradstreet's" has the following facts and figures on the sbject:

"The cost of tanning hides is cheaper here than in any other country. This is due in large measure to the low cost of materials. We are therefore not only able to tan all our domestic hides but the major part of those produced in Central and South America. We supply European countries with about $900,000 worth of leather each month, and our exports have been increasing rapidly within the last few years, as may be seen from the following table:

Exports.	Pounds sole leather.	Pairs boots and shoes.
1881	28,690,648	300,968

He Will Never Believe in Protection.

A case of tariff injustice recently took place in New York which has never been made public, but which deserves to be recorded as an evidence of the barbarous tariff laws under which we are living in this enlightened nineteenth century.

An intelligent, educated German, a graduate of one of the leading universities of Germany, came to America nearly two years ago to seek a position as a teacher. After teaching a year in an academy on a very modest salary he secured a position as an instructor in one of the foremost institutions of learning in America, though still on a very modest salary.

Meanwhile he had been longing for the girl he left behind him, and accordingly he thought that now was the time in his affairs to enter into matrimonial joys. He wrote to the old home for her, and in due time he met her at the pier in New York. The two families in Germany had sent a goodly number of presents for the couple, most of these being silverware for household use. Now what did Uncle Sam's custom house officers do to show this educated German gentleman that he and his bride were welcome to this "land of the free," and that we were glad to see him setting up his household in our country?

And such outrages are perpetrated under the humbug pretense of patriotism—of "protection to American homes!" They say, too, "protection to American labor;" but it is a libel on American laborers to say that they want such things done in their behalf.

—The American print works of Fall River, Mass., have shut down for an indefinite period, thus throwing out of employment a large number of operatives.

PRONOUNCED HOPELESS, YET SAVED.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my Lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's Drugstore, regular size, 50c and $1.00.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many costomers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, Knightstown Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction.' Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

ONE DOLLAR WELL INVESTED.

If you have bad breath, constipation, pain in the small of the back, discolored skin, nervousness, or dizziness your only wise course is to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. It will cleanse the blood of all impurities, regulates the Kidneys and Liver, and thus restore a healthy glow to your checks again. All druggists; one dollar a bottle.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, tetter, chappep hands, chilblains corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box for sale by John J. Orr.

By All Odds

The most generally useful medicine is Ayer's Pills. As a remedy for the various diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, these Pills have no equal. Their sugar-coating causes them not only to be easy and pleasant to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity in all climates and for any reasonable length of time. The best family medicine, Ayer's Pills are, also, unsurpassed for the use of travelers, soldiers, sailors, campers, and pioneers. In some of the most critical cases, when all other remedies have failed, prove effective.

"In the summer of 1864 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. C. Luce, Late Lieut. 56th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry.

"Ayer's Pills are

The Best

I have ever used for headaches, and they act like a charm in relieving any disagreeable sensation in the stomach after eating."—Mrs. M. J. Ferguson, Pullens, Va.

"I was a sufferer for years from dyspepsia and liver troubles, and found no permanent relief until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. They have effected a complete cure."—George W. Mooney, Walla Walla, W. T.

aundred miles in his rear extending through a hostile country, we see how far superior was the Sherman who followed Johnston's army to Atlanta, to the Sherman who was bewildered in Kentucky.

March to the Sea.

Sherman entered Atlanta on the 1st of September. While the people of the north were rejoicing at his success, Sherman himself was puzzling his brain as to the next move on the chess board. With an army of 100,000 men, several hundred miles from his base, his enemy gone from his front and liable to strike at any other point along the whole Confederate and Union front, Sherman might well listen to the plaudits of his countrymen, feeling that they might at any moment be turned to blame. Hood, as anticipated, soon appeared in Sherman's rear, and began to attack the railroad supplying the Union army.

THE MARCH TO THE SEA.

[In the cut the upward curves show the general line of march of the Twentieth corps, the reversed curves that of the Seventeenth corps, the broken black line that of the Fourteenth corps, and the unbroken line that of the Fifteenth corps, while the stars show the prescribed marks of the cavalry but it is to be noted that the cavalry swept over a large breadth, and flanking bodies of the infantry often departed from the main line.]

Sherman cast longing eyes on Mobile and Savannah—anywhere to shorten his line of supply. Meanwhile he sent Thomas back to Chattanooga to look after Hood and protect his present line from Atlanta to Louisville. He then conceived the plan of marching to the sea, there to meet transports loaded with provisions. Gen. Grant strongly advised him to turn and destroy Hood before entering upon his proposed move.

Sherman replied that if he could hope to overhaul Hood he would turn against him with his whole force, but that he feared Hood would retreat southwestward with a view of drawing him from Georgia. "Still," said Sherman, "if he attempts to invade middle Tennessee I will hold Decatur, and be prepared to move in that direction; but unless I let go of Atlanta my force will not be equal to his." Sherman also added in another dispatch to Grant, "If I turn back now the whole effect of my campaign will be lost." Grant replied: "I do not see how you can withdraw from where you are to follow up Hood without giving up all we have gained in territory. I say, then, go on as you propose." So the great march was begun.

Sixty thousand men made a holiday march over the territory lying between Atlanta and the ocean. The march to the sea has doubtless done more to attach fame to the name of Sherman among the masses than any campaign he planned or executed. There is something in it so different from the ordinary lead and powder and blood of war. The men were so happy.

"Uncle Billy, I guess Grant is waiting for us at Richmond," they called out as Sherman passed them on the march. There were shots fired, but at sheep and chickens; there was blood spilled, but it was the blood of November turkeys. It was a jolly, roistering, reckless army—an army that had fought for and won the privilege of roving at will over the territory that was laid open to it. In about thirty days the advance came to the banks of Ossibaw sound, where frowned Fort MacAllister, but Gen. Hazen's division formed in line and walked over the parapets with but little trouble. Supplies were at hand, sent down from the north by sea; the goal was won. Sherman had a new and safe means of supply, and the moral effect of the move was tremendous.

Sherman says in his "Memoirs:" "I considered this march as a means to an end, and not as an essential act of war. Still then, as now, the march to the sea was generally regarded as something extraordinary, somethin, anomalous, something out of the usual order of events; whereas, in fact, I simply moved from Atlanta to Savannah, as one step in the direction of Richmond, a movement that had to be met and defeated or the war was necessarily at an end."

Finishing the Struggle.

On the first day of February, 1865, Sherman started with 88,000 men in pursuit of the second part of his plan, which was to strike Richmond from the Carolinas. He moved up to Columbia, S. C., which he destroyed, and pushed on to Fayetteville, N. C. The movement to the left was intended as a feint, but news reached Hardee (through a New York paper), who was watching Sherman, that the Union supplies were to be drawn from Goldsboro. This did away with all effect of deception. From Fayetteville Sherman reported progress to Grant, assuring him that he would be ready to aid him in the spring campaign.

Meanwhile Gen. Joseph E. Johnston had been placed in command of the Confederate forces in the Carolinas. On the night of the 18th of February Gen. Slocum encountered Johnston's army at Bentonville. Sherman ordered him to fight defensively until he should himself come up with reinforcements. When Sherman arrived he hesitated to bring on a general engagement, being entirely ignorant of the force at Johnston's disposal. Besides, he had but little food in his wagons, and expected Schofield and Terry to join him from Wilmington. Gen. Mower broke through the Confederate line on his extreme left flank. Sherman ordered him back, but lest the enemy should concentrate upon him ordered a brisk skirmish fire along the line.

Sherman has acknowledged that he made a mistake in not pushing Johnston then. The next day the Confederates were gone, and Sherman had missed an opportunity. Johnston had but 14,000 men, and with the force at his command Sherman could have destroyed him.

While Sherman's march to the sea has been attended with great eclat, his march through the Carolinas has been nearly lost sight of. Yet the distance traversed in the latter was greater than in the former, and required the crossing of five navigable rivers.

It was now possible for Sherman to join Grant in Virginia, but again the situation was embarrassing. Grant and Sherman now led two different armies in proximity to Lee, and should Lee elude Grant at Petersburg, join Johnston and attack Sherman, if successful the two might turn and crush Grant. At least this was the apprehension of the two leaders, who had learned one of war's most important maxims, never to despise an enemy. But either Grant or Sherman was powerful enough to cope with the combined Confederate forces, for by this time the Confederacy was in its death throes.

Having arrived at Goldsboro Sherman went to Fortress Monroe for an interview with Gen. Grant and Mr. Lincoln. He has given the testimony of Admiral Porter, who was present at the meeting, to show that Mr. Lincoln was ready to have almost any terms accepted from Gen. Johnston rather than have him join Lee and render the fighting of another battle necessary. Sherman went back to Goldsboro and announced his plans to his generals, but all was rendered unnecessary by the fall of Richmond and Petersburg. Then it was again feared Lee would attempt to join Johnston, and Grant directed Sherman to push on, and, in cooperation with himself, try, as Grant expressed it, to "finish the job." On April 12 Sherman received the news of Lee's surrender.

On the morning of the 14th of April he received by flag of truce a letter from Gen. Johnston proposing to surrender. Sherman replied that he would make the terms of Appomattox a basis. A meeting was arranged between the two generals, and on the 17th, as Sherman was about departing to keep his engagement, he received the news of the assassination of President Lincoln. Sherman met Johnston, who declared he had authority over all Confederate armies, and that he would surrender them, but he thought Sherman ought to give him some guarantee for the men and officers of their political rights. Other prominent Confederate officers were called in, and Sherman wrote terms for surrender to submit to the new president, Andrew Johnston. The papers were signed and forwarded.

The taking up of civil matters in this cartel, proposing the guarantee to the "people of all the states their political rights and franchises," at once insured its disapproval at Washington. Grant joined Sherman at Raleigh, by direction of the president, for the purpose of assuming command. New terms were drawn up between Johnston and Sherman for the surrender of Johnston's army alone and approved by Gen. Grant.

Then came the grand review in Washington, the flags, the decorations, the enthusiastic multitudes, while hundreds of thousands of veterans marched through the streets past the reviewing stand. But one shadow rested upon the throng and the armies—the memory of those who had fallen, and that he whose patience, whose wisdom, whose kindly disposition had guided the nation, harmonizing the discordant elements, pushing always forward with sublime faith through four years of a disheartening struggle, was not permitted to review the victorious armies. Abraham Lincoln slept with those whom he had sent into battle.

Gen. Sherman succeeded Grant in the command of the armies of the United States when Grant was made president. At the age of 64 he was retired, and eventually took up his residence in New York, and each year has added to the popular love for the old hero. The humorous features of his character have lately become historical.

The actual ability of any eminent man cannot be weighed dispassionately in his own time. Sherman failed signally in the early part of the war, but was eminently successful in the latter part. He was always true to his convictions, and to the sight with which he saw the problems before him. He never did much with little, but he did a great deal when amply supplied with means. When Grant left him in command in the west he was free to prosecute any campaign in his own way. That he prosecuted the campaign he saw before him in a masterly way (except his blunder at Kenesaw), and handled his men and kept open his communications with great skill, no one can doubt, but it will remain for the dispassionate military student to determine whether or not his plan was at fault.

When he started for Atlanta his whole army amounted to nearly 200,000 effectives. The combined Confederate forces that could have opposed any move he chose to make in the west were not more than 50 per cent. of the number of his own. His plan of following Johnston involved the stringing out of his army from Louisville to Atlanta. The situation was cumbersome for Sherman and greatly to his disadvantage. The question for the military critic is, whether he could have done any better—anything to break up the status of chasing one small army which had the advantage of engaging only a portion of the force opposed to it, and involving a line of supply to defend extending through a hostile country over 300 miles? These questions may at times puzzle students of military history till some new war will show the methods of 1861–'5 to be out of date.

HEADQUARTERS OF SHERMAN AT SAVANNAH.

Sherman will always be admired for what he effected, irrespective of the great means at his disposal and his manner of procedure. Among the Union leaders in the civil war he will doubtless always take rank second only to Grant.

The Power of Necessity!

IS THE MOTHER OF INVENTION.

There has long been a NECESSITY for a clean and convenient place to keep Flour. By this Combined Bin and Sifter, as shown in this cut, that want is now being supplied. The Flour is taken from the bottom, instead of the top, and by so doing the first flour put in is the first taken out. So you can see at once that there is no flour remaining in the bottom of the bin, to become old and musty, as often is the case in the old way of keeping it. It is made durable and strong, and is NOT like some Sifters that have been placed on the market, bought to-day, used to-morrow, and then are a thing of the past,—but last a family a lifetime. All parts are made removable. You may ask anyone who has seen or used them, what they are. Manufactured and sold by

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The Pastor is holding special services this week.

T. H. Temple went to Adrian on business Saturday.

Guy Pocklington is on the sick list with chicken-pox.

Some of N. M. Hinde's family have the scarlet fever at present.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. John Sherman Jr., Saturday eve. a seven pound boy.

Second quarterly meeting service will be held next Sunday morning. The usual services at the hour as heretofore.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Cadmus left Tuesday for a visit with friends at Flint.

Undertaker C. A. Conklin, of Adrian was in the village Tuesday on business.

F. J. Temple made a business trip Toledo Thursday and Friday of last week.

Clara Temple has been under the doctor's care for the past week with a throat trouble.

Mrs. John Arner and daughter, Lou, went to Dundee Wednesday for a visit with relatives.

C. W. Culbertson is numbered with the sick of the neighborhood with scarlet fever symptoms.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Miller and daughter Hazel, of Samaria, were visiting relatives here the fore part of the week.

The ladies of the W. C. T. U. will hold a business meeting at the home of Mrs. M. A. Barrett, on Thursday afternoon of next week.

Mrs. Lewis Miller who has been spending several weeks with her daughter, Mrs. B. J. Coller of Detroit, returned to her home Saturday.

Wm. Larkins was taken sick Monday while on his way home from Comfort's brickyard, and at present writing is threatened with a run of typhoid fever.

G. P. Waring is in Chicago the present week with his brother at their office No. 161, LaSalle street, he having severed his connection with the Michigan Messenger recently.

The attendance at the donation on Wednesday evening of last week, given at the church, was very large, especially of young people, and a very pleasant and enjoyable evening spent by all. The amount received was $127,30.

As announced last week the regular services on Sunday evening was dispensed with, and the ladies of the Home missionary society presented a very pleasing and interesting program consisting of readings, recitations and music. At the close a collection was taken for the benefit of a grand and noble cause, amounting to $11,00.

Bear in mind the date for the ship entertainment to be held at the home of Mrs. Ella Waring. The supervision for constructing the ship has been assigned, and a chairman to prepare the log chosen, and as it is to be the grand event of the season, prepare for the call of the Captain's bell and provide yourself and lady with staterooms and tickets for the banquet.

The official announcement of the census of 1890, gives the population of the United States as being 62,622,150. The Spear Head Tobacco manufacturers recently awarded prizes amounting to $10.000, (over 3.000 of which was in cash,) to parties estimating the nearest to the exact population. The capital prize, $1.000, was won by J. M. Hatcher, of Mitchelville, Iowa, he guessing within 150 of the official figures. A. R. Arner was one of the contestants, and drew 6 pounds of the tobacco, and says: Although he wa'nt "in it" suitable to catch the thousand dollar deal, he can "cloud up" and rain tobacco juice all summer at the expense of the P. I. Sorg Co.

ASK YOUR FRIENDS

Who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla what they think of it, and the replies will be positive in its favor. One has been cured of indigestion and dyspepsia, another finds it indispensable for sick headache, others report remarkable cures of scrofula, salt rheum, etc. Truly, the best advertising which Hood's Sarsaparilla receives is the hearty endorsement of its army of friends.

The great majority of so-called cough cures do little more than impair the digestive functions and create bile. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, on the country, while it cures the cough, does not interfere with the functions of either stomach or liver.

MACON CENTER CHIPS.

We are having regular March weather, with robbins and blue birds sprinkled in.

Religious services in the central Reform church will be in the evening during the month of March.

A. Russell, who is serving as juror at the present term of court, was in town last Sunday and Monday, but returned to Adrian on Tuesday morning.

At the adjourned meeting of the Farmers, held at Grange Hall last Saturday evening, it was decided to form an association. After doing some preliminary work the meeting adjourned to meet Monday March 2d at 7:30 P. M., at which time a constitution and by-laws will be presented for consideration. Let everyone turn out and take an active part in building up a Farmer's school.

Chas. S. Foote who has been managing the Homestead farm of Wm. H Osborn for a number of years is about to have an auction and move away. Ask him if after working diligently for ten years, he thinks the prices received for the products he has sold has given him his share of the profits of his labor. I predict that his answer will be that it has not, and it will be true, for these ten years are taken out of the best of his life. His thorough integrity of character while living in our midst has made him many warm friends, who, while regretting his going away will wish him well in any enterprise.

The last meeting of Macon Grange was well attended, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather. About 40 members were present. A class of 5 were instruct in 3d. and 4th degrees, after which an oyster dinner was taken by all present. At the afternoon session it was decided to give a public entertainment in four weeks and a committee elected to take charge of it. For want of time the question for discussion was laid over until the next regular meeting, Friday, March 6th. at 1:30 P. M. The system of the loaning money by the Government is an important one and should draw out an animated discussion.

MACON MUSIC.

Uncle Horace Gray called on friends Sunday.

Mrs. Burdett, whose recovery has been reported doubtful, is now reported favorable.

Mrs. King of Vernon, Shiawassee Co., an old time neighbor, is visiting friends here at plesent.

Mrs. Lavina Jackson, who has been spending a few weeks in Tecumseh returned home last Saturday.

The revival meetings have closed. Quite an interest was manifested and several have resolved to lead a different life.

Meetings at the Reform church commencing March 1st., will be held in the forenoon, as usual, for the month.

Mrs. Bickle and little daughter, (better known here as Maryette Smith) of Elkhart, Ind., is visiting friends here at this writing.

Maynard Hatch caught his little finger in the pulley of a hay-fork, causing the member to become crooked and very much in the way, could not wear a glove on his hand when he went to see his best girl. He took a seat in the office of Dr. Morden Tuesday, and told the Dr. that he might have the finger. The Dr., not being in the best of spirits on account of the muddy roads, flew at that finger and took it off in less time than it takes to write it, but Maynard had an equal amount of grit and stood the operation without a murmur.

The period of teething is the most dangerous to young children. They should then have extra attendance and Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Price 25 cents.

Among other outward symptoms and effects of nasal catarrh, is a thickening of the vocal chords and the consequent impairment of speech. Old Saul's Catarrh Cure is the remedy. Price 25 cts.

Don't!—If a dealer offers you a bottle of Salvation Oil in a mutilated or defaced package,—don't buy it at any price,—it may be a dangerous and worthless counterfeit. Insist upon getting a perfect, unbroken, genuine package.

Free of charge.—Your druggist will refund your money if Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup does not give you satisfaction and cure your cough. Price 25 cents.

Women who suffer from nervous and physical debility find great help in the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It produces the rapid effect of a stimulant, without reaction—the result being a permanent increase of strength and vigor, both of mind and body.

IN MEMORIAM.

Though in each of the local papers have appeared obituary notices expressing in the highest terms, honor and esteem for my deceased uncle, Dr. Nelson H. Kimball, I would personally like to add a few words from those who were associated with him in the closer walks of family life. None knew so well the uniform courtesy and kindness, even tenderness of his character as those of his own household.

A member of my father's family during the early part of his married life, he became dear to my parents as their own brother, though only connected by marriage.

To my mother, he was the loving brother, the tender, solicitous physician, in later years going many miles to see her professionally even when his own health was delicate.

Sought after by the rich and influential, for his skill as a physician and surgeon, he was still ever ready to heed the call of the poor, and the knowledge that no fee would reward his services, never deterred him from doing his best for the patient.

In early life he endured hardship, and privation, but these no doubt served to strengthen and develop the sturdy nobility of his later character, which made his life so rich a blessing to his friends, more than one of whom may feel as a dear old lady expressed herself. "I fear I cannot live much longer, my main prop has gone, I have lost my doctor."

During Dr. Kimball's busy professional life he gave little time to social pleasures; but since failing health made it impossible for him to attend to a large practice, his friends have enjoyed much of his society, and found him as genial and delightful in the parlor, as he was trusted and skillfull in the sickroom. In his last illness, he was ever patient, and cheerful; conscious to the last, he watched with his fingers on his wrist, his own life current ebbing slowly, but surely, and when the pulsation ceased, he closed his eyes, and peacefully, quietly, fell asleep. Who can doubt that the Pearly Gates swung wide open, and that his was the reward of the good and faithful servant.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Pay up your bill even if it only be cents.

Miss Jennie Saxton has been suffering for some time with a sore hand.

J. M. Taggett, drug clerk for Wm. Babcock, has secured a position at Hastings, Michigan, and last Monday he started for that city. We are sorry to lose him and hope he will get along well in his new home.

Mr. Haines of Adrian, was again in Britton last week, and made a sale of five fine organs in our village. We are glad to see that our villagers appreciate a music house represented by so able and upright a gentleman as Mr. Haines has proved himself to be.

The Britton Dramatic Club have reorganized on a more solid basis, and the entrance fee is fixed at twenty-five cents, After paying running expenses the profits derived from shows will go toward buying books for a library. The officers elected for the coming year as follows:

President—John Britton.
Vice Pres.—W. J. Clark.
Treasurer—Wm. Osgood.
Secretary—Richard Wiggins.
Stage Manager—Herbert Franshaw.
Property Man—Henry Miller.

As the Constitution is somewhat lengthy, we are compelled to defer its publication until next week.

Mrs. George VanTuyle was in Tecumseh Monday.

Ruel Mills and family of Saline are guests at E. R. Smith's.

Mrs. Dow Draper and Mrs. Jacob Smith, were in Tecumseh Monday.

Mrs. E. M. Conklin of Manchester made Clinton friends a short call Monday.

The little four year old son of Chas. Fisk of Detroit died last Thursday of diphtheria.

Theron Fish expects to start for Kansas in a few days with the idea of locating there.

Ed McDermott is taking L. W. Kimball's place in the woolen mill office, during his absence.

Col. E. D. Fenn went to Adrian Monday to meet his daughter who has been in Chicago.

Miss Louise VanDeMark was the guest of Florence Rowland in Tecumseh, part of last week.

Mrs. Newcomb of Ann Arbor, has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. T. Clark for a few days.

B. O. Randall was "laid up" for a day or too last week, but we are glad to see him again in the store.

Miss Ida McConnell came home from Chicago last Wednesday. She expects to remain here several weeks.

J. T. Clark and Ned Newcomb have been negotiating for the Brooklyn creamery and expect to start it up at once.

L. W. Kimball had a severe attack of neuralgia last Sunday night. Dr. Tuttle attended him and he has now entirely recovered.

Miss Marie Marigold arrived here Tuesday from Chicago and is a guest at E. R. Smith's. She was a schoolmate of Blanche Smith's at Hellmuth College.

W. S. Whittelsey of Ypsilanti joined his family here last Saturday. He has not been feeling very well of late and will remain here for a few days rest.

Victor E. Haywood of Port Huron and a lady friend from Detroit arrived here Tuesday night to attend the wedding of Miss Blanche Smith and L. W. Kimball.

Preparations for the supper and entertainment to be given by St. Dominic's church are being made under the superintendence of E. F. Kirchgessner.

Wm. G. Price is very low with heart trouble. It was thought Saturday night he could live but a short time but but he is a very little better at present.

Prof. Clark of Saline gave a free concert at Town Hall Tuesday evening, for the purpose of organizing a singing class here. We did not learn whether he was successful or not.

Tobias Mudgett was fined $7,00 Monday by Justice Brown for keeping his livry barn open to a set of loafers who have no higher aim in life than to stand around some such place and mak insulting remarks to passing ladies.

The work of moving the office at the wollen mill is going on slowly; but like the mills of the God's, "exceeding sure." The force of men employed evidently understand their business for everything seems to be done with a careful regard for keeping the building in good condition.

The young lady contestants for the gold watch to be given by the Catholic society on St. Patrick's Day are, as near as can be learned as follows: Misses Della Lane, Louise VanDeMark, Kit VanTuyle and Mamie Wilson. They are already busy engaged in soliciting votes and bid fair to make a round sum for the Church as well as securing the watch.

The entertainment will consist of two short plays and vocal and instrumental music by both home and foreign talent. This society has not asked the public for anything in several years and are always ready to patronize the other societies, therefore it is to be hoped that everyone will remember that one good turn deserves another" and make their financial harvest a rich one.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, FEB. 26.

The toast to which Grover Cleveland responded at the Jackson banquet in Philadelphia was this: "The Principles of true Democracy; they are enduring because they are right, and invincible because they are just."

When the people shall elect their own United States Senators, the people will have no more expensive dead locks to pay for. The caucus auction system of electing U. S. Senators must be abolished at an early day, or the Senate itself must go.

The dead lock in the Illinois legislature still continues. The Democratic vote of 101 stands solid for Gen. Palmer. The opposition are wobbling about from one candidate to another, but have thus far been unable to settle upon any candidate, who could secure a majority.

Bro. Blaine's Reciprocity scheme is a step in the right direction, but it resembles an attempt to climb into the free trade pasture over the back fence. Why not enter in a manly fashion thro' the front gate?

What is Reciprocity good for without ships? asks a Republican organ. To which the Free Press aptly replies: Suppose we try it with Canada and Mexico and utilize the railroads on this continent.

Ex-Gov. Foster of Ohio, is the success or of Wm. Windom as Secretary of the Treasury. From a political standpoint alone this is a very fair appointment. But under Foster's management, the U. S. Treasury will still be used as an annex to Wall street.

If the McKinley bill was enacted for the purpose of building up a home market, and a home market is such a necessity for the American farmer, why is Bro. Blaine trying to dose it to death with his Reciprocity cordial?

The Republicans have lost their United States Senator in South Dakota. Kyle, the Alliance candidate was supported by the combined Alliance and Democratic vote and elected. This fusion which will undoubtedly be a permanent one, ends Republican ascendency in that State.

The two principles lying at the basis of taxation are these; Equality and certainty. Both are violated in the taxation of mortgages. When the assessment is honestly imposed it is double taxation. When not honestly made, the mortgagee escapes his tax entirely.

The St. Louis Republican says: Mr Cleveland's letter is glorious as a display of moral courage, but it is not politics. But then Mr. Clevland never was and never will be a politician. In writing his silver letter, as in sending his tariff message to Congress, he has had no thought of personal consequence. He is a man of courage and conviction. He is not always right, but when he thinks he is, he is never afraid to go ahead.

The hot heads who were reading Grover Cleveland out of the Democratic Party on account of his silver letter are somewhat ashamed of themselves as they become cooled off. There is not a word in the letter against bi-metalism-not a word to indicate that he would veto any fair silver bill that Congress might pass. He believes that the enactment of the present silver bill would be an unwise experiment. In fact many of the friends of silver are afraid of it.

Our valiant neighbor, Colonel Elliott F. Shepard, hysterically shrieks for an army of a million men to put down the rebellion in the Southern States where several Legislatures have presumptuously dared to intimate that they will not give their support to the World's Fair if the Fraud and Force bill is passed. What a hideous offense it is for any one to oppose the partisan revolutionary schemes of the party of Imperialism! We are sorry for the bloodthirsty Colonel. He ought to cool his heated blood by jumping into the nearest snowbank.—N. Y. Star.

Whatever may come of the Farmers Alliance as a political organization, its labors will certainly improve the politics of the country. In the main the farmers are right, as they are bound to be upon thorough investigation. This government is not too complicated for the people to understand, if they will study its theory, its principles, and its constitution; and when politics absorbs the government for selfish purposes, it is time for a grand round up for another start. That is just what the farmers of the west and south are now doing. Some of their demands are impracticable and others impossible, but they are on the right track and they are evidently determined to go ahead.

MILLIONS AND BILLIONS.

Thomas G. Shearman Discusses "The Coming Billionaire"—Striking Figures on Wealth and Taxation—Burdens For Workers and Millions For Idlers—Indirect Taxes Will Create the Billionaire.

Are we to have a billionaire? We already have by far the richest men in the world. We have one man worth $150,000,000 and a church corporation worth the same amount. We have five persons worth each $100,000,000 or more. We have nine persons and estates worth each $50,000,000 or more, and six worth $40,000,000 or more.

Why should we not have also a billionaire? Shall we not have one? Such are the questions which Thomas G. Shearman discusses in the Forum magazine for January, and his answer is that the billionaire is certain to come if our present system of indirect taxation continues in force long enough. A millionaire now worth $200,000,000 has but to sit still and invest his interest judiciously, and in less than forty years we will have a new wonder of the world—a billionaire.

Mr. Shearman showed in the same magazine for November, 1889, that the total wealth of the country averaged about $1,000 per head of the population. On this basis he shows in the current number of the Forum that the present distribution of wealth in the United States is as follows:

Class.	Families.	Wealth.
Rich	182,000	$43,967,000,000
Middle	1,200,000	7,500,000,000
Working	11,620,000	11,215,000,000

The wealth produced in 1890 is estimated, according to the census returns of 1880, at about $13,000,000. About four per cent. of this must be allowed for repairs and replacement; and after this deduction is made the net product of wealth for 1890 was distributed approximately as follows:

Families.	Average Increase.	Total Increase.
180,000	$25,000	4,500,000,000
1,200,000	1,250	1,500,000,000
11,620,000	560	6,500,000,000

Leaving taxation out of the account, the 180,000 rich families can save about two-thirds of their income, while the rest of the families can not save more than about one-fifth of theirs. But our taxes are mainly levied, not upon property owned, but upon money spent. About seven-eighths of our taxes are indirect. Even local taxation upon banks, mortgages, merchandise and houses, which is usually reckoned as direct taxation, is in reality indirect, since these taxes are shifted back upon the final real tax-payer—the worker and consumer. The tariff tax is of course the most familiar form of indirect taxation, but it is not the only indirect tax.

Mr. Shearman estimates that all this indirect taxation upon expenses averages about 15 per cent. This would make the tax burden borne by the 180,000 rich families, which spend only one-third of their income, $225,000,000 for 1890; and that of the other families, which spend four-fifths of theirs, $960,000,000. Mr. Shearman estimates that about one-third of the whole amount paid in taxes by rich and poor goes not to the Government but to a small section of the richest class. In this way about $400,000,000 is restored to this class for the $225,000,000 which it pays in taxes.

ANNUAL SAVINGS OF THE RICH.

Natural savings		$3,050,000,000
Deduct taxes, etc	$225,000,000
Add profits from tax system	400,000,000
		175,000,000
Total		$3,175,000,000

ANNUAL SAVINGS OF OTHER CLASSES.

Natural savings	$1,000,000,000
Deduct taxes, etc	360,000,000
Net savings	$ 640,000,000

The gain here of the wealthy class over other classes is enough to equal in thirty years, if placed at 5 per cent. compound interest, the present total wealth of the country.

Such are the results of indirect taxation. How would the two classes stand if a system of direct taxation were introduced? Mr. Shearman thinks that under such a system a tax of one and one-fifth per cent. on all property at its full value would be sufficient. The burden borne by each class would therefore be as follows:

180,000 rich would pay	$520,000,000
12,820,000 others would pay	225,000,000

From these figures Mr. Shearman concludes that a system of direct taxation would result in an annual saving to the middle and working classes of $750,000,000 for all time; and this is only a part of the salient benefit from the direct system.

The workings of the two systems may be illustrated by taking the case of a man worth $10,000,000. Under the present system he would not pay more than $15,000 a year, while at the same time living in princely style. But if he is one of the protected classes, if he owns mines or factories, the tariff taxes and other indirect taxes will often bring him as much as $100,000 a year from the pockets of other people. Now how would this pampered millionare fare under a system of direct taxes? He would pay $120,000 a year, and would levy no tribute upon poorer people.

If the present system, therefore, is to continue, the coming of the billionaire is a certainty; and with him will come, on the other hand, a million paupers. The question is, will the present system continue? Mr. Sherman is confident that it will not. The Republicans have made the permanent expenses of the Government so great that a deficit of $50,000,000 is a thing of the near future. Moreover, no system of tariff taxation can be devised which will yield sufficient revenue without re-imposing the tax on sugar. But no political party will hazard such a step after the people have learned the blessings of cheap sugar. Sugar was put upon the free list by the Republicans in order to save the tariff; but free sugar is going to work in precisely the opposite direction. The people will learn through it, as never before, that the tariff is a tax, and they will thus be led to demand the abolition of other duties. The late elections have already doomed the tax on raw wool, and the growers have threatened that the tax on woolen cloth will have to share the same fate. Blaine put forward reciprocity as a means of saving protection; but reciprocity, too, is going to work in the contrary direction again. The people will readily see that an enlarged trade with all the world is a good thing just so fast as they learn that our trade can be enlarged in South America.

Thus there are many signs of the early downfall of protection. Many forces are at work to undermine the system, and as the reign of the extortioner passes away the conditions will vanish which tend to make the billionaire. The abolition of tariff taxation, and other forms of indirect taxes, will prevent the coming of the billionaire.

ANOTHER TARIFF TRUST.

The Soap Manufacturers Extending Their Trust in order to Enjoy Their Tariff Spoils—McKinleyism the Breeder of Trusts.

The Boston Commercial Bulletin, a high tariff organ, prints the following piece of news:

A large number of soap manufacturers in Philadelphia, Pa., have organized a branch of the National Soap Manufacturers' Association. M. M. Ellvenson was elected president, Peter Hay vice president, and William Hamilton secretary and treasurer. The territory covered by the new branch was fixed as Pennsylvania, east of the Alleghenies, New Jersey, west of the New York Association's district, and the States of Delaware and Maryland.

The association here referred to is what is known as the soap trust.

The soap makers are but another of the vast number of industries which are making haste to form trusts in order to "get rid of competition" and enter into the full enjoyment of the spoils which the tariff makes possible. The McKinley duty on castile soap is 1½ cents per pound, on fancy and toilet soaps 15 cents per pound, and on all other kinds it is 20 per cent. ad valorem.

Some prominent Republicans teach the doctrine that in cases where combinations are formed for checking competition or for raising prices the protecting duty should be revised in order to invite competition from abroad. This is the doctrine heard only from the stump; it never appears in practical form on the floors of Congress. The Republican leaders wilfully shut their eyes to the fact that in every department of industry trusts are springing up, and that this pernicious tendency toward consolidation has never been more active than during the past six months. Trusts were sprouting up rapidly even while the McKinley bill was still under discussion; but since the passage of this bill, with all its jobs and deals, the trust-making industry has leaped forward with unexampled vigor. Trusts come so rapidly that it is scarcely possible to keep a record of them.

Some Republican journals are fearful lest these trusts will "undermine the whole protective system." But these journals are clearly not in harmony with the spirit and purposes of the McKinleyites. The purpose of the McKinley law was to raise prices and thus give the manufacturers higher profits. If this was not the purpose of the law, then there should have been no object in passing it; and Republican leaders, like McKinley himself, were doing a very inconsistent and needless thing when they went up and down the country in the recent campaign making speeches against cheapness. McKinley himself said in his speech on his bill last May in the House of Representatives: "We want no return to cheap times in our own country," and he argued that "where merchandise is cheapest men are poorest."

It being thus a sound Republican doctrine that cheapness is bad and dearness is to be preferred, how can Republican newspapers and statesmen consistently lift up their voices against trusts? Major McKinley says that a cheap country "is not the kind our fathers builded. Furthermore, it is not the kind their sons mean to maintain."

Now trusts are the most potent agencies imaginable for realizing the ideal here set forth by McKinley; and if that ideal of a dear country be accepted by the Republicans it is folly for them to denounce trusts. The president of the sugar trust takes this view. He says: "The great cry of one of the great parties is for protection; that is, they cry for it loudly during campaigns. But when we proceed to give ourselves some protection a howl is raised. They demand protection for the industries. When an industry protects itself it is said that it is illegal." The sugar trust was making 20 per cent. on watered capital when this was said; but what good Republicans can object to that? The trust at any rate was a blessing to the country in giving us sugar which was neither "cheap" nor "nasty."

"Blessings of Protection."

When protectionists seek to convince people that protection is a good thing they usually try to show how it has lowered the price of goods. But now that the Republicans have discovered that "cheap and nasty go together," that cheapness is a "curse," that it is "the fetich of the British free trader" and that a cheap coat makes a cheap man, the organs o protection are adopting a new way to show the beauties of protection. The high tariff Philadelphia Press prints a news article under the caption "Blessings of Protection," in which the following sentences occur:

A. Flanagan & Brother are satisfied that business is looking up. Double-reeled yarns, a little finer grade than gray yarns, have advanced over 10 per cent., and the dealer is now beginning to run after the manufacturer.

James Leach, of the Ashland Mills, manufacturers of woolens and worsteds, said Kentucky jeans and shoddy jeans were going up, and all the higher class wool goods are advancing.

Carter & Lord, manufacturers of blankets and yarns, said the business prospects were good. Confidence is restored and the prices of all kinds of stock are ruling higher.

Yet this paper said some time after the election, "there is no more talk of rising prices on account of the McKinley act or any thing else."

What it Costs.

A Missouri farmer figures it out that when corn is 50 cents a bushel, it costs 8½ cents of corn value to make a three-cent pound of hog—for which under Republicanism there is no market but "the Home Market." So it is, in fine sarcasm of the "Home Market" advice, "feed your spare corn to fatten your pork" that he says: "Fifty-cent corn and three-cent hogs is equal to the Louisiana Lottery."

Z. Cook having let his farm will sell at auction at his residence about half way between Aurian and Tecumseh, on Wednesday the 4th day of March 1891, at 12 o'clock m. the following property: One span of Geldings weighing 3 000 lbs, seven year old mare in foal by Old Star; four year old mare, two year old gelding, and one last spring calf. Usual terms of sale. C. C. VanDoren, Auctioneer.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years, ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen;—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience I have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours truly,
L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken intenally.

MARVELOUS ENDURANCE.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swolen ankles, etc. Dr. Franklin Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only relirabler emedy. Sold by Baker & Hall.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

If a price can be placed on pain, "Mother's Friend" is worth its weight in gold as an alleviator. My wife suffered more in ten minutes with either of her other two children than she did all together with her last, having previously used four bottles of "Mother's Friend." It is a blessing to any one expecting to become a mother, says a customer of mine.

What a Difference between the WOMAN who is wedded to old-fashioned ideas and she who is bright enough to appreciate a new one. Everybody is striving to get something to make life easier—often it's right beside them—those who are bright enough to embrace it get the benefits, those who don't go backwards—their work grows harder. Pearline makes life easier and cleaner. Washing and cleaning done with Pearline has about enough work in it to make it good exercise—but not enough to tire the body or ruffle the temper.

Not ours, but the word of the millions who use it as to whether it hurts the hands, clothes or paint—probably your neighbors can tell you all about PEARLINE.

Send it back. Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, the honest thing to do is—send it back. 167 JAMES PYLE, New York.

WHY!

WHEREFORE. The virtues or merits of a remedy for pain do not consist in its being as good for relief as other remedies, but in the fact that it is better, in being more prompt and sure, and therefore the best for the specific purpose. It is not an idle catching that strikes the eye thus:

ST. JACOBS OIL

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR PAIN, IS THE BEST.

It is the best cure for all aches and pains, and it holds

THE TRUE PROOF.

To this specific fact Archbishops, Bishops, Clergymen, Lawyers, Doctors, Governors, Generals, Senators, Members of Congress and Legislatures, U. S. Consuls, Army and Navy Officers Mayors and Officials, testify and unite in saying: "We suffered pain; and St. Jacobs Oil cured promptly and permanently." For the same reason finds what he seeks and needs, is not deceived and will have it at any rate.

OTHER REMEDIES FAILED,

ONE CENT A DOSE.

Nobody likes being sick, yet many are willing to be so rather than face a heavy doctor's bill. But what's the use of suffering at all when relief and cure may be purchased at the rate of one cent a dose, by using Burdock Blood Bitters, a medicine that is guaranteed to cure or relieve all diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels. Two great sources of disease are Dyspepsia and Constipation. They cause Headache, Biliousness, Dizziness, Palpitation and Impure Blood, which in turn causes pimples, boils, blotches, tumors, scrofula and similar diseases, thus affecting the entire system. We guarantee Burdock Blood Bitters if faithfully used according to directions, to cure Dyspepsia and Constipation and all diseases springing from them, and will refund the money to any person not satisfied after using the whole or part of the first bottle. SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

THE STORY OF A CORNER.

At various times between 1807 and 1814 Jean Baptiste Charles Lucas acquired the property which is now embraced between the following streets in the city of St. Louis: Fourth street, Jefferson avenue (which is now Twenty-fourth street), Market street and St. Charles. This bit of ground is twenty blocks long and five wide. It is the heart of St. Louis. Mr. Lucas paid for it $1,364 in "hard money of the United States." Up to the time of his purchases, shaved deerskins at two and one-half pounds to the dollar had been the medium of exchange. "Hard money" was preferred and was not plentiful. The purchasing power of a "hard dollar" is difficult of comparison with the money of to-day; but it was probably worth in St. Louis from forty to fifty per cent. more than the dollar of 1890. Accepting the latter, Mr. Lucas's land cost $2,046.

In 1816 Mr. Lucas added by deed a strip of ground, five by five block, to the town, but it was some years before the limits of the town extended to include this addition. I think it was about 1826 when the western limit was moved from Fourth street to Seventh street, and about 1843 when it went west to Twelfth street. If I am right about the last date, and I think I am, the southeast corner of block 183, which is bounded on one side by Chestnut street and on another by Seventh street, was not within the city limits when, in 1835, James Brotherton bought it from J. B. C. Lucas for $1,596 hard money of the United States.

This little bit of ground was just 1-400 of the ground Mr. Lucas had bought between nineteen and twenty-eight years before for $1,364.

Mr. Brotherton conveyed this quarter block to his sister, Mrs. Matilda Settle, for $5, in 1844, and her husband several years later built upon it a row of five brick houses fronting on Chestnut street and two frame houses fronting on Seventh street. In 1874 the two frames were renting for $600 per year. The corner brick house (used as a saloon) returned $1,000 per year, and the other four houses in the row returned $600 per year each. That was not less than twenty-five years after the houses had been built. They had deteriorated through age and use, but the loss in these directions had been made up by the growth of the city about them. How many years they had been earning $4,400 I do not know, but it is reasonable to suppose they never earned much less.

In 1866 the quarter block, with all of its improvements, was assessed for taxation at $26,230, and paid State, county, school and military tax amounting to $419.68.

George T. Settle inherited this property from his parents, and in 1870, when a commission was looking for a site for a custom house in St. Louis, he offered this for $80,000. The commission agreed to buy, but changed its decision and bought a block two blocks away. In 1874 Mr. Settle sold the property to Henry Corwith of Chicago for $90,000. It was assessed that year at $50,550, the taxes amount to $700.11, and the income was, as I have said, $4,400 per year.

Mr. Corwith spent little for repairs, but the city required $162.33 in special taxes for the improvement of the two adjoining alleys, and $2,344.14 for the paving of the streets on two sides of the property with granite blocks. The assessment fell off to $38,050 in 1881 from $50,550 in 1874; but the tax rate had been increased, and while in the earlier year the amount was $700, it was now nearly $1,000. In 1884 the assessment had advanced to $50,400, and the taxes to $1,285.20. In 1886 the assessment fell $400 and the taxes $35.20.

Jay Gould bought the property in 1887 for $83,000. The buildings on it were very poor, but were still renting for between $2,000 and $3,000. Mr. Gould was then asking favors of the municipal assembly for his railroads, and to conciliate St. Louisans he caused an announcement to be made that he intended to build a ten-story structure on this ground. To give color to this he caused the old, unsightly buildings to be removed.

In 1888, when the assessment was made, the quarter block was bare, save for some worthless foundation stone, and had no more value, apart from its nearness to large numbers of men and to centers of trade, than it had when Pierre and Joseph Becquette, Louis Rideau, Rene Kiercerau, Louis Bissonet and Joseph Gamache cultivated that and adjacent land in the fear of Indians and sight of the fort. However, the assessors, probably taking into consideration the fact that Mr. Gould had paid $83,000 for the property, assessed it at $60,030, and the tax bill that year was $1,380.69. The land yielded Mr. Gould nothing. He would have paid the same amount of taxes in any last before the taxes for that year became due he sold the property to Daniel Catlin for $90,000. He had held the property seventeen months, and had a gross profit of $7,000 out of it. If you charge against that the $1,380.69 taxes you leave $5,619.31, which is equal to seven per cent. on Mr. Gould's investment.

Mr. Catlin did even better. He paid the tax bills of 1889 and 1890—the latter amounting to $1,535.16 on an assessment of $69,780—though on May 20, 1890, he had sold the property to Mrs. Catherine D. Wainright for $127,400. He had a gross profit of $37,400, and a next profit—leaving out of the calculation agent's commissions—of $34,484.15, in eight months, on an investment of $90,000. In the eight months of his ownership he had done nothing to the property. Gould had cleared it. Catlin left it cleared. From the fall of 1887 to October, 1890, three full years, this property was bare and unproductive. Yet its value increased more than fifty per cent. The community (that is, the city and State) took of this, in taxes, $4,296.54; Gould and Catlin took $40,103.46.

Mrs. Wainwright, having paid the penalty, has broken ground for a big building, and out of her tenants must come interest on the sum of her investment.

JOS. L. GOHSE.

THE INDIANAPOLIS SENTINEL.

[From the Standard.]

The Indianapolis Sentinel would be better called the American Sentinel. From our first knowledge of it, it has been vigilant in correcting and courageous in proclaiming the dangers that threaten the liberties of the people of this country. It was an unwavering champion of the Australian ballot, to secure secrecy and independence from spoils brokerage associations in voting; and now it makes a declaration about the single tax, which falls but little, if any, short of a declaration of principles.

On the 14th of September last the Sentinel declared that "the tax on personal property ought to be wholly repealed," and went on to say:

The prospect is that the system of private property in land will remain as it is, for some generations at least; but that all taxes, at least for State and local purposes (except such as may be derived from the sale of franchises), will in the future be laid upon land.

This has been taken up by the Republican papers of Indiana, and the Sentinel and the Democratic party, to which it is attached, are assailed for having come out for "the theories of Henry George."

The Indianapolis Journal, a Republican paper, placed the quotation from the Sentinel at the head of its editorial columns, and suggested that the Democratic party managers should invite Henry George to take a hand in their campaign;" and all over the State the Republican press bristles with indignation at the predicted coming of the single tax.

Some of the quotations are at least amusing. The Evansville Journal discovered that "the single tax cranks are Democrats and free traders in disguise;" while the Lafayette Courier advised "farmers who are favorable to the theory that land should be exclusively taxed for means to provide for public expenses," to vote the Democratic ticket. The Kokomo Gazette-Tribune wanted rather to extend the taxable things and so reduce to a minimum the taxes that must be paid by farm owners and home owners." The Tipton Advocate, more just if not so so shrewd as its adversaries, told its readers before voting the Democratic ticket to be sure they understood "the single tax theory." The Middleton News thought "the single tax theory advocated by Henry George and indorsed by the Indianapolis Sentinel was "very pretty in outline but wholly impracticable," and sagely observed that "it would bear heavily indeed upon land owners if taxes for all public expenses were levied only upon land." The Newport Hoosier State, with a new idea as to the destructability of matter, was in great alarm lest under the single tax land should be "taxed out of existence," and proposed that men who favor a policy so destructive of the very ground upon which we stand, and the air we breathe "be sent to the insane asylum for treatment." And so on, through column after column of paragraphs, culled and reprinted by the Indianapolis Journal, the rural press of Indiana displayed itself for the benefit of the dear farmer, who is supposed to be an object of bitter hatred to single tax men.

The burden of these songs of the Indiana country papers is that the single tax would fall upon the farmer, because he is a land owner, and that the rich who do not own land would be untaxed. For a little while the farmer may be deceived by this kind of trickery. For a little while the farmer may suppose that a tax on land values would be a tax upon him. For a little while he may think that laws for the taxing of personal property are enacted in his interest and operate so as to fall upon the wealth of the rich. But he can not be long deceived. As Mr. Lincoln said, "You may fool all the people some of the time, and some of the people all the time, but you can not fool all the people all the time." This is as true of farmers as of other people. They will soon understand that taxes upon personal property are shifted or evaded by the rich, while farmers are forced to pay them, and that a tax upon the value of land can not be burdensome to a class like farmers, who, when they own land at all own land of very low value. The Indianapolis Sentinel is first in the field among all the established papers of Indiana, to call the truths of the single tax to the attention of farmers. The near future will prove its wisdom and bring it its reward.

What is necessary for the use of land is not its private ownership, but the security of improvements. It is not necessary to say to a man, "this land is yours," in order to induce him to cultivate or improve it. It is only necessary to say to him, "whatever your labor or capital produces on this land shall be yours." Give a man security that he may reap, and he will sow; assure him of the possession of the house he wants to build, and he will build it. These are the natural rewards of labor. It is for the sake of the reaping that men sow; it is for the sake of possessing houses that men build. The ownership of land has nothing to do with it. —Progress and Poverty.

The monopoly of the land gone, there need be no fear of large fortunes. For then the riches of any individual must consist of wealth, properly so-called—of wealth, which is the product of labor, and which constantly tends to dissipation, for national debts, I imagine, would not long survive the abolition of the system from which they spring. All fear of great fortunes might be dismissed, for when every one gets what he fairly earns, no one can get more than he fairly earns. How many men are there who fairly earn a million dollars?—Progress and Poverty.

The masses of men, who in the midst of abundance suffer want; who, clothed with political freedom, are condemned to the wages of slavery; to whose toil labor-saving inventions bring no relief, but rather seem to rob them of a privilege, instinctively feel that "there is something wrong." And they are right. —Progress and Poverty.

THE SHUNAMMITE'S SON.

LESSON IX, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 1.

Text of the Lesson, II Kings iv, 25-37. Commit Verses, 32-34—Golden Text, John v, 21—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

After the dividing of the Jordan to allow Elisha to recross it and the healing of the waters of Jericho, both of which events were in last week's lesson, another miracle in connection with water is recorded in chapter ii. In the beginning of chapter iv we have the record of a miracle in connection with oil; and these three miracles of the spring healed, the ditches filled and the oil multiplied were all wrought by God through Elisha on behalf of the perishing, the troubled and the needy. The God of Elisha is our God, and of Him it is written, "My God shall supply all your need" (Phil. iv, 19.

25. "So she went and came unto the man of God to Mount Carmel."

Our lesson begins in the midst of the story of this woman who dwelt at Shunem, a village a few miles south of Mount Tabor and southeast from Mount Carmel.

26. "Run now, I pray thee, to meet her; and say unto her, Is it well with thee?"

The man of God saw her afar off and thus commanded his servant to meet her and make inquiry for the health of herself, her husband and her child. The meaning of the word "well," as used in this story, is seen in the margin of verse 23, and also the margin of chapter v, 21—Is there peace? See also the text and margin of Gen. xxix, 6; xliii, 27; Ex. xviii, 7; Judg. vi, 24.

And she answered, It is well. The soul in which the Prince of Peace rules shall have peace at all times, even in tribulation (Isa. ix, 6, 7; xxvi. 3; Jer. xxix, 11; John xvi, 33).

27. "And when she came to the man of God to the hill she caught him by the feet."

"Let her alone, for her soul is vexed within her, and the Lord hath hid it from me."

Gehazi would have thrust her away as did the disciples of Jesus many a time (Matt. xiv, 15; xv, 23; xix, 13); Gehazi had so little of the spirit of his master, the disciples so little of the Spirit of Christ. And what shall we say of ourselves?

28. "Then she said, Did I desire a son of my lord? Did I not say, Do not deceive me?"

29. "Then he said to Gehazi, Gird up thy loins, and take my staff in thine hand and go thy way, and lay my staff upon the face of the child."

The prophet seems to understand that the child is dead, and with these words he sends his servant. Better if he had at once done as Elijah did in a similar case (I Kings xvii, 21). If the disciples of Jesus could not cast out the demon from the boy (Matt. xvii, 19, 20), much less could Gehazi with the prophet's staff do anything for this dead child.

30. "And the mother of the child said, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee."

Thus did Elisha say to Elijah three different times, and he is now reminded of his own earnest desire to obtain a blessing.

31. "And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child, but there was neither voice nor hearing."

It is one thing to hold the truth and quite another to be held by it. The prophet's staff in the hand of Gehazi was very unlike the presence of the prophet himself. Preachers and teachers and all Christian workers must be possessed and controlled by the truth if they would be used of God, and truth that does not possess and control us and affect our daily life is not really held by us.

32. "And when Elisha was come into the house, behold the child was dead and laid upon his bed."

The child was in the prophet's bed (vs. 21)—a use of it that the woman never dreamed of when she prepared it for Elisha. When we are blessing others we are often unconsciously preparing a resting place for our own sorrows, a comfort for ourselves in time of trouble.

33. "He went in therefore, and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the Lord."

It is no formal servant and staff business now, but hand to hand and heart to heart work with the dead child and the living God. Now he does as Elijah did. He sees and realizes that the child is dead, and he prepares to take hold of God with as much earnestness as when he sought the double portion of Elijah's spirit.

34. "And he went up and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands."

"And he stretched himself upon the child, and the flesh of the child waxed warm."

Spurgeon says that there is no stretching that is harder than to stretch one's self to a child. (I am indebted to him for many other thoughts in this lesson.) When we do this, however, in honest reliance upon God, there will surely be a response, the flesh of the child will wax warm. Here is a token of returning life.

35. "Then he returned and walked in the house to and fro, and went up and stretched himself upon him."

Not in a moment, nor in a day, does the fullness of life come. We must take as our motto, "Patient continuance in well doing" (Rom. ii, 7), and remember that "In due season we shall reap if we faint not" (Gal. vi, 9). It is not stretching ourselves to the child once only, but repeatedly, and always in sincere reliance upon God.

"And the child sneezed seven times, and the child opened his eyes."

So we must rest not till there is very manifest life. We must cover the children with our compassion, take them to our hearts, work with them and pray for them, in wholehearted reliance upon God, until they can say, "I see Jesus as my own dear Saviour."

36. "So he called her, and when she was come in unto him he said, Take up thy son."

Elisha called his servant, and Gehazi called the woman, and thus Elisha spake to her. She was not deceived, but only tried. God is able to raise up even from the dead. Jesus gave the little girl back to her parents, the son to his mother, and Lazarus to his sisters. He is the resurrection and the life, and the time is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear His voice and come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of Life and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of Judgment (John v, 28, 29). In Rev. xx it is clear that there shall be a thousand years between these two judgments.

37. "Then she went in and fell at his feet, and bowed herself to the ground, and took up her son and went out."

Her soul is no longer vexed within her, but full of gratitude and adoration.

A woman may sew, and a woman may spin,
And a woman may work all day,
But! when SANTA CLAUS SOAP comes into her house
Then vanish all troubles away.

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT

Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.

"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."

REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain 900 years and then move up to second place in 1900, where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration to Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the greatest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

Farmers in Council.

The Institute Held Last Week Thursday at the Opera House in Tecumseh.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE AND AN EXCELLENT PROGRAM PRESENTED.

The Clubs of Northern Lenawee Turn Out in Force and Discuss Farming, Politics, Money, Etc. Fine Recitations and Good Music. A Full Synopsis of the Day's Proceedings.

The Farmers' Institute had awakened such universal interest that by ten o'clock on Thursday morning, the 19th inst., a large and appreciative audience had assembled at the Opera House to attend the morning meeting.

The forenoon exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. R. Wooden, of Cambridge, after which S. C. Stacy made the address of welcome. The thoughts implied in this address were of direct interest to both farmer and villager. The farmer depended upon the villager, and conversely the villager depended upon the farmer. In these days, when trusts and monopolies combine against the laborer, a union of sentiment was imperative between the farmer and the agricultural villager; while especially do the farmers of this community owe a debt of gratitude to the pioneers who have transformed the wilderness into a region of beauty. In behalf of the merchants, professional men and private citizens of Tecumseh, the members of the Institute were cordially welcomed.

The response by the president, Mr. Alex. Richards was timely and fitting. On behalf of the members of the Institute, he thanked the gentleman for the cordial and heartfelt greeting, and could but re-echo the sentiments just voiced,—that the farmers of the community and the residents of Tecumseh maintained so intimate relations that their interests were mutual. We come here to church, to shop, to mill, to market our grain, and on Saturday afternoon to visit, talk politics and lay plans for elections. We as farmers recognize the business men of Tecumseh as our firmest friends. In time of financial depression they trust us for goods, lend us money, and encourage us with extended time. On the other hand the business men can not live without the patronage of the farmers. Their interests are mutual and while the future might develop wonderful growth of the surrounding villages, Tecumseh would ever be the home center, the pride of all who looked upon it as the pioneer village.

Mr. Richards sat down amidst loud applause, after which Mr. A. P. Coddington read a paper entitled, "Small Fruits for Home Use." Mr. Coddington's theory of cultivating the strawberry elicited some discussion, The method advised was to reset upon the same ground year after year. Henry Wilson thought the plan impracticable, as the weeds would soon choke out the roots. He thought farmers had plenty of ground, and might better plant a row on the edge of the cornfield every year. Mr. C. replied that such a plan might produce healthful berries if anybody had time to go and cultivate and pick 'em.

Mr. Benj. Laing thought it would be necessary to supply the ground well with ashes, or the vines would not yield well after the second year.

Mr. C. reaffirmed that he had raised strawberries thirteen years upon the same patch of ground by plowing them under every season. He experienced no trouble with weeds.

The next exercise was a recitation by Miss Nettie Camburn, entitled "The First Settler's Story." The poem is one of the most touching of all of Will Carleton's Farm Ballads, and was rendered in a clear, resonant voice, and with tender pathos. Miss Camburn's elocutionary powers are excellent, and evince study, emphasis and feeling.

THE AFTERNOON SESSION

Was opened by some entertaining instrumental music by Miss Rhoda Benedict. The Opera House was filled, all the seats below and all desirable seats in the gallery being taken. What was remarked in the morning, "that such a programme twenty-five years ago would have been impossible with the farmers of this community," most fittingly applied to the dignified, intelligent, richly dressed audience of the afternoon. The silk dresses, costly cloaks, stylish bonnets, rich furs of the ladies, and Prince Albert coats, patent leather boots, immaculate linen and well-fitting gloves of the gentlemen were a most effectual denial that the farmers were bowed down with hard times. Indeed, a more prosperous looking gathering of farmers probably never assembled in the Tecumseh Opera House.

The first paper of the afternoon was presented by Dr. Loree. The leading thoughts of the paper were, (1) Labor and wealth in government, (2) The farmer's present position as a factor in the government, his ability to choose for himself as to what he shall read, and his devotion to duty, (3) How the farmer has failed to attain to his rightful place in government; the blame largely his own, because of apathy and indifference, but more largely because of the immensity of the power of wealth in the affairs of government; (4) Farmers schools of organization his present opportunity; the importance of maintaining them. (5) The danger of partyism, which had attained to the rankest growth in the history of the nation; partyism another name for idolatry, and a national curse. (6) The imperative duty of farmers and all representatives of labor to come together politically, to avoid class rule or a class party; labor is the rightful ruler, wealth, the present ruler, a failure; no sympathy with the sentiment that the farmer must become the ruling class; no class rule will do;' the most deplorable of all rule is the class rule of wealth; labor's rule is always a rule of service; labor must be restored to its righttul place in the rule, or the nation will crumble as did Rome, Egypt and Persia, by a concentration of money power.

Opportunity for discussion was given, but as none was offered, the paper was accepted as approved.

The next paper was by Mrs. Marshall Reed, entitled "Some Results of Agitation," and was one of the very best of the afternoon. Mrs. Reed read in clear, distinct tones, and with pleasant accent. Her full, round voice easily reached the farthest listener, while the value and importance of the contents of her paper were fully appreciated.

The next was a paper by Mrs. B. Hurry, entitled "Aunt Columbia's Opinion of Homes." Mrs. Hurry's selection was bright and spicy, and yet inculcated political points and truths that hit home to the voter. The style and delivery were most excellent.

The following paper, which called out the most discussion of the afternoon, was presented by George S. Rawson, of Bridgewater, entitled, "Farming—What Ails It?" Mr. Rawson took a directly opposite view of things from his able predecessor, Dr. Loree. He showed that times were better, that all classes were more prosperous, than ever before in American history; that the farmer particularly had costlier houses, better clothes, better carriages, higher bred stock, more books and magazines than ever before. Mr. Rawson's paper was well written, ably delivered, and created a most favorable impression. It challenged a lively and beneficial discussion upon the subject of finance and inspired Dr. Loree to reaffirm that a shrinkage of the volume in circulation is the true cause of the financial depression.

At this point a lady arose and asked the gentleman, "Suppose the volume of money in circulation were increased, if the farmer had nothing to sell, what difference would it make to the farmer?" which prompted the loudest applause of the afternoon.

Mr. Rawson again defined his position as maintained in his paper. Dr. Loree again affirmed that the farmer had nothing whatever to say about prices of grain, etc., but took whatever the dealer offered.

Mr, B. Hurry then took the floor and declared he didn't like growling. He thought farms paid and that agricultural industry should be encouraged. He had confidence in the ability of the men at the head of government affairs, and thought the times were prosperous.

Mr. Clem. Bramble asked if national banks didn't pay, why more had been established during the last year than in any year since 1865.

B. F. DePuy then took the floor. It had been asserted that prices were regulated by the law of supply and demand. If so, why are our mills right here in Tecumseh shipping flour to foreign markets? Why, also, if times are better, have the farms of this community depreciated from $100 per acre to $75, and from that to $50?

This closed the debate The president added a few general remarks, after which Miss Lena Alexander gave a delightful recitation entitled, "The Kiss Deferred."

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Richards then rendered some excellent instrumental music, which closed the exercises for the afternoon.

EVENING SESSION.

The Opera House was crowded to its utmost capacity, many being unable to obtain seats.

The exercises were opened with music by Miss Clara Hayden and Iva Elliott, which was excellently rendered.

Miss Mattie Graves then gave a most inimitable recitation entitled, "The Debating Society." Miss G.'s elocutionary powers are of a high order. The selection was rich with opportunity for varied impersonation, and was one of the most enjoyable features of the entire program of the session.

After listening to some instrumental music by Master and Miss Mellon, a paper was presented by Mrs. F. C. Rector, entitled "The Educational Demands of To-day." The subject was one of direct importance, and at once aroused concentrated interest. It was ably handled, the speaker showing beyond dispute that the masses are becoming educated, and thereby enlightened. Mrs. Rector read in a clear, firm tone, with pleasant but firm emphasis, and was easily heard in every part of the house.

The next, and much anticipated feature, was the singing of Fern Van-Duser. The little lady was dressed in snow white, and looked a veritable little fairy as she tripped lightly forward upon the stage and began her winning song. At the close, a burst of applause that shook the building and almost startled the youthful songstress, broke upon the room. But, after a moment she responded to the encore, singing the inimitable "I'm so Shy."

B. F. DePuy then presented his paper, "The Farmer and Finance." The subject was of vital interest, and the audience quickly hushed itself. The essay dealt mainly with the silver question, and evinced careful research, familiarity with the affairs of government, and mental powers to grasp financial questions of great moment. The general thoughts inculcated were: Too much class legislation; too many restrictive laws; the inequality of gold and silver, and the contraction of the currency. Especially should the increase of currency keep pace with the increase of business.

Mr. DePuy's paper was one of the best of the session. The opportunity was given for discussion, and many present were desirous of entering into a discussion, both of this paper and the previous one, "Educational Demands of To-day." But, owing to the lateness of the hour, the subjects were deferred until some future meeting.

Music was again rendered by the "little folks," after which a bright, sparkling recitation that rested everybody was given by Mrs. C. H. Kemp, entitled, Fourth of July at Jonesville. Mrs. Kemp has made a study of elocution, and thoroughly mastered Josiah Allen at his Fourth of July picnic.

Mr. Clem. H. Bramble then presented a most instructive and valuable paper entitled, "To what extent, if any, should the government manage and control railroads, telegraphs, and postal lines?" The position taken was the affirmative. The speaker handled his subject and its various auxiliaries in a most able manner. The statistics afforded in relation to the actual cost of all the railroads in the United States and the "watered stocks" upon the market were astounding. A railroad king can sit in his private office in New York, and by a single stroke of his pen, take seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars out of the pockets of the farmers, by merely advancing the price of freight on a bushel of wheat five cents. The speaker would have the government take railroads, telegraph lines and forfeited lands out of the hands of monopolies. It was an able paper, well presented and most favorably received. Much to the regret of all present, the lateness of the hour forbade discussion.

A recitation by Master Clarence Hurry followed, entitled "Columbia Crumb." Columbia's career prompted much laughter and good cheer, and again the audience felt renewed.—Master Clarence's singing in the rocking chair was thoroughly enjoyable. We shall expect to hear from him again.

The closing exercise was music by the "little folks," when the chairman announced that the Institute was over.

In recapitulating, one can but affirm that a more intelligent, capable, well-dressed audience never assembled at any farmers' gathering in Tecumseh. Indeed, the very dress and appearance of the entire audience, composed as it was of a majority of farmers, were a living refutation of the oft-repeated assertion that the farmer is battling with hard times. The Institute as a whole was both enjoyable and beneficial. Let us have them oftener.

Most of the papers read during the sessions, we shall endeavor to print in full at intervals, hereafter, when convenient.

Horrible Collision

Occurs Between Trains in a Tunnel.

A NEW HAVEN LOCAL TRAIN AT A HIGH RATE OF SPEED

Crashes into a Train of Sleepers—A Terrible Crash Follows and the the Wreckage Catches Fire—A Number of Passengers Mangled or Killed—Carelessness is the Cause.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—A terrible collision between trains occurred in the tunnel of the New York Central and New York and New Haven railroads this morning. One of the trains caught fire and there was a deplorable loss of life.

At 7:15 a New Haven local passenger train, north bound, approached the station at Eighty-sixth street. The mist filled the tunnel and the lights had partially failed because of the storm of snow and hail this morning. A train of sleeping cars was ahead on the same track as the New Haven train. This was run into by the New Haven local, which was going at a high rate of speed. The crash was terrific, and both trains, engines and cars were completely telescoped and smashed to atoms. The cars of the forward train caught fire from a stove, and the flames rose high above the wreck. When the police, doctors and firemen reached the scene they found the approach difficult by reason of the complete wreck of the cars, combined with the smoke, flames and narrow limits of the tunnel. Groans from the injured and apparently dying people added to the terror of the scene. At 8:45 the body of a woman burned to a crisp, was brought to the surface. At 9 o'clock it was believed that ten dead or dying were still under the wreck.

"The doomed train was the New Haven regular local passenger train which left the Grand Central station at 7:10 a. m. The collision occurred near Eighty-sixth street, in the Fourth avenue tunnel. It was with another train going on tee same track, and the first train ran into it from behind."

The last car of the forward train took fire. The engineer of the first train was killed instantly and both arms cut off. The smash up was so complete the doctors consider it scarcely within the bounds of possibilities that any could come out of it with chances of life. The wreck blocked all traffic for several hours. The scene at the surface on Fourth avenue was one long to be remembered. News of the casttrophe spread like wildfire and a squadron of police detailed to maintain order had all they do to keep back the eager crowd. Men and women tried to reach the door of the underground railroad depot, which is within a few yards of where the collision occurred. Many were in tears and inquired anxiously for the names of those who had been rescued or whose fate was known. At 9:40 it was announced that among the injured are:

Daniel L. Couldred, a colored cook, injured internally while in the dining room car.

Matthew Lynn, brakeman, scalp wounds and shock; taken home.

A woman, unknown, lacerated about the head and body.

At 10 o'clock it was reported that six people had been taken out. three dead and three injured. The catastrophe is attributed to the fact that the former train displayed no headlight on its rear. The headlight was on the northward end of the engine and could not be seen by the engineer of the local. General Manager Tompkins said the engineers of both the New Haven local and of the "Light" engine disregarded the block signals. "My report," said General Manager Tompkins, "is three were killed."

"At Eighty-first street the collision occurred. It was a terrible scene. The engine of one train smashed the switch engine and threw it from the track, along with one car. There was the wildest confusion, and the next moment our engine had telescoped the sleeping car in which were a number of the New Haven road's employes. The sleeping car was on fire before an instant had elapsed. I saw a man with his head partly out of the window of a burning car. The conductor and I tried to save him, but could not. He implored us to kill him, for he was burning alive. The roof of the burning car melted and the molten lead fell on us. The man's cries were agonizing. Then another train rushed by on its way to New York, and the draught caused black smoke to hide the burning car. After that we saw no more of the unfortunate man. Then the fire engines arrived and the work of extinguishing the flames began. I saw two half-charred men taken from the car. One dead and one still breathing. They presented a horrible spectacle and it was a sight I shall never forget. Our train was in the center of the tunnel on the west track. The other train was on the same track and backing when we struck it. We threw the engine of the other train across the east side track, blocking down the traffic. The car next to the engine was badly smashed and thrown on the last track with the engine. It was the opinion of all that the accident resulted from the fact that there was no light on the part of the engine facing our train."

Triple Tragedy in Wisconsin.

MADISON, WIS., Feb. 23.—The home of Rolliff Sanderson, in the town of Perry, twenty miles southwest of Madison, was burned. It was occupied by Marcus Holquarson and his family. The eldest child was cremated and another has since died from its injuries, while the mother, who rushed into the fire for her little ones, has become blind from the effects of the fire.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The Farmer's Social Club held a very pleasant meeting at John Gillespies, Thursday evening Feb. 12. There has not been a meeting at Mr. Gillespies before in a long time, but judging by the members present, it has not been forgotten that it is a good place to go.

The program was well carried out with the exception of music. Mr. Fisher and Mr. Finch both being absent, the question, left over for them to answer, was answered by Mr. Kehoe and Mr. Coddington. Other members of the club also gave their views; but all rather evaded the real question. I think they all had children there, and did not wish to commit themselves.

The discussion of the real question for the evening, was animated; and opinion about equally divided in regard to the profit of keeping stock on a grain farm.

The next meeting is expected to be held at F. C. Rectors Tuesday evening March 10th.

PROGRAM.

In'st-Music.—Eva Rector.
Oration.—Garland Gillespie.
Rec.—May Garlinghouse.
Selections.—Unknown wives of well known men.—Mattie Kehoe.—Lovisa Schreder.—Ora Gillespie.
Select Reading.—Mrs. G. B. Garlinghouse.
Paper.—J. H. Schreder.
Poem.—Mrs. Remington.
Charake.—Mr. and Mrs. Coddington.
Music.—Anna Everhart.
Question.—Are the benefits, either present or prospective, sufficient to warrant the expense of maintaining the state militia? Opened by Mr. A. P. Coddington.

A FINE MEMORIAL SERVICE.

Services commemorative of Washington's birth day were held at the M. E. church last Sunday evening. The panel behind the pulpit platform was decorated with U. S. flags and a large portrait of Washington On the screen at the organ was a chart of the Declaration of Independence, published in the year 1776. Bunting and war trappings were scattered about in profusion. The corner at the left of the pulpit was neatly trimmed in a similar manner. The largest flags in town were brought into requisition and the trimmings were arranged in a very tasty and attractive manner. We understand that Mr. and Mrs. Jehiel Davidson had charge of the decoration. After the usual singing, scripture reading and prayer, the Pastor gave an eloquent eulogy on the life and character of Washington. Dr. L. Barnes followed with a very fine impromptu address in memory of Gen. Sherman. He warmed up to his subject, and his remarks were well received. S. C. Stacy gave a short sketch of and tribute to Admiral Porter. The members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. turned out in goodly number and seats were reserved for them in the front body slips. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity and the services throughout were appropriate and impressive.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

School was out Monday, as it was decided to observe the legal holiday.

The Geometry class will finish their advance work in plain Geometry this week.

The regular examination day comes to-morrow. Quite a number of pupils will come to school too.

The Grecian History class are doing considerable reading in connection with their work outside of the text book.

There will be two more Lyceums held in A room. The boys will have charge of one March 6 and the girls of the other room, March 20th.

Pet VanDeMark, of Clinton, was visiting Flote Rowland on Monday.

Daniel Wilson and family, of Saginaw county, are spending the present week at his father's, Mike Wilson's.

If you are thinking of buying a wheel this season, see Alf. James first. Notice his advt. in another column.

The members of the old Tecumseh City Band are requested to meet at the band room to-morrow evening.

The Good Templars lodge will meet next Monday evening, March 2d, in the new headquarters of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

The Loyal Legion will meet at the home of Mrs. Jennie Hall, Saturday, Feb. 28th, at 2:30 o'clock. A good program has been prepared.

The Michigan club banquet at Detroit on Monday evening, was a big occasion for our Republican friends, and they made the most of it.

Daniel Dougherty, the "silver-tongued," will lecture at the Opera House this evening. Everybody will go, and if you wish a seat we advise you to go early.

Mrs. Willard Gay, of St. Louis, this state, a sister of Mr. A. D. Hall's, who has been stopping at Mr. Hall's since the funeral, returned to her home on Monday last.

Many ticket holders in the lecture course failed to secure reserved seats Tuesday for the Dougherty lecture, and will have to take their chances on standing room in the gallery.

Mr and Mrs. Ed. C. Baird, of Dayton, Ohio, arrived in town last Friday. He returned home Tuesday, but his wife will make an extended visit with her mother, Mrs. E. B. Wood.

The members of the W. C. T. U. are requested to be present at their room, Friday, Feb. 27th, as business of importance will be brought before the meeting at that time.
MRS. H. L. STEWART.

The front-page cartoon in Puck of February 25th, entitled "Where did the shoe pinch?" is a clever take-off on Mr. Watterson's recent letter to Gov. Hill. We suppose that David would like to have the matter dropped; but now that Puck has taken it up, he is not likely to hear the last of it for some time to come.

Such a rush for reserved seats as took place Tuesday morning at Adamson's was never before seen in this town. A big crowd stood in front of the store from six o'clock till nearly noon, most of the time under umbrellas, waiting to be served. And before the crowd dispersed every available seat was taken.

G. P. Waring has transferred his interest in the Michigan Messenger to D. W. Grandon, who will henceforth "go it alone." Well, Bro. Grandon possesses first-class newspaper ability, and will continue to make the Messenger hustle, as heretofore. Under his efficient management the paper will still be found in the van of the newspaper procession.

The Tecumseh & Franklin Farmers' Club will meet at the home of Mr. C. Payne, on the evening of March 4th, with the following program: Music; declamation, Charlie Hurry; dialogue, Bert and Bertha Francisco; reading, Lillian Brown; recitation, Ina Jackson; music, Mrs. Waldron and Mrs. Welch, Mr. VanValkenburg and Bessie Welch; recitation, Elsie Updyke; reading, Mrs. VanValkenburg; charade, Lillian Brown; song, Ina Jackson; chip basket, Fred Welch; rec., Hattie Hurry; song, Mr. VanValkenburg and Ada.

A splendid entertainment was given last evening by Geo. D. Palmer, artist and caricaturist, at St. Paul's M. E. church, under the auspices of the Epworth League. A large and attentive audience was present, and was enthusiastic in its applause of the remarkable talent displayed by the artist. Among the many fine sketches produced were: Mount Vesuvius during an eruption, the American flag, and others. Mr. Palmer's work is beautiful, instructive and interesting, and in the opinion of the masses far excels the famous Beard. His representation of the burning ship, Ocean Wave, being piloted to shore by John Maynard, was thrilling and realistic, and created storms of applause.—Toledo Bee.

Bring your auction bills to the HERALD office.

A. B. Cotton of Chicago was in town a couple of days last week.

The schools were closed last Monday, it being a legal holiday.

C. K. Spafford was taken sick last week and returned to his home at Manitou.

James Cobb of Norvell was shaking hands with his old Tecumseh friends last Friday.

Dr. Snyder has sent in 136 subscriptions for Henry George's Free Trade and Protection.

The rainy weather last week slacked up long enough to accommodate the Farmers Institute.

Mrs. Dr. Kimball of Adrian and Mrs. Dr. Peters of Blissfield, called on Tecumseh friends last Monday.

The annual reunion of the Third Michigan Cavalry will be held at Allegan on Wednesday Feb. 25th.

Mr. C. W. Eisenmann, agent of the Toledo Bee was in town last Friday and gave the HERALD a friendly call.

Last Monday was a legal holiday, but business went on the same as usual except the closing of the banks.

John Johnson of Cone gave the HERALD a call Tuesday. He says there is some mud between Cone and Tecumseh.

We are pleased to see Mrs. E. M. Rowell and her boys at home again and we understand they will remain at least through the summer.

Brewers new No. 8 brick machine is getting a splendid start in the market. Fifteen of these machines are now in process of construction at their shops, and fifteen more orders are already in for machines not yet begun.

Every voter in Tecumseh, regardless of politics, should read a copy of Henry George's Free Trade and Protection. Call at the HERALD office and subscribe at once. All names received will be forwarded the first of next month.

The increase in circulation of the Home Magazine is the wonder of the newspaper world. No publication in the history of journalism has grown in merit and circulation so rapidly as the handsome illustrated magazine conducted by Mrs. John A. Logan.

Although Henry Smith has run the Paper mill a good many years he had some new experience last week. A large quantity of baled straw is piled on the river bank above the mill and during the blow on Friday night, about 150 bundles went keeling down the bank into the river. Some of them floated down stream as far as the old Standish dam. It was a big job to fish them out.

A very successful tableau-entertainment was recently given in New York, the subjects being taken from illustrations in the current magazines. The idea is a simple one, and if the subjects are well chosen it can be made very interesting. The Century Company has prepared a list of suitable pictures with suggestions for any one who wishes to get up the entertainment. They will send it free on request.

With its number for March, The Forum begins its eleventh volume. Throughout the whole period of the ten volumes now finished, the publishers announce that there has been an uninterrupted increase of their business—an indication of the steady growth of the popular interest in the free discussion of the most important subjects of the time. So great has been the growth of the magazine that it is necessary to procure larger office room than the quarters now occupied by the Forum, which, three years ago, seemed large enough for an indefinite period.

The silver medal contest held at Raisin Valley on Saturday, p. m. Feb. 14th. proved to be a decided success. A class of ten of "Columbia's sons" competed for the medal, which was awarded to Garland Gillespie of Tecumseh, his subject being Young America's war-cry. We are glad to be able to say that each member did credit to himself and the cause which he presented and can not but express the wish that they may ever be found casting their influence against our country's greatest enemy. The music by the Rollin quartette was duly appreciated. At the close of the entertainment, Eliza Pate (the successful competitor to the contest held Nov. 15th, was called out, and recited "Not Dead, nor Dying." To the delight of the audience, arrangements are being made for another contest to take place some time during the Spring.

Daniel Dougherty this evening.

Mac G. Fritz has a change of card this week.

If you expect to get a seat at the Dougherty lecture this evening we advise you to go early.

Pulpit and press speak in highest terms of Geo. D. Palmer's Art entertainment, at the M. E. Church, Saturday evening.

The Chicken Pie supper at the Baptis Church Tuesday evening was well attended, considering the stormy night, and passed off very pleasantly.

The State Senate last Tuesday took a vote on the contested seat from this county and decided in f vor of Mr. Morrow, the contestant, unseating the present incumbent Geo. B. Horton.

F. A. Dewey of Cambridge was in town last Saturday and favored the HERALD with a call. Years are beginning to tell upon him but he enjoys talking over old times with his friends as much as ever.

The Box Social given by the S. of V. proved to be a very happy social occasion. The attendance was good and all present enjoyed themselves. Boxes were disposed and a goodly sum was added to the treasury of the Post.

The Masquerade ball at Armory Hall last evening was well attended and many fantastic costumes appeared on the floor. The affair was thoroughly enjoyed b those who were present and was a financial success besides.

The "Detroit Times," Michigan's hustling penny daily, is now out with some new offers to the juvenile portion of the state. This time it offers handsome $6,00 fishpoles, (with reels complete) single and double barreled shot guns and row boats to every one who secures a certain number of subscribers. Circulars, blanks and sample copy of the paper will be sent on receipt of a 2 cent stamp. Address, TIMES, DETROIT, MICH,

The latest discovered metal, lighter than hard wood and stronger than steel. The Michigan Stove Co., after a series of scientific experiments, are enabled to make an admixture of this wonderful metal with their regular high grade iron, with the result of producing smooth castings, additional strength, and preventing cracking; thereby rendering stoves made of this admixture more durable than WROUGHT IRON or STEEL. The "GARLAND," which are the product of this Co., are the only stoves made having that advantage. Remember, when in need of a Cooking Stove or Range that your local dealer is not only here to-day, but you can put your hand upon him next week also.

UNPARALLELED OFFER TO ALL NEW SUBSCRIBERS TO

THE ARENA,

THE BRILLIANT BOSTON REVIEW.

The Publishers of THE ARENA take pleasure in announcing that they have just perfected arrangements by which they can send free, as a premium to every new subscriber of THE ARENA, the COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE for the ensuing year (old subscribers of the Cosmopolitan must remit fifty cents extra.) This is not only the most liberal offer ever made by a leading review, but

THE COMBINATION IS UNSURPASSED.

The subscription price of THE ARENA is $5.00; that of the Cosmopolitan is $2.40. But for $5.00 we will send The Arena and the Cosmopolitan, postpaid, for one year to new subscribers.

How THE ARENA is regarded by Leading Thinkers.

ALFRED RUSSELL WALLACE, LL. D., F. L. S., Author of "Darwinism," "Malay Archipelago," etc. The Eminent Scientist and Author writes:—

"I think you have succeeded in the very difficult task of improving on all existing literary periodicals. The articles deal with questions of vital interest to every thoughtful person."

Rev. CYRUS A. BARTOL, D. D, the Distinguished New England Clergyman:

"The place that was waiting for a periodical, not only free and able, but catholic and comprehensive,—fair to every thinker and just to all thought, while open to any subject, in which our common humanity was concerned,—in my judgment you fill."

OPINIONS OF CRITICAL JOURNALS.

"Full of mental stimulus, of breadth and vitality."—Boston Traveler.
"The Arena is a fine magazine of the best writings."—N. O. Picayune.

"At the head of magazine literature of a superior sort, and is more particularly designed for educated minds."—New York Times.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—This great offer—The Arena and the Cosmopolitan Magazine combined is only made to new subscribers of both magazines. Old subscribers must remit $5.50 when sending their order. Address THE ARENA PUBLISHING COMPANY, Copley Square, Boston, Mass.

DEADLY BULLETS

W. J. Elliott Shoots A. C. Osborn Dead.

Bystander W. L. Hughes is Also Killed.

P. J. ELLIOTT AND A NEWSBOY BADLY WOUNDED.

The Reckless Shooting Occurs on High Street When Thickly Crowded With People to See the Parade—The Arrests.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 23.—At the corner of State and High streets, at 2 p. m., William J. Elliott of the Capital, his brother P. J. Elliott, met F. W. Levering of the World, and Al Osborn, his reporter, and a fusillade of shooting at once began growing out of abusive articles appearing in the Capital of yesterday a week and the World of Sunday.

The throng of people who were on High street were attracted by five successive and sharp reports of revolvers near the center of the street, in front of Schrader's saloon, and immediately hundreds gathered upon the scene to see two men fall dead, three others with blood streaming from their faces and bodies, while another stood holding a smoking revolver in his right hand. The nature and cause of the bloody affair was apparent, for in the man with the revolver was recognized William J. Elliott, editor of the Sunday Capital, while one of the dead men at his feet was Al. Osborn, late of the Sunday World, with whom he has had a newspaper controversy, and the other dead man was W. L. Hughes, an inoffending citizen and chance witness who was unfortunately the victim of a stray bullet from Elliott's deadly revolver.

Those injured were: Pat Elliott, who was shot in the head, side and arm, but not badly hurt; C. W. Sullivan, a clerk of C. C. Griswold's, who while passing the scene was shot in the left arm, though not dangerously wounded; the other was a young boot-black named Scully, who was also only slightly injured.

Pat Elliott says that he was in company with his brother Bill, walking along the street in front of Schrader's, when Osborn stepped out and both simultaneously drew their guns and fired. Osborn, after firing at Bill Elliott, turned upon Pat with his smoking weapon and fired twice, but the latter dodged and escaped with only a flesh wound. While Osborn turned his back Bill Elliott blazed away, killing Osborn instantly, and anther bullet went into the crowd killing who was standing on the pavement watching the formation of the parade. The ball entered Hughes' head, immediately over the left eye and he dropped upon the iron grating in front of Ambos' restaurant, expiring instantly. The sidewalk was strewn with blood and brains, which flowed freely from the gaping hole.

W. L. Hughes was a retired citizen, aged 72 years, who resided with his wife at 78 East Rich street. He was formerly steward of the Imbecile asylum, and until 1876 he was superintendent of the Ohio Furniture works; since that time he has been living in retirement. Only one daughter survives him, who resides in Findlay. The remains were at once taken to the coroner's office, where they are now held.

ELLIOTT'S STATEMENT

Elliott was seen at the station, where he and his brother Patsy had been slated as "suspicious," and asked for a statement. Said he: "I have nothing to conceal. I will tell all I know. I had been at home sick all day and had just come to town to see the parade. I met Patsy (my brother) at Gay and High. I had no gun, and fearing that the men who had been writing me up would shoot, I stopped into Colonel Park's and asked for the gun I left there some time ago. He gave it to me (it is a thirty-two calibre) and I put it in my pocket and Patsy and I walked south on High street. In front of McDonald's hat store I happened to look around and saw Al Osborn firing a pistol at me. He fired, and I drew mine, firing three shots. The fourth time the pistol failed to go off."

"Did you shoot at him?"

"Yes, sir, right at his guts. Then the crowd pushed up in front of me and around me, and I saw Osborn pushing a man (Patsy) and firing at him. I saw an old gray haired gentleman fall and I learn it was Mr. Hughes. I deplore his death more than anything else, for he was my neighbor. When my gun was empty I was seized by two men, one a deputy sheriff and held. I told them the gun was empty and would not shoot."

"Did you see Levering?" was asked.

"No, sir, I did not."

OSBORN'S DEATH.

Osborn and the two Elliotts met in front of Schrader's restaurant, just north of the American house. Reports as to who fired the first shot are contradictory, but it is the prevalent opinion that it was Patsy Elliott. Bystanders say that Patsy Elliott first shot at Osborn from behind and missed him. Osborn then drew his gun and ran towards Patsy with the latter running east toward the state house. Osborn followed him up shooting a perfect volley all the time. W. J. Elliott then ran after Osborn, shooting at him repeatedly. One of the shots from W. J. Elliott's gun grazed Osborn's arm and he turned and fired at the former. The shot missed its mark, and Osborn fled into Malcom McDonald's hat store. As he did so, he turned and fired at Elliott, the elder. The latter fired his weapon almost simultaneously, and the shot took effect in Osborn's chin. It went clear through his mouth, upward and backward through the brain, and came out at the base of the skull. Elliott had followed Osborn into the store and as he fired the last shot grappled with him. In the scuffle which followed both their guns were discharged, and Osborn fell to the floor dead, although the last shot, it is said, did not take effect in either man, the ball which caused Osborn's death having entered his face as he came in through the doorway. Osborn fell upon a large pile of boxes containing hats, and the weight of his body causing the boxes to collapse, they engulfed him, completely covering him. Mr. McDonald, who had retreated to the back part of the store when the shooting began sprang forward and attempted to raise Osborn, but it was useless, as the man was dead.

Elliott retreated out the front door and disappeared in the crowd with the revolver in his hand.

Osborn's dead body laid upon the floor in McDonald's store for a half hour or more. The doors were locked and no one allowed in except a physician and the reporters. Dr. Alex. Neil was hastily called in, and raising Orborn in his arms, attempted to arouse him. The effort was in vain, however, as Osborn was already dead when the doctor arrived. Indeed, death had been almost instant. Until the police squad arrived to remove Mr. Osborn's body, it lay upon the floor surrounded by a crimson pool of clotted blood and brains. The blood had rushed from his mouth in a stream, and completely covered his body and shirt. A part of his moustache was burned off and his face was disfigured by bruises. His eyes were partially open and altogether his face presented a horrible appearance.

After the body had been taken to the coroner's, and the clothes removed, it was discovered that he had received a second wound, which in itself would have produced death. There was a bullet hole through his heart.

WHO OSBORN WAS.

Albert Osborn, the victim of W. J. Elliott's gun, was about forty years of age. He was born near Harlem, Delaware county, and worked on a farm until about fifteen years of age. His early life was spent about Westerville, New Albany and Harlem. When about twenty-two years of age he became a resident of Reynoldsburg and there learned the tinner's trade. He was at one time a candidate for mayor of the latter village. Osborn was always a great reader and became very well educated for a man who had not enjoyed good educational advantages. He was a fluent speaker and a writer of more than ordinary ability. His bad habits and want of refinement gave him associates that debarred him from a more elevated position in his profession.

THE FEUD.

The trouble grew out of an article appearing in the Capital one week ago yesterday, that was a terrible arraignment of F. W. Levering, editor of the World, and Mr. Osborn, who is killed, and one in the World of yesterday, in which W. J. Elliott and members of his family were as scandalously written about. The articles were pronounced villainous by those that read them, and it was predicted that they would lead to bloodshed.

This was the immediate cause of the antagonism, but it is claimed that the ill feeling dates back to the purchase of the World by Levering, the World being, as a Democratic paper, something of a rival of the Capital.

The first article in the Capital charged that Levering, who had just at that time married, had, in conjunction with a woman of loose character, run an assignation house. It also made charges of immorality against private Secretary Meeker, of the governor's office, the apparent object being to hit these men in a tender point, they having just married, and at the same time lay if possible ground for demanding their removal from the official positions they held under the state administration.

In the World yesterday Levering and Osborn charged Elliott with nearly all the crimes on the calendar. The article was as brutally scandalous and outrageous in character as that in the Capital of the Sunday before.

CUT HER THROAT.

Frenzied Admirer Butchers the Married Object of His Affections.

WINCHESTER, IND., Feb. 21.—A horrible murder was committed a few miles east of here about one o'clock in the morning, the parties to the tragedy all being colored. It seems that Anderson Boswell, a young man about twenty-six years of age, made his home near to that of a man named Boss, who had a young wife about twenty-seven years of age. Boswell was frequently seen at the Boss residence, and yesterday evening, Boss being away from home, Boswell went there and remained until about 1 o'clock. Mrs. Boss, her cousin, a man about thirty years of age, and a young lady and a small boy were also there.

About 1 o'clock Boswell started as though he were going home. Mrs. Boss finally went out of the house, remaining for a time, and again went out, when she was heard to scream and run into the house bleeding from a gash across the throat. The man in the house ran to alarm the neighbors, leaving the young lady to hold the door, when Boswell rushed in, and seizing his victim, cut her throat from ear to ear, and also stabbed and cut her in other parts of the body, killing her instantly. He then went to his home, hitched up his horse and buggy and left.

It is reported that Boswell was madly in love with Mrs. Boss, and his attentions being disregarded by her was the cause of the tragedy. Sheriff Fletcher of this city, with a posse of officers, is in hot pursuit of the murderer, and his escape will be almost impossible, but as yet there is no clue as to his whereabouts.

COURT MARTIALED.

Bismarck to be Called Before the Government Bar.

PARIS, Feb. 23.—The Figaro's correspondent at Berlin says that Emperor William has decided to order Prince Bismarck to appear before the court martial to which he would be amenable, as holding a rank in the army, instead of a civil tribunal. The correspondent asserts that Bismarck will be summoned to declare on his honor, whether he is the author of certain published attacks on the government attributed to him.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH.

Four Others Severely Burned.

BRADFORD, PA., Feb. 21.—A special to the Era from Wellsville, N. Y., says the one and one-half story dwelling of Mrs. George Calkinins, on Grove street, was destroyed by fire and a child of Mrs. Calkins was burned to death. Mrs. Calkins and three other children were severely, but not fatally burned.

TERRIBLE FLOODS.

Whole Town in West Virginia Swept Away.

PITTSBURG, PA., Feb. 21.—The Times' Wheeling, W. Va., special says: News has been received that the whole town of Riverside, a suburb of Parkersburg, W. Va., has been entirely swept away by the flood. It contained about 1,000 inhabitants. No loss of life is reported.

Seventy Men Killed

Horrible Catastrophe in a Nova Scotia Mine

By an Explosion of Gas in the Mine Tunnel.

DEATH AND DESTRUCTION ARE DEALT AROUND.

Twenty-five Bodies are Taken Out—There are Supposed to be Many More Yet in the Mine.

SPRING HILL MINES, N. S., Feb. 21.—An explosion took place in the west side of the east slope yesterday afternoon. Already five dead bodies have been taken out. Their names are: Ernest Blainbridge, Herbert Armishaw, Joseph Turner, and two boys not indentified. A rescuing party is engaged in putting up a brattice to restore ventilation. It is feared that a great many others are killed but thus far they cannot be reached. It is impossible to get at those who are imprisoned until some falls of roof are cleared up. It is thought fully thirty men and boys are still in the mine. Among them is Manager Swift, who has not been seen since the explosion. The rescuing party say a great many horses are killed. Some of the injured taken out will die. Black damp has made its appearance. Miners who have come up say the levels are blocked in the locality of the explosion with debris, consisting of timber knocked out by the terrible force of the explosion, which was felt above ground.

Later Account.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 21.—An explosion occurred in one of the Spring Hill mines Saturday afternoon. The loss of life caused by it is appalling. It is now thought that seventy men and boys are dead. Twenty-nine bodies have been recovered. Those brought up dead are:

WILLIAM H. TURNER,
HERBERT ARMISHAW,
ERNEST BRAINBRIDGE,
JAMES MOIRIOR,
ALLAN MCKINNON,
LAUGHLIN MCKINNON,
ARTHUR ANDERSON,
R. A. SHERLOCK,
ANDREW CARMICHAEL,
JAMES JOHNSON,
JOHN MCKINNON,
RICHARD DAWSON,
JOHN BOYD,
MATTHEW COLLINS,
RORY MCDONALD,
SAM MUCKLE,

JOHN BENTLIFFE,
EDWARD SMITH,
JAMES SHARPLESS,
JOHN CARMICHAEL,
JOSEPH TATTERSALL,
WILLIE BROWN,
PHILIP B. WHITE,
THOMAS HOLLET,
DAVID WATT,
WILLIAM MCKEE.

The work of recovering the bodies is being pushed forward. Many of the bodies taken out are almost unrecognizable. The dead are being identified by sorrowing friends and relatives amid heartrending scenes.

NO ESCAPE.

AND SIX PERSONS PERISH IN THE FLAMES.

Heroic Work of the Firemen Save Many Others From a Similar Fate.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 21.—Another tenement house fire similar to that of last Thursday, in which five lives were lost, occurred Saturday night. This time six lives were lost. They are Margaret Griffin, aged 50; Margaret Dorney, aged 30, and her two young children; Jacob Benedict, aged 72, and his grandson, Edward Benedict, aged 18 months. The fire was in the double five-story tenement house, No. 129 and 131 Sands street. The flames were first discovered in the lower part of the building, and spread so rapidly that the many persons in the upper stories were entirely cut off from the street. These people crowded out on the fire escapes and piteously appealed for assistance.

The firemen soon arrived and with much difficulty and great risk rescued them. It was thought everybody had been taken out, and the firemen then turned their attention to fighting the flames which had gained great headway. After two hour's work the fire was extinguished and then it was learned that the fire had been attended with a fearful loss of life. Margaret Griffin was found on the roof and her body presented a fearful sight, being burned almost to a crisp. On the third floor the two Dorney children were found clasped in each others arms. In a rear room on the same floor the mother of the little ones was found burned to a crisp. She lay near a partly opened door, and had evidently tried to reach her children when the flames overtook her. On the fourth floor the bodies of the Benedicts, grandfather and grandson, were found. Their bodies were badly burned.

WITH ACONITE.

A Jealous Farmer Kills Two and Commits Suicide.

LEHIGH, NEB., Feb. 23.—News has just been received here that H. C. McCubben, a ranchman living within four miles of here, had shot and killed his wife and cut the throat of Frank Yab, his hired man Thursday. He afterwards killed himself by taking a dose of aconite. McCubben was jealous and suspected his wife of sustaining illicit relations with the hired man. He was a prominent Republican in the county.

TWO CHILDREN BURNED

While the Father and Mother Are Absent.

MONTICELLO, WIS., Feb. 21.—A farmer named Johnson, living north of here, on returning home last night from New Glarus found his house burned to the ground and his two little children burned to death. His wife was away some distance after water, and knew nothing of the fire until she got in sight of the burning house.

EUPEPSY.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you Good Digestion and oust the demon Dyspepsia and install instead Eupepsy. Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

THE FARMERS' PAGE.

THE ALLIANCE IN POLITICS.

One branch of the Alliance—the Northwestern—has declared in favor of the nomination of a farmers' ticket in 1892 for president and vice president. Such action on the part of a large body of voters brings to the front the question of the permanency of our present farmer organizations. Unless the Alliance has come to stay, the withdrawal of its membership from the old parties may cause our occupation to lose the benefits to be derived from the revival of interest in our welfare now being manifested by our legislators. While we doubt the sincerity of these new converts among our politicians, yet the chief thing is the accomplishment of our aims, with little regard to the willingness or honesty of purpose of the men we may compel to do our bidding.

This much may, however, be said for those that are now apparently so interested in pushing legislation favorable to the farmer. Candidates for re-election naturally look for approbation of those constituents that show the most interest in their work. Any legislator that would be inclined to support measures favorable to agriculture, and that are opposed in the interest of rings, could not do so with any expectation that he would be championed by those whose interests he guarded, and he could expect the active opposition of every ring he opposed by his vote. It is all right to say that an honest representative will always do the right, but politics is very practical, and the one that would serve the taxpayers that are outside of rings has had little to uphold him. The farmers have always allowed nominations to be dictated more or less, and have generally taken their cue from local ward politicians, and the result is that they have generally not deserved good treatment by their representatives. Now, however, it is reasonable to believe that the Alliance would give substantial support to the men that are sincere in their desire to be straight, honest advocates of an economical and just administration of our affairs. Herein lies hope with the old parties.

If the farmers form a new party and withdraw their support from those that are now, sincerely or insincerely, trying to serve them, they should have assurance of the permanence of its support.

The Alliance is the result of an uprising of the people against ring and corporation rule. It is formed of a class who do not generally take any great interest in politics or political methods.

They may be interested, but not actively so; only far enough to go to the polls and vote the party ticket. This has been their attitude in the past, and as soon as they see some practical accomplishment of the work they have set out to do, the danger is that they will relapse into their old position and no longer give active support to their chosen leaders. These popular uprisings are generally effective, but not lasting. They are a protest against misrule, and with a change, or promise of change the protest is withdrawn.

We have a few men with a mental vision narrow by nature, and warped by prejudice, that find it hard to realize that the masses are objecting to present conditions. They see in such an admission a reflection upon the old party leaders, and having a "hope long deferred" that their labors for their chosen party will not go unrewarded, as they must be if new parties arise and are successful, they would fondly see in the Alliance only an organization for the cultivation of the social faculties. This is only blindness. The Alliance intends to be a force in the regulation of public affairs. That is just what it is here for, and its object is in accordance with the views of all farmers, except that hybrid brought into existence by the fertilization of a farmer's mind with the ideas that dominate a ward politician. This is a cross that is harmful to the country's interests, and would be disastrous if it were influential.

It is the intensity of this impatience with the men that have given us present legislation that has led the nonsecret Alliance to declare in favor of third party action. Nothing can be said in criticism of the justice of this action, and the only question is one of the wisdom. If there is permanency in this movement, and the citizens' Alliance is brought into it, thus expelling the class features of the new party, all may be well. Every sincere and unprejudiced farmer may wish it success, but many could have hoped that such action would have been deferred until we could see the outcome of the present interest in our legislative bodies.

It would seem that in strong Republican counties or districts, true Alliance men that are naturally Republicans could be elected to fill our office, and in Democratic districts, Democratic Alliance men. Such a scheme should work. Such men would not be the dominant party, and our ends as farmers would be attained. In such a plan there would be but one point to guard. The farmers that have axes to grind are wedded to their old parties—men that do not accept the Alliance idea, but believe that the policy of their party has always been right in the past—Such men would have to be watched and relegated to the rear. This can easily be done, however, and public disapproval of any farmer as a representative of Alliance principles by the Alliance in this country would be all that would be necessary. A thorough going Alliance man from the dominant party in a country could always be elected, and serve us as well as a third-party man. The failure to secure the nomination and election of farmers at the last election was due to lack of organization.

If however, the northwestern Alliance persists in its intention to go out of the old parties, it may be best for all farmer organizations to assist them, as the farmers cannot afford to be divided in policy.—Ohio Farmer.

THE OUTLOOK FOR REFORM.

Congressman Springer Gives His Views on the Situation—The Predicament of the Republicans on the Tariff Question—The Democrats Will Keep the Question Open For the Battle of '92.

Congressman William M. Springer was recently in New York, and while there he was interviewed by a member of the Reform Club on the present outlook of tariff reform. The Illinois Congressman said:

"The Republican politicians of Washington are now endeavoring to divert public attention from the principal issue upon which they were repudiated at the November election. They seem to be of the opinion that there is but one way open through which success is possible in 1892. Upon the tariff question they have been thoroughly repudiated. They now hope by reviving sectional issues, through and by means of the force bill and appeals to sectional prejudice, to reform political issues upon other lines than tariff and taxation. In this they will be as much disappointed as they were overwhelmed by the result of the recent election. The people of the country have pronounced against taxation of the many for the benefit of the few. They will not give up this issue until it has eventuated in practical legislation in accordance with their demands. If we were now living under the form of government which prevails in monarchical England, the new Congress would be at once convened and the McKinley bill would be repudiated immediately; but under our conservative methods we must abide the constitutional forms required for securing results.

"On the tariff question the Republicans can neither go forward or backward with any prospect of bettering their condition. To stand still is conceded defeat; to move in the other direction offers scarcely less advantage. If they go forward they must rely upon the fulfillment of pledges made before the election and pending the passage of the McKinley bill, to the effect that while prices of articles affected by the tariff might be temporarily advanced, yet, ultimately and in the near future, by means of competition, such prices could be greatly reduced and articles would be sold cheaper than before the passage of the bill, thus placing their reliance in the future for a reversal of the popular judgment in November upon a claim that competition is to come to their relief, and that by the time of the next Presidential election the people will be in the full enjoyment of cheap necessaries of life secured through competition. This hope is a flattering one; it can never be realized.

"Competition has already done its perfect work in this country in the matter of reducing prices. So perfectly has competition been carried on that combination for the purpose of arresting competition has been resorted to all along the line. There is scarcely a manufacturing industry in the United States that is not more or less controlled by some kind of combination for the purpose of limiting the output and regulating the prices. In some cases this combination has taken the form of trusts, or organized monopolies. These trusts have secured the concentration of nearly all the capital engaged in a given industry, and by this combination a complete control of the output and prices has been secured. In other cases a more mild type of combination has been resorted to. In some cases the combination has been secured by means of correspondence between the various interests and a tacit agreement reached as to output and prices, year after year. But through one form or another scarcely an industry can be mentioned in which further competition is not prevented or made impossible by the mutual concurrence of those engaged in the business.

"Those, therefore, who look to competition for a reduction of prices will be deceived. Prices of manufactured articles can only be reduced, while the McKinley bill is in force, by the reduction of wages or by the adoption of improved processes. The latter will come without the tariff; it is entirely independent of it. In most lines of industry it would seem that the processes of manufacture were almost perfect at this time; but still we may hope for continual improvement in this direction, although such improvement will scarcely be perceptible in the brief space of two years. Lower prices, secured by reduction of wages, would be attended with greater disaster than if present prices should be maintained and wages increased; so that wherever cheapness is secured by reduction of wages the remedy will be worse than the disease—speaking in a political sense—as it will affect the interests of the Republican party. Hence it seems conclusive that the Republican party can not improve its position on the tariff or on taxation by adhering to the McKinley bill.

"If, however, the leaders of the party should determine to reverse their position, overturn the leadership of Harrison, McKinley and Reed, and put Mr. Blaine forward with the implied promise of the repeal of the McKinley bill, the enlargement of trade through reciprocity and the bettering of their condition by repudiating all that the Republican party has done since it came into power, it will find this latter condition more hopeless than the former.

"President Harrison in his message to Congress 'pointed with pride' to the fact that there had been, recently, an increase in the prices of agricultural products, such as corn, wheat, etc., and he endeavored to convey the impression that such increased price of agricultural products was the result of the McKinley bill. Nothing could be further from the truth. If he had taken pains to examine the report on the condition of the crops—which issued from the Agricultural Department almost simultaneously with his message—he would have found that in Kansas the average yield of corn per acre was only eleven bushels, whereas it ought to have been thirty. The very fact that there is almost a total failure of the corn crop in Kansas was one of the reasons which produced the political revolution in that State. The failure or shortness of the corn crop in the great corn belt of the country caused scarcity of this product, and scarcity resulted in higher prices for corn. But the trouble with the farmers was that they had little or no corn to sell, and many of them who had stock to feed became buyers at the higher rates which scarcity had produced. The prices of agricultural products are determined entirely by the extent of production, and this is governed by natural causes, not by legislation.

"A failure of crops in this country is regarded by the farmers as the greatest calamity that can befall them. But such failure inevitably results in higher prices of farm products; and, therefore, the President has cited as an evidence of prosperity that which the farmers themselves regard as a calamity, namely, higher prices resulting from crop failure. There can be no combination among farmers to reduce the output of agricultural products; such combinations are not even desirable. Farmers universally strive for bountiful harvests—the pious ones among them praying as well as laboring for them. They regard a bountiful harvest as essential to their prosperity, notwithstanding the fact that the greater the crop the less will be the price of products. They are political economists who believe, who realize in fact, that abundance is wealth, that scarcity can never tend in that direction. If the next season should be favorable and large crops of wheat, corn, oats, and other products of the farm, should be realized, there will be a corresponding depression of prices, and the larger the crop the lower the prices. If such should be the result, a year from this time the President in his annual message would—following the lines of his last one—deplore the unfortunate condition of the country, brought about by low prices for farm products caused by abundant harvests!

"The Republican leaders can not hope to divert the attention of the country from the tariff question whatever they may do, whether they go forward or go backward. The Democratic party has a plain, unmistakable duty to perform; that duty consists in moving steadily onward and pressing the advantage which it has already obtained. It will keep this question before the public until the fruits of victory have been realized; until the McKinley bill has been repealed, and until materials which make profitable manufacture impossible have been relieved from unnecessary burdens, and so cheapened as to not only aid manufacturing, but increase profitable production. It will demand larger markets for American farm products; not only reciprocity with Cuba, South America and Canada, but freer trade with all the world.

"The late election was only the expression of a popular desire; that popular desire has not been accomplished. It may not be fully realized until after the next Presidential election, at which the final and complete victory will be achieved, namely, the election of a President and both branches of Congress, who will carry into effect the popular verdict of last November. During the Fifty-second Congress the large Democratic majority will keep this question continually in view. It will not be turned to the right nor to the left; it will not permit side issues of any kind to interfere with this all-absorbing and all-important question. With the advantages already obtained it will be little less than criminal to permit any thing to occur which would make impossible ultimate and complete tariff reform."

COMPETING WITH CANADA.

A Cheap Pretense That the McKinley Tariff Protects the American Against the Canadian Farmer.

One of the cheap pretenses of the McKinley tariff law is that it protects our farmers from the Canadian farmer. But any American farmer who knows any thing about the vast quantities of farm products which we are selling in Canada every year will understand how to rate McKinley's "farmer's tariff" at its true value.

McKinley raised the duty considerably on all farm animals, as if fancying that our farmers were being injured by the few animal brought from Canada. Our imports of various animals from Canada for the fiscal year 1889, were: Cattle, 43,700 head; horses, 19,000; sheep, 392,000; all other, 11,000. Our exports of animals to Canada were not so large, being: Cattle, 800 head; horses, 1,100; hogs, 33,000; sheep, 27,000; all other, 3,600. But when animal products are considered we turn the tables on Canada on a grand scale. Our imports of meat products of all kinds from Canada reach $162,000 worth; butter, 87,000 pounds; cheese, 2,100 pounds; condensed milk, $2 worth. Our exports to Canada were as follows: Canned beef, 6,000,000 pounds; fresh beef, 570,000 pounds; salted beef, 7,000,000 pounds; tallow, 800,000 pounds; bacon, 28,900,000 pounds; hams, 2,200,000 pounds; pickled pork, 20,000,000 pounds; lard, 14,000,000 pounds; mutton, 160,000 pounds; butter, 7,120,000 pounds; cheese, 10,000,000 pounds.

The figures for crop products are also largely in favor of our farmers. We buy from Canada 11,300,000 bushels of barley, 174 bushels of corn, 20,000 bushels of oats, 1,170,000 pounds of oatmeal, 129,700 bushels of wheat, 430 barrels of flour, and $54,000 worth of all other kinds of breadstuffs. On the other hand, we sell to Canada 6,000 bushels of barley, 8,000,000 bushels of corn, 160,000 barrels of cornmeal, 285 bushels of oats, 200,000 pounds of oatmeal, 101,000 bushels of rye, 1,850,000 bushels of wheat, 930,000 barrels of flour, and $130,000 worth of other breadstuffs. We sell Canada also $2,900,000 worth of cotton.

For the year ended June 30, 1890, our imports from Canada amounted to $40,522,000, and our exports to that country were $52,219,000. All the figures given here inclune British Columbia, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Newfoundland and Labrador.

—Linen shirts and shirt fronts paid 45 per cent. duty under the old tariff; the McKinley duty is 55 per cent. Embroidered shirt bosoms paid 30 per cent.; the McKinley duty is 60 per cent.

PRONOUNCED HOPELESS, YET SAVED.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my Lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's Drugstore, regular size, 50c and $1.00.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many costomers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, Knightstown Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction." Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

ONE DOLLAR WELL INVESTED.

If you have bad breath, constipation, pain in the small of the back, discolored skin, nervousness, or dizziness your only wise course is to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. It will cleanse the blood of all impurities, regulates the Kidneys and Liver, and thus restore a healthy glow to your checks again. All druggists; one dollar a bottle.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, tetter, chappep hands, chilblains corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box for sale by John J. Orr.

PUBLIC SAFETY DEMANDS

That only honest and reliable medicines should be placed upon the market. It cannot, therefore, be stated too emphatically, nor repeated too often, that all who are in need of a genuine Blood-purifier should be sure and ask for

Ayer's

Sarsaparilla. Your life, or that of some one near and dear to you, may depend on the use of this well-approved remedy in preference to any other preparation of similar name. It is compounded of Honduras sarsaparilla (the variety most rich in curative properties), stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, and the iodides. The process of manufacture is original, skilful, scrupulously clean, and such as to secure the very best medicinal qualities of each ingredient. This medicine is not boiled nor heated, and is, therefore, not a decoction; but it is a compound extract, obtained by a method exclusively our own, of the best and most powerful alteratives, tonics, and diuretics known to pharmacy. For the last forty years, Ayer's has been the standard blood-purifier of the world—no other approaching it in popular confidence or universal demand. Its formula is approved by the leading physicians and druggists. Being pure and highly concentrated, it is the most economical of any possible blood medicine. Every purchaser of Sarsaparilla should insist upon having this preparation and see that each bottle bears the well-known name of

J. C. Ayer & Co.,
Lowell, Mass.

In every quarter of the globe Ayer's Sarsaparilla is proved to be the best remedy for all diseases of the blood. Lowell druggists unite in testifying to the superior excellence of this medicine and to its great popularity in the city of its manufacture.

THE GIRL FOR ME.

Hast ever seen a little girl
Whose merry eyes and glossy curl
Would set the dullest heart awhirl?
Well, that's the girl for me.

A girl that's lovely every way,
Who doesn't give for mere display,
But gives thro' love. Again I say
That's the girl for me.

Her alms bestowed with gentle grace
Doth beautify her gentle face,
The gentlest of her gentle race,
A very lovely girl.

Performs her father's least demand,
And with some friends has joined a band
Whose mission 'tis to lend a hand,
So sweet a girl is she.

She uses every moment so
That whether weal or whether woe
They're always better, those who know
This charming girl of mine.

And when her loving acts I see
Her captive I would long to be,
For certainly she seems to me
The dearest girl of all.

Hast ever seen this little girl
With merry eye and silken curl,
Who sets the dullest hearts awhirl?
Well, she's the girl for me

HANDY WITH FRACTIONS.

Alan's Uncle's Experiences With Applied Mathematics.

"I can do any example in fractions, uncle," said Alan the other evening as he experimented with the cat to see if he could hold that patient animal near enough to the grate fire so that its hair would shrivel without any marked protest from pussy.

"Indeed," said uncle, indulgently, lacing his fingers across his waistband and extending his feet toward the fire; "I used to be quite handy with fractions myself. In fact, I excelled in mathematics. Your poor father, now, had no faculty for them. It is singular how diversified talents are in the same family, singular, indeed."

"Henry was considered the best mathematician in his class," said Alan's mother, with a little flush.

"In pure mathematics, Mary, in pure mathematics, only," responded uncle; "but in the applied article he was lamentably weak."

What Alan's mother might have replied to this was lost in interest in Alan's experiment in which the cat suddenly ceased to be a passive agent. By and by, when Alan had bathed the scratches on his hand and convinced himself that the wound on his ear was only a superficial one, he said: "Give me an example, uncle."

"Certainly," said uncle, affably; "add two-thirds and four-fifths and subtract one-seventh."

Alan worked away for a minute and then asked: "What is the answer, uncle?"

"Er—I think you had better let me see how you have done it, my boy. That will do you more good. Um—ah—35, no, 105—yes, to be sure. Why, no; the one-seventh is to be subtracted. Fifteen, 10, 12, 22, seven over; that makes one and seven-fifteenths. Now let's see—yes, 105. How will that come out? Yes, that's right—one and thirty-four-one-hundred-and-fifths. Quite right. Alan, you have the answer, only your way of doing it is a little peculiar."

"It took you a long time to do it, uncle."

"Yes, the light was bad. I couldn't see the figures very well. You could improve on your figures, Alan."

"Give me another, uncle, please. Make up a tough one, can't you?"

"All right. John and James—you'd better write this down—John and James had 20 cents between them; John bought three apples at 1⅜ cents each; James bought a jack-knife with four blades; for the big blade he paid 4 cents; for the little blade, 1½ cents; for the file blade, 5 cents; for the blade with a nick in it, 3½ cents, and for the handle twice as much. How much money did they have left?"

"Twice as much as what?"

"Twice as much as—why twice as much as for the little blade, of course. That is what I said. Now, how much did they have left?"

"Nobody ever bought a knife that way."

"Probably not, but that is applied mathematics, applying principles to every-day transactions such as you will engage in when you get older. Still, perhaps, that is a little too far along for you?"

"Oh! I can do it easy enough," said Alan, and he went to work. In a few minutes he began to look puzzled; then he asked: "What do you want to know?"

"How much they had left?"

The puzzled look grew as the figures multiplied. "Why," said the boy, finally, "they wouldn't have any thing left. They would owe, or James would owe, 1 5-6 cents on the knife, or John would have to give up some of the apples."

"Eh?" said uncle, with a start; "how's that?"

Alan went carefully over the problem step by step, and, as he proceeded, uncle's confidence in himself disappeared, and in its wake ran embarrassment and humiliation. But uncle has not lived two score and more years in this world of perplexities for nothing, and when he was led to see that Alan was right uncle was himself again. "Ah, yes," he said, "you are quite right, my boy, entirely right. I was wondering if you would find it out."

"But I don't understand how there can be any thing left."

"There isn't," said uncle, composedly. "I didn't intend there should be. You may remember that I told you this was applied mathematics—applying principles to every-day transactions were, I think, the words I used. It is nothing uncommon for men to buy more than they can pay for. In this simple problem you have gained an insight into one of the great principles of business life. It is well for you to mingle theory with practice, an excellent idea, indeed."

The paper behind which the face of Alan's mother was hidden was shaking, and there was a look on her face of merriment struggling with mild indignation. Uncle settled back in his chair, laced his fingers again, and realized that he had crawled through a very small hole and saved all the buttons on his waistcoat.

"Let me give you an example, uncle," said Alan, thoughtfully. "Not a made-up one, but one from the book. I'll come to them pretty quick and I would like to know how to do them."

"Er—perhaps you had better wait till you get to them," said uncle. "It is just as well not to cross a bridge—" Just then the eyes of Alan's mother appeared over the top of the paper and looked straight into uncle's. That gentleman cleared his throat and said, hastily: "All right, my boy, all right; let's have it."

Alan turned the leaves of his arithmetic and then read:

"A father left his eldest son three-sevenths of his estate, his youngest son four-sevenths of the remainder, and his daughter the remainder, who received $1,733⅓ less than the youngest son; what was the value of the estate?"

"Please read that over again," said uncle, nervously. Alan did so.

"Well, the first thing to do," said uncle, "is to find out what is the value of the estate."

"That's the last thing in the book."

"Eh? I am afraid I did not understand the example. You should learn to read more plainly, young sir."

Alan read the example again and uncle said:

"Oh, yes, I see. Please get me some paper and a pencil, you might get several sheets of paper so we will be sure to have enough." While Alan was getting the paper uncle said: "You don't mind my lighting a pipe, do you, Mary? I can always work better when I'm smoking. It's a habit I acquired in college. It seems to brighten my reasoning faculties."

"Not at all," sweetly said the lady addressed. "I believe the reasoning faculties should be as bright as possible."

Uncle did not say any thing in reply; in fact, it was some time before he uttered a word. Then he looked up from a sheet of paper crowded with figures and said, impatiently: "There never was an estate in the world divided in such an idiotic fashion. A man who would make such a will would be declared insane in any court on earth, and the will would be broken."

"Perhaps that is pure mathematics," suggested a voice behind the paper.

Uncle broke his pencil point in some way just then, and when Alan sharpened it he got up on his knees in the chair, with his feet tucked under him, and took a fresh sheet of paper. When that was nearly covered he said: "There, there's your answer; $1,824 9-77, and a pretty small estate that is to put into an arithmetic."

"Why, uncle," said Alan, "I don't see how that can be, for the daughter got $1,723⅓."

"What kind of an arithmetic is this, any way?" growled uncle. "It's an outrage to make such books. When I was a boy we had sensible school books and—"

"That is your old arithmetic, Robert," said the lady behind the paper. "When I found they were using that kind, I told Alan he might as well take yours as to buy a new one."

Uncle got down from his chair, walked slowly around the table, climbed up again.

"Is that to change your luck, uncle?" asked Alan. "They say it will do it."

"Mary," said uncle, indignantly, "you ought not to let Alan get such vulgar superstitions into his head. Mathematics, sir, are not to be conquered by luck."

Fresh sheets of paper were taken and a maze of figures grew under uncle's hand. Around the edge of her paper Alan's mother saw experiments in proportion, alligation, arithmetical progression, and here and there a dash of algebra. The domain of mathematics was ransacked from center to circumference, and victory came at last. "That estate," said uncle, impressively, "was worth eactly $2,111 13-32," and he said it in the tone of a man ready to fight if his word was disputed.

"I presume that is right," said Alan. "Any way, that is the answer in the book. Now here is an easy one—at least, our teacher says it is easy," and he read:

"If 20 men in 21 days, by working 10 hours a day, can dig a trench 30 feet long, 15 feet wide, and 12 feet deep, when the ground is called 3 degrees of hardness, how many men in 25 days, by working 8 hours a day, can dig another trench 45 feet long, 16 feet wide, and 18 feet deep, when the ground is estimated at 5 degrees of hardness?"

As step by step the features of this problem were presented to uncle, that gentleman slipped further down into his chair. When the voice of the reader stopped, he looked like nothing in the world so much as Grandfather Smallweed, if that amiable old person could be imagined as deprived of even the presence of the "Brimstone Cat!" The eyes of Alan's mother appeared over the paper and the abject appeal they saw in uncle's eyes could not be resisted.

"Alan," she said, "it is your bedtime. Uncle is tired."

Alan gathered up his books, kissed his mother, bade the figure in the chair good-night, and said cheerfully: "We'll try pure mathematics next time, uncle."

"Society" Disappearing.

In this democratic nineteenth century, "society," in the old and aristocratic sense of the term, is disappearing. People of a certain class and certain means do certain things at certain times because other people of the same class and the same means do likewise. There is a universal tendency toward the equalization of luxury and of the exterior manifestations of refinement. Social habits are formed on the models established by two or three great centers of civilization, and all the life that you find elsewhere is a more or less pale reflection of the real article. With the increase of facilities of communication originality of all kinds decreases, and the search for local color becomes more and more hopeless.—Theodore Child, in Harper's Magazine.

Attention, Comrade.
DO YOU WANT A PENSION?
Do You Want Your Pension Increased.
There is a New Pension Law and nearly every soldier is now entitled to a pension.
DR. J. H. REYNOLDS
Late a member of the Board of Examining Surgeons at Adrian, Mich., and who has examined over two thousand soldiers for pensions, will hereafter devote two hours each day to
PENSION BUSINESS
The Doctor was a soldier and is a pensioner, and with his five years' experience as Examining Surgeon for Pensions, believes he can make it PAY YOU to come and see him.
He knows the RATE on every known disability
Knows what Diseases or Disabilities are the results of any other.
Knows (as every EXAMINING SURGEON will tell you) that many men do not draw what the law allows them, because their claims are not presented in proper shape.
Knows how to put your claim in such shape that you will get pay for ALL results of the disease or wound for which you are pensioned.
Knows all the recent decisions made by Commissioner and how to give you the advantage of them in dollars.
Knows that some recent rulings are of vital importance to many pensioners, if their claims are only properly presented.
Knows whether you are entitled to Rerating, and how to get it.
I charge just the legal fees because I earn them
ALWAYS BRING YOUR CERTIFICATE WITH YOU.
If you want the benefit of a Pension while you live go and see Dr. Reynolds.
I can get you from $2 to $6 more per month under the new law than other agents.
To any person examined by the board, at Adrian, before Aug. 1, 1889, I have something of importance to tell you.
Come and let us examine you (no charge) and will tell you all about it. About one-third of all the soldiers examined while I was on the board were rated for disabilities not claimed. You had better come and see me about it.
Correspondence solicited, with stamp for reply
15 East Maumee-st., Adrian, Mich.

ATTENTION, Soldiers & Sailors,
Under the new pension law just passed by Congress all Soldiers and Sailors who served 90 days in the Rebellion, and who are disabled from any cause permanently, (need not have originated in the service,) are entitled to a pension of from $6 to $12. All soldiers' widows, minor children and dependent parents come under this law. Being located at the Capital near the U. S. Pension office, we can give our personal attention to your claim and thus ascertain any defect quickly and supply the same.
Write for blanks. Give full description of service and disabilities.

The Power of Necessity!

IS THE MOTHER OF INVENTION.

There has long been a NECESSITY for a clean and convenient place to keep Flour. By this Combined Bin and Sifter, as shown in this cut, that want is now being supplied. The Flour is taken from the bottom, instead of the top, and by so doing the first flour put in is the first taken out. So you can see at once that there is no flour remaining in the bottom of the bin, to become old and musty, as often is the case in the old way of keeping it. It is made durable and strong, and is NOT like some Sifters that have been placed on the market, bought to-day, used to-morrow, and then are a thing of the past,—but last a family a lifetime. All parts are made removable. You may ask anyone who has seen or used them, what they are. Manufactured and sold by

WINDOW GARDENING

A LOT of delightful and practical articles and pleasing illustrations—all on WINDOW GARDENING—make up the 16-page Supplement presented with the December issue of The American Garden. The number also contains an illustrated Christmas gardening story, "The Christmas Rose," by Charles Barnard; and an unusually varied assortment of generously illustrated and well written papers on gardening topics.

The American Garden is an illustrated magazine for all who love nature, fruits and gardens. It is bright, energetic, and useful. Of many features for 1891, we name a few:

JAPANESE EDIBLE PLANTS. A series running through the year, by Prof. C. C. GEORGESON, for three years in the Imperial College at Tokio. The most important contribution ever made to our knowledge of Japanese horticulture.
FRUITS AND PLANTS FOR THE COLD NORTH. Illustrated.
TOWN AND VILLAGE GARDENS. What to plant and how to cultivate. Illustrated.
NOTES FROM A WOMAN'S GARDEN. Bright, truthful and useful. Illustrated.
NEW AND INTERESTING FLOWERS AND PLANTS in Kew and other parts of Europe.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

BRITTON BUDGET.

Wm. Babcock went to Grand Rapids on business last Saturday.

We are glad to say that Mrs. Geo. Exelby is slowly improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Sowle, of Northville, Wayne co., were visiting friends in Britton last week.

Lew Rose has been on the sick list all last week with the grippe.

We hear that Osgood Bros. will shortly move into the brick block, west of the railroad.

Henry Miller was in Dundee Sunday, strictly on business.

Erve Hause came home from Clinton last Saturday, and spent Sunday with his parents.

Cyrus D. Cooley, of Potterville, has taken the place of Mr. Taggett in our drug store. We extend to Mr. Cooley a hearty welcome, and feel sure he will soon make many friends in our village.

Two carloads of stock were shipped from Britton last week, consisting of hogs and sheep. We are going ahead rapidly as a shipping point, but we lack an elevator. Let us have one.

We understand that Miss Kitty Clark, of Ridgeway, and also Miss Jennie Root, of Tecumseh, are anxious to organize a music class at Britton. Both ladies are highly recommended.

Carpenters are going to commence this week at the new stage in the Exelby Hall. When finished, it will be one of the finest in Southern Michigan for the size of our village.

We hear that our shoemaker, John Bechtold, is learning the trade of an engineer. We wish him success in his new undertaking, and hope when he runs an engine of his own he will have better success than he had the week before last, when the boiler of his model busted.

Dr. Thomas Smith begs to inform the public that he will always be found at his veterinary establishment on Beasley street, and that any call, either by day or night, will receive his prompt attention. The Dr. has been very successful in his treatment of horses, and should receive the full confidence and patronage of our farmers. His charges are very reasonable.

Poetry, a waxed mustache, mystery, long hair and a sweet tenor voice, will often make a woman feel as if there was only a sheet of tissue paper between heaven and herself. But it is the man with one leg shorter than the other, one blind eye, with a mouth as large as an elephant, and with six figures in his bank balance, who scoops her in and makes her happy ever afterwards.

Wednesday evening, Feb. 25th, Mr. Keane Cheever and Miss L. Auten, both of Britton, were united together in the bonds of holy matrimony. Rev. James Wright conducted the service in the presence of numerous relatives and friends. Both parties are well and favorably known in our village, and there is nothing but good wishes for their future happiness and prosperity. The presents were costly and numerous, and were as follows:—

Five dollars in silver and shawl—Father of bride.
Ten dollars in gold, table cloth and spoons—Parents of groom.
Table cloth—E. Auten and wife.
Bed spread—Albert Smith and wife.
Card baske and dozen napkins—Chet Caswell and wife.
Set of chairs and rockers—Ed. Auten and wife, Andrew Cheever and wife, John Wiggins and wife.
Fancy broom holder and broom—Mrs. Mina Miller.
Bedspread—Louisa Hoagland.
Pair towels—W. J. Helm and wife.
Table cloth—Miss Anna Gibson.
Pair towels—Frank Miller.
Silver napkin rings—M. Bachman.
Silver teaspoons—L. A. Brown.
Silver butter knife—Frank Hoagland.
Glass castor—H. Bachman and wife.
Set gold band dishes—H. Wonderly and wife.
Stand lamp—Miss Fannie Wiggins.
Fruit dish—Miss Georgie Cheever.
Set glassware—Roy Smith.
Vinegarette and jell stand—Miss A. Auten.
Potato masher—Floyd Auten.
Cup and saucer—Della Auten.
Cup and saucer and celery dish—Eva Auten.
Crumb tray and brush—Miss Rosa Vandevender.

Remember that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has no equal as a specific for colds, coughs, and all affections of the throat and lungs. For nearly half a century it has been in greater demand than any other remedy for pulmonary complaints. All druggists have it for sale.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The Library will be closed at seven o'clock, until the close of the special revival services.

Prof. E. A. Wilson has improved for the past week so as to sit up.

Those sick with scarlet fever are out of danger and on the gain.

Lulu Rappleye, Kitty Clark, and Clara Temple, are still on the sick list but improving very encouraging.

Mrs. Stowell of Dundee is enjoying a visit with her daughter Mrs. W. Rappleye and family, at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Harrison and son, visited her parents Ace Smith, at Macon.

Ex-Sheriff Fessenden of Mt. Pleasant visited his daughter Mrs. E. A. Wilson last week a few days.

Mattie Rappleye, who is teaching in the Baker Dist, Macon, observed Washington's birthday by giving an appropriate afternoons exercise on Friday of last week. The school room presented a very attractive and pleasing appearance.

The quarterly meeting services that were announced for last Sunday were postponed for a week and will be held next Sunday. Lovefeast at 9:30 a. m. regular preaching at 10:30 sacrimental services at close of the preaching during the evening. The presiding Elder will conduct the services at night.

NORTH-EAST FRANKLIN.

Frank Norcross is said to be very sick.

Ed. Spalding and wife began housekeeping on Elias DePuy's place last week.

Myrtle Kemp is down with measles, and Lynn Roberts also is trying to see what comfort, if any, can be extracted from the disease.

The Center school closes this week Friday with an exhibition. Much pains has been taken with the preparation of this entertainment, and it will doubtless be a success. The teacher, Miss Eva Wheeler, leaves at the close of this term, much to the regret of patrons and pupils. She has made many warm friends during her stay in Franklin.

The joint debate between Springville and Franklin lyceums came off on the evening advertised. Franklin was victorious by a vote of three to two. The Springville debaters expressed a wish to measure strength with their opponents a second time, so J. C. VanDoren and Hollis Taylor visited their lyceum Saturday night, to conclude arrangements. It is proposed to hold the debate in about two weeks.

The silver medal contest that was advertised to be held at Tipton, and has twice been postponed on account of rainy weather, will be held in the Congregational church at Tipton, on Monday evening, March 9th, unless it should be a bad, stormy night, in which case we will try Wednesday evening following.

BY ORDER OF COM.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

School closes in the Center district this week, with an exhibition at Conlin's hall Friday night.

The agent of the Toledo Bee was canvassing this part of Franklin last week.

The Springvillians have challenged the Franklinites to debate, and arrangements are making for another contest, to take place in Springville in a few weeks. Springville evidently wishes to retrieve the honors lost at Conlin's hall in the previous debate.

Look out for a big rain storm Monday night. We hear that the White Rose club mean to contest for the Demorest medal on that night.—"Sweets to the sweet" naturally in the "eternal fitness of things." Cold water for the Prohibs.

DON'T FEEL WELL,

And yet you are not sick enough, to consult a doctor, or you refrain from so doing for fear you will alarm yourself and friends,—we will tell you just what you need. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which will lift you out of that uncertain, uncomfortable, dangerous condition, into a state of good health' confidence and cheerfulness. You've no idea how potent this peculiar medicine is in cases like yours.

It is quite probable that you may need the services of a physician some day; but you can postpone the time indefinitely by keeping your blood pure and your system invigorated through the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Prevention is better than cure.

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

Joseph Lamb has been sick and detained in consequence from school duties.

Born to Mr. and Mrs J. C. Fisk, of South Manchester, on Friday, Feb. 13th, a daughter.

S. M. Merithew, of Sharon, has been very sick but is improving.

Miss Jennie Saley, of Bridgewater, spent Saturday any Sunday with her friend, Miss Louisa M. Payne, at Iron Creek.

A. K. Gage has been seriously indisposed, owing to an attack of la grippe, but is better again.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bowins, of Cayuga, Canada, returned to their home last Monday, after a lengthy visit with their daughter and other relatives.

Alden Blaisdell, who has worked for Frank Spafard for the past two years, will work the Freeman farm, at Burch's Corners, the coming year.

The exhibition given by Miss Ellen Rushton's school, in district No. 8, took place on Monday evening, instead of last Friday evening, on account of the severe rain storm.

Mrs. Corwin, a lady friend and her son Gordon, from Grass Lake, drove to Clinton a week ago Friday and returned last Thursday, passing through our town en route.

Conrad Lehn, one of Manchester's most prominent business men, was buried on Sunday. Interment in the Catholic Cemetery. He was born in Baden, Germany, in 1834 and had been in business in Manchester for about twenty-six years. He built two blocks in the business part of the place beside four cottages known as the "Lehn Cottages" in the east part of the village.

Ben E. Chase, who is now a fireman on the Michigan Central, was in town the first part of the week visiting his parents.

WOODSTOCK.

Mr. Musgrave closed his school last Friday with a two-hour entertainment behind curtains. District No. 4 can do just such things as that. They have had the drill.

Meetings at the Corners on and after Wednesday night of this week.

Marvin Warner closed his school Friday, at the Lake, and the scholars gave him a fine plush album. He has the measles now, and his mother from Pittsford is here taking care of him.

John Gahagan, Carl and Loss Parsons visited district No. 2 last week.

Rev. Gray held services in district No. 4 last Sunday afternoon, and was greeted by an appreciative audience.

The house of Mrs. Debbie Brooks narrowly escaped being burned last week. The furniture was injured, but prompt action saved the house.

We are glad to learn that Mrs. Percy Kelley is rapidly improving. We hope to hear her voice in song before long.

Miss Emmogene Holmes received news that her mother is not expected to live. Miss Holmes has been with Mrs. J. Joslyn for two years, and on Friday started for New York.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Mulnix rejoice. It is a boy.

RAISIN RACKET.

The meetings at the Valley are expected to close this week Thursday, when they intend to hold them in Tecumseh.

Carlisle Simonds gave his parents a very unexpected visit last Friday. He says things in the far west are not as bad as they might be, so he is perfectly willing to call Nebraska his home.

The funeral of Mrs. Jacob Haviland was held at the Raisin Center church last Sunday. She had suffered a great deal, and her death was not unexpected.

James Simonds was at Lansing last week, he being one of the committee appointed by the P. of I. to see if they could get some new laws through the legislature this term.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The boys will hold their lyceum tomorrow afternoon. Instead of the debate as usual, they will change and have a mock trial. There will be other exercises also. Come one and all, for an enjoyable time is anticipated.

Prof. Kellogg made a trip to Ann Arbor last Saturday.

—Try M. J. Tremaine's sugar cured hams and shoulders. They are the best in the market.

BIRTH-DAY PARTY.

On February 25th, 1891, as usual for forty years past, there was a family reunion at the residence of F. A. Dewey, it being the eightieth year of his age. There was present sixty friends and relatives. After a sumptuous dinner, the children and grand-children—according to an old custom—each received a silver dollar. While at the birth-day party in the year 1887 over three thousand dollars was given, thus helping in a measure, to make a cheerful day. The writer was born in Canada in 1811, and when three months old was taken to New Hampshire, there learned to read and write, and at a military school learned to beat the tenor drum. In 1829 came to Tecumseh, Michigan, and for over two years was mail carrier on a route through the forest, over twelve miles, without a residence except the natives. In 1832, was drum major of the memorable eighth regiment, which marched to the far west Blackhack war—received fair pay in money, also 160 acres of fertile land. In the year 1834 bought land in Cambridge, near an admired lake. Here was the historic wigwam of the celebrated Indian chief, Mitteau, of the Pottawatamie tribe. A few rods from this camp, the pioneer built his log house, two miles from any road, and in 1837 was married. Here were raised eight children. Also farming was managed with good success and no complaint at selling wheat at fifty cents a bushel. The writer has been a resident of Lenawee county sixty-two years. For sixteen years has been an officer of the State Historical, and member of the Pioneer society, which meets annually at the Capitol, Lansing. We will say, have been married three times to truly good and excellent wives. Two have passed the shades of time, never to return. The aged pioneer is now passing his declining years with cherished contentment at the pleasant farm home, Cambridge Junction.

TIPTON TOPICS.

The Demorest contest which was to have been held last Tuesday evening, was postponed on account of bad weather.

The Patron's Association held an open meeting last Tuesday evening, which was well attended. They have secured a speaker for the next meeting. A good attendance is required.

The M. E. Society are talking of having an Easter concert.

Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Lerch, of Clayton, spent Sunday at Bert Crittenden's.

Although last Friday evening was an unpleasant one, and the roads were far from being smooth, a load of 18 jolly people from Adrian township spent the evening at C. Vedder's. The evening was spent in social games and at a late hour they took their leave, all reporting a pleasant time.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAR. 5.

The World's Fair is short of money too. The Directory only want five millions more, that's all.

Read what the Adrian Times, a good Republican paper, says about the fiasco in the State Senate last week.

Tariff reform, free coinage and Grover Cleveland are all in the Democratic party, and they are all there to stay.

Any public man who desires a political future will hesitate a good while before accepting a chair in President Harrison's Cabinet.

The free coinage of American silver and unlimited free coinage without any international agreement are two very different things. Most men, in discussing the silver question, utterly ignore this fact.

Tom Reed's Congress came to an end yesterday and the people will take a long breath of relief. History will stamp it as the most reckless, lawless and extravagant Congress that ever convened at the Capitol.

The man who gave the people the great issue of tariff reform, on which the battle of 1890 was won, will not be hastily turned down, at the suggestion of peanut politicians like David B. Hill and high tariff papers like the N. Y. Sun.

Those ardent partizans who are reading Grover Cleveland out of the Democratic party at present, should remember that the National Convention, which will name the candidate, will not convene until the summer of 1892.

There was no election in one of the congressional districts of Rhode Island last fall, no candidate receiving a majority of all the votes cast, but at the second election, held last week, Page, Democrat, had 5,600 majority.

The Republicans will gain no sympathy by whining over the seating of the two contestants in the State Senate last week. They have only themselves to blame. Their own neglect of duty made the attempt possible, and their own incompetency made it successful.

The Republican Senators who deserted their post of duty at Lansing last week, without leave of absence, to play politics at Jackson, should all be presented with a leather medal. Their fidelity should be recognized in some substantial manner. We respectfully commend this idea to the Michigan Club.

The Republican Senators who deserted their post of duty at Lansing last week, are belaboring the Democrats for taking advantage of it. The Republicans have never been accustomed to protect Democratic interests in such emergencies, and it is hardly consistent for them to expect the Democrats to protect their interests.

The action of the Democrats in the State Senate was a bit of sharp practice no doubt; it was a sample of Tom Reedism on a small scale; it was very naughty to take advantage of their Republican brethren. Yet nine out of ten will view their action complacently and render this verdict. "Neglect of duty and incompetent leadership received their just deserts."

Senator Turpie has introduced a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment providing for the election of U. S. Senators by a direct vote of the people. This idea is rapidly growing popular, and has a number of enthusiastic advocates in the Senate. There is no valid argument against it. The caucus auction plan of electing U. S. senators must go.

Senator Sherman said in a recent newspaper interview that the desire for the free coinage of silver was only a temporary craze with the farmers, who imagined that it would benefit them. He also said that Mr. Harrison would certainly veto the free coinage bill, if it ever reached him, which he did not think it would. Time will show how much of a prophet Mr. Sherman is.

The dead-lock in the Illinois legislature still continues. The gallant 101 are becoming historical. Their votes go to Gen. Palmer on every ballot without a break. They have a popular majority of 30,000 behind them, and they propose to fight it out on that line if it takes till next New Years. A great issue is at stake in this contest in which all the states feel a keen interest, and the fight is watched with much anxiety.

THE ISSUE OF ISSUES.

The high-taxer's present plea is: the McKinley tax bill is a law and, right or wrong, the business of the country will adjust itself to it; so it is best not to unsettle trade by meddling with the law further.

Certain classes are satisfied; partisans who expect reward and the men who galloped to Washington to plead for bounty for their business, and who by virtue of the same, will be able to contribute "soap" in return, to the managing Dudleys and Quays—they are satisfied. And, it is argued (not out loud) the plodders will forget the injustice, and with a little patting on the back and a sop thrown to them, now and then, will plod on. Please don't stir things up again.

This is the burden of the argument and entreaty, said and unsaid.

The McKinley tax bill is the most un-godly, unjust, un-Christian and un-American law that was ever fastened upon an already burdened people. In times of peace and prosperity, it is a tax above the war tariff, and its sole object is to strengthen the Republican party with the monopolists who are thus made able to buy legislation. The needs of the country and demands of the people enter not into the calculation at all. Even Blaine, rank partisan that he is, realized the transparency of the bold scheme and the temper of the awakened people. And seeing a chance for a little glory for himself and good for the party, he attempted to punch a little ventilation through it with his reciprocity bodkin.

The cunningly devised system of unnecessary taxation is the cause of constantly increasing riches on one hand, and of constantly increasing poverty on the other. It drives the laborer and the artisan deeper into the mire of debt. The princes af the aristocracy of monopoly hunt ways in which to spend their $15,000-a-day income and men and women strive and struggle and starve in the shadow of their palaces.

And this iniquitous legislation is the chief instrumentality in bringing about these alarming conditions. Monopolists have the country by the throat and the republican party with its tax tributes, its bounties and subsidies, its favoritism and aristocracy-breeding measures, is responsible.

The people declared their protest in thunder tones in November, and when the democratic party, which is of the people and for the people, once more takes hold of governmental affairs, it will be untrue to itself, false to the country, if it fail to make its first business to repeal this iniquitous legislation and substitute for Mr. Blaine's tinkering free-tradeism with selected nations which sniff contemptuously at his efforts, a fair tariff schedule for trade in ths markets of the world where we could buy and sell with the best of them if we had opportunity.

There are other issues, but this one transcends them all in importance; for upon it depends the prosperity of the masses, and upon their well-being rests the foundation of the republic.

The farmers have come to an understanding of the situation and have taken hold of the matter nobly. Their hopes are not to be blasted by the designs of monopolists and self-seeking partisans. The good fight against the fostered crime of a half century is well begun aed the army must not weaken. Republicans would be glad to have the tariff dropped out of politics. They dare not stir it up in Ohio by nominating McKinley for governor on this plank. But they reckon without their host. The democrat party is pledged and the pledge will be redeemed.—Toledo Bee.

THE FIASCO IN THE SENATE.

Let us look the matter squarely in the face. Let us put the blame of the wretched fiasco in the Michigan State Senate on Tuesday where it rightfully belongs.

A certain number of Republican Senators absented themselves from their post of duty; a large proportion of the absentees went to Jackson to attend the Republican State convention. They neglected the business their constituents engaged them to perform, and which the state pays them to perform, for other matters which other parties had been delegated to attend to, and which could have been done fully as well had these volunteer senatorial a visors remained where they belonged.

It is these seven or ten men who are to blame for the action taken by the Democrats on Tuesday. Had they remained at their posts the thing that was done would have been impossible.

It is difficult to characterize such folly as it deserves, and keep within the bounds of civil discussion of the matter.

It was of more interest to them that they should meddle with a mere minor matter, than that they should attend to the interests of the party in the state. The result of their folly will be far reaching. The Democrats now have a clear majority in both branches of the State Legislature, and can gerrymander the Congressional and Senatorial districts of the state at their own sweet will.

The action of these absentees may result in the choice of a Democratic President at the next election. As the matter looks to-day, it will certainly result in the choice of a Democrat majority in the next Congressional delegation from this state, and render the election of a Republican U. S. Senator in 1893 a matter of extreme doubt.

Gen Grant was apt to philosophise on the almost certainty of Democrat blundering to insure Republican success. The tables seem to be turned in these latter days.—Adrian Times.

OUR NAIL INDUSTRY.

Our Producing Capacity More Than Double the Demands of the Home Market—Our Highly Protected Nail Mills in a Combination—Nails For Americans and For Foreigners.

A Pennsylvania nail manufacturer is authority for the statement that our nail mills have a capacity of 9,000,000 kegs per annum, but that our home consumption is only 4,000,000 kegs. Notwithstanding the great development of the nail industry, it is still treated by the high tariff McKinleyites as an "infant industry" and a prohibitory duty of one cent per pound, which is now equal to about 50 per cent. ad valorem, is levied on nails.

This looks like a wanton piece of tariff folly when it is remembered that we exported last year 13,400,000 pounds of nails and spikes (including cut nails, wire nails, horse-shoe and wrought nails), and this year 14,400,000 pounds. The largest buyers of these nails are Mexico, Chili and Cuba. It is thus seen that our nails are able to meet the competition of the world in neutral markets.

When the various industries were presenting their claims before McKinley last winter there was something said about nails, which is of no little interest in connection with the above facts. At the very first sitting of the committee on December 26, 1889, Mr. Horace P. Tobey, of Boston, made a speech in behalf of cheaper raw materials, such as coal, coke, iron ore, pig and scrap iron. He presented the petition for free raw materials from the New England manufacturers, a petition signed by more than 190 firms, including many of the leading establishments of New England. He told how the high freights on coke and coal from Pennsylvania had made it necessary for the New England manufacturers to have free access to other sources of supply, and how the hard conditions imposed by the tariff were crowding the New England manufacturers to the wall.

Mr. Tobey is a manufacturer of nails and steel billets which are used in making nails. During the hearing the following dialogue took place:

Mr. Gear—Your production is in billets. Are you in favor of a reduction——

Mr. Tobey—Yes, sir. I might answer the question by saying I favor a reduction on nails, which is my chief article of production.

Mr. Gear—Why?

Mr. Tobey—Because I think the duty could be reduced and I could still make nails.

The Chairman—Suppose we had free coal and free ore?

Mr. Tobey—I should be willing to submit to as much reduction in nails and then double it.

Mr. McKenna—Suppose we gave you free raw material; would you make nails free?

Mr. Tobey—I think I would rather have the duty on them.

Mr. Gear—How much reduction would you favor?

Mr. Tobey—I could not tell that. The duty upon them is large, so we do not import any at all; and they cost so much for transportation. I mean nail plates. At present they are not imported.

Mr. Carlisle—It is a prohibitory duty now?

Mr. Tobey—Yes, sir; practically so.

After Mr. Tobey had been heard, Mr. William H. Morris, of Pottstown, Pa., a manufacturer of "billets, ship and tank plates and cut nails," was heard by the committee. The following dialogue reflects the high tariff Pennsylvania opinion:

Mr. Breckinridge—Would you expect to build up an export trade for plates?

Mr. Morris—Not at the present time, although we may come to that later on. The same thing applies to cut nails, which have been at a very low ebb for some two years. I must differ from my friend Mr. Toby in thinking we could stand a reduction in duty. There are some nails made in Canada. Certainly any thing that would make the nail business worse at present would be a deplorable state of affairs.

Mr. Gear—What are you getting for iron nails?

Mr. Morris—They bring about $3.

Mr. Gear—Has there not been an advance in the last ninety days?

Mr. Morris—Yes, sir; there has been.

Mr. Gear—About 15 to 20 cents?

Mr. Morris—Yes, sir.

The result of it all was that McKinley made a slight reduction on cut nails of iron or steel, but left the duty the same on all wrought iron and horse-shoe nails, which is 4 cents a pound. The duty of 1 cent a pound on cut nails is still prohibitory.

It is seen from the above dialogue that Mr. Morris confesses to a "deplorable state of affairs" in the nail business. Considering the figures of exportation already given, the lesson for the nail makers is obvious: Let them widen their foreign market. Instead of fearing that "some nails made in Canada," let our law-makers fearlessly throw open our ports to free coal, ores and pig iron, in order that the nail mills on the sea coast may enjoy their natural advantages for the export trade, without being made to pay tribute to Pennsylvania and the rich mine-owners of Northern Michigan.

But that the nail makers are offering extra inducements to the export trade may be seen from the "export discounts" which they make to foreigners. The recent discussion of this whole subject of "export discounts" was called forth by the exhaustive study of the subject by Mr. J. A. Lindquist, the tariff expert of the New York Reform Club. His investigation of the subject of nails had special reference to horse-shoe nails and tacks.

Here is the result of his inquiries:

In the case of tacks, the schedules are so extensive and cover such varied assortment that it is not practicable to give them in detail. The prices charged to American consumers and those at which the same goods are sold to foreigners may, however, be thus compared. The same "list prices" are issued as the basis in each case. To American consumers the discounts on carpet tacks of Swedes iron or steel or American iron, blued, tinned or coppered, are 70, 10 and 2 per cent. To foreign consumers the discount is 70, 10, 10 and 2 per cent., and one-half per cent. per pound allowance for freight or, as given by some firms 70, 25 and 2, which is an equivalent, delivered free on board ship.

On other varieties the basis of discount, both for home and export trade, varies from 40 to 75 per cent., but on all the extra discounts quoted above are given to the foreign trade—that is, for tacks listed at $10 (two dozen papers of tinned iron tacks, weighing 24 ounces per paper), the American consumer is charged $2.65 and the foreigner only $2.20. Similar favorable prices to the export trade are given on cut nails, finishing nails and other varieties. These are the prices charged the wholesale merchants in this country who takes large lots, but to the foreign trade the prices are given whether the quantity taken be small or large. Abroad our tack manufacturers must meet competition from those of England and the Continent; at home, protected from foreign competition by tariff duties, they have entered into agreements to fix the prices at which their goods are to be sold, which prices are adhered to.

It has been pointed out by David A. Wells in his "Recent Economic Changes" that owing to the great prosperity of the nail business from 1881 to 1884, many establishments increased their capacity, and some more than doubled it. Many new mills were built East and West and the producing power of the country was nearly doubled; but consumption increased by only one-fifth. In this way the market was overstocked and prices were forced down in some cases below the cost of production. The result was that a combination or agreement was entered into by the manufacturers for the purpose of restricting production; in this way prices were again in a measure restored.

This is but another instance showing the tendency of tariff industries to get rid of competition by forming a trust. Protection is begged for on the plea that competition in the home market will force prices down; but when competition has forced prices down, the protected manufacturers discover that competition is a bad thing and they combine to put it down and keep prices up.

A THREAD MILL LOCK-OUT.

An "Imported Industry" With High Protection Turns 3,000 Operatives Out of Employment.

When McKinley took hold of the tariff-making business he found that there was already a high protective duty on linen sewing thread. This fact did not deter him, however, from making the duties still higher. Linen thread was 40 per cent. ad valorem, but McKinley raised the duty considerably. Linen thread up to 18 cents a pound now pays 6 cents per pound (equivalent to 46 per cent. on thread worth 13 cents and correspondingly higher on cheaper qualities), and on thread valued above 18 cents the duty is fixed at 45 per cent. ad valorem.

Last January J. R. Leeson & Co., claiming to be "the largest importers of linen thread in the United States," and representing themselves as the "selling agents of the flax mills of North Grafton, Mass., manufacturing linen thread," sent a communication to Major McKinley on the subject of the duty on linen thread. They said they were "consistent advocates of the policy of protection;" but they admitted "as the agent of American producers that the existing rate is satisfactory to us." They also said that if the duty on dressed flax were removed, "a rate of 25 per cent. ad valorem would sufficiently protect the mills we represent."

But there were other men who wanted a still higher duty on dressed flax. The old duty was $40 a ton, and these men asked to have it doubled. McKinley fixed it at 3 cents a pound, equal to $60 a ton. Then he raised the duty on linen thread, as above shown, although the domestic thread men had said that they had enough protection.

The duty on cotton spool thread being already equivalent to only 50 per cent., was not increased; but the duty on some grades of cotton thread not on spools was considerably increased.

One defense that the McKinleyites make of their high duties is that they will cause the "importation of industries rather than products." McKinley said enthusiastically in his speech last May in opening the tariff debate: "Let them bring their factories right over here. Bring $25,000,000 over here and sit down among us and employ our labor and consume the products of our farmers"—to which sentiment there was "applause."

Now, it happens that our high duties on thread had already done something in the way of "importing industries" to this country before the McKinley law was passed. The Clark Thread Company's mills at Newark and at Kearney, N. J., are examples of such "imported industries." These mills were set up here by a great Scotch firm in order to get into the American market, and to enjoy the high protection which we tax ourselves to give to our thread manufacturers. But notwithstanding the high protection which they receive the Clark Company does not "employ our labor" in such a way as to make the laborers happy. The company has just had a difficulty with its spinners and has locked up its mills. The lock-out throws 3,000 operatives out of employment. About half of these were girls and some of them "showed their disappointment in their tears." High protection can not guarantee that labor shall not be locked out, nor that wages shall not be cut down.

—There are rumors that a trust is to be formed of all the type foundries in the country. The tariff law imposes a tax of 25 per cent. ad valorem on type; and if the trust is formed it will be but another addition to the already large family of tariff trusts.

in your grocer's hand and get a package of PYLE'S PEARLINE—the original and best Washing Compound. It will save you time, trouble, health, wear and tear, which cannot be computed in dollars.

It's better—easier—quicker than soap for washing clothes and housecleaning; if that's not true, what becomes of the many, many millions of packages sold annually? What induces the hundreds of imitations? Did it ever occur to you as strange that almost every imitation of Pearline is given a name ending in INE? A "wolf in sheep's clothing" trick; depend upon it, their tricks don't stop there. Peddlers and unscrupulous or misinformed grocers will tell you this (an imitation) is as "good as Pearline," "same as Pearline," etc., etc. It's false—there's nothing like Pearline—nothing as good as Pearline. "Some lives are like Horse shoes the more worn the brighter." Busy wives who use SAPOLIO never seem to grow old. Try a cake...

A complete wreck of domestic happiness has often resulted from badly washed dishes, from an unclean kitchen, or from trifles which seemed light as air. But by these things a man often judges of his wife's devotion to her family, and charges her with general neglect when he finds her careless in these particulars. Many a home owes a large part of its thrifty neatness and its consequent happiness to SAPOLIO.

Grocers often substitute cheaper goods for SAPOLIO, to make a better profit. Send back such articles, and insist on having just what you ordered.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

TAXATION AND THE LAND VALUE TAX.

In the study of a question of so vital import to a nation as is the question of taxation, it is important that it should be investigated and weighed not only in its present aspects, but also in its historical features.

I therefore propose to present a few gleanings from history that may be of especial interest to those who look upon the land value tax as the ideal tax. Space forbids giving more than a brief glance at the subject; but it may serve as a guide to those who wish to go more fully into the matter.

The historical study of the subject of taxation is attended with some difficulty, as most historians, while recording battles and court intrigues, have paid too little attention to the economic side of history.

The idea that the earth is the common heritage of man, is as old as human intelligence, and the contributing of individuals of wealth and services to the common good as old as society. But, so far as I can discover, the idea of making every man contribute, not in proportion to his wealth, but in proportion to the value of natural or economic opportunities he controls, is a matter of modern history. Take, for instance, the Jews. They had a system of land tenure to which the lords of England could give hearty assent; for the land of a family, even if it passed from possession, reverted back each fifty years. They had a system of taxation, but it was a tenth of the actual product; not of the potential product.

The Greeks and Romans also had highly developed systems of taxation of property, occupations and individuals. In renting of the ager publicus, or public lands, like the Jews they had something akin to land value tax. In Rome the tenant of the ager publicus gave a tenth of the agricultural product to the government called decumon. The occupiers of pasture lands paid a tax on their flocks called scripton, though the rate is not known. The salt mines were rented out and the rent or tax was called salinon. The other mines were also rented out by the government.

But in passing, as we may naturally, from Rome over to England, we find that while the primitive England that succeeded Roman domination had no scientific idea of a land tax, yet they had something that was akin, though it also was based not upon control of natural opportunities, used or unused, but upon actual production. The ship tax, which might be an exception, was proportioned to population. The Danegeld was proportioned to the cultivation. When, after Norman conquest, the feudal system began to develop, the Danegeld or hidage disappeared and the carncate was employed, a Norman term of similar import. Both the hidage and carncate, from which the tax tooks its name, were a crude measure of land. The carncate was determined by what eight pair of oxen and a plow could cultivate in one season, and was probably equal to about one hundred acres.

Then came the soutage or shield tax, which the knights, who were also landlords, paid in commutation of those obligations to the crown. This was also a direct tax upon his whole property. As the English became more and more an industrial people, a large proportion of the taxes very gradually shifted upon the different forms of industry. Though in 1382, a "bad year," the "landlords paid the whole tax."

As the land owners were also the ruling classes it is easy to see how it was they gradually transferred the burdens upon industry, where it largely remains to this day.

In Cromwell's time (1656) a taxing act was passed (see Stephen Dowell's History of Taxation, vol. III., pages 76 and 77), which provides that—

The tenants of houses and lands rated to the tax are required to pay the whole tax rate to use such houses and lands; and power is given them to deduct on payment of their rent so much tax as, in respect of rent, the landlord ought to bear. This deduction all landlords, mediate or immediate, according to their respective interests, are required to allow, upon receipt of residue of rent. In short, a payment of the tax is considered pro tanto a payment of rent to the landlord. Power is given to the divisional commission to settle differences between landlords and tenants.

The word rent, though, in this act is used, not in the strict economic sense of ground rent, but in the popular sense.

According to J. Thorold Rogers ("Economic Interpretation of History," p. 457), Cromwell's heavy direct tax was thrown off as intolerable after the restoration.

In 1691 the great English philosopher, Dr. John Locke, published a pamphlet entitled "Considerations on the lowering of interest and raising the value of money."

This contains, according to Dugald Stewart, an eminent lecturer on political economy the first part of this century, the first written advocacy of a territorial tax, which was afterward developed scientifically by the great French school of physiocrats, of which Quesney was the founder.

The following extracts will show its tenor:

A tax laid upon land seems hard to the land owner, because it is so much money going visibly out of his pocket; and therefore, as an ease to himself, the landlord is always forward to lay it on commodities. But if he will thoroughly consider it and examine the effect he will find that he buys this seeming ease at a very dear rate. And although he pay not this tax immediately out of his own purse, yet his purse will find it by a greater want of money there at the end of the year than that comes to, with the lessening of his rents to boot, which is a settled and lasting evil that will stick upon him beyond the present payment.

He supports this position at length, and concludes by saying:

It is in vain in a country whose great load is land to hope to lay the public charge of the government or any thing else. The merchant, do what you can, will not bear it, the laborer can not, and, therefore, the land holders must. And whether it were not better for him to have it laid directly, where it will at last settle, than to let it come to him by the sinking of his rents, which when they are once fallen every one knows are not easily raised again, let him consider.

In 1692 the real estate tax, or land tax including the improvements, was re-imposed, probably in a measure as a result of the teachings of Locke. It was assessed at four shillings on the pound valuation. This tax, though it fell some years to only a shilling on the pound, remained in force until the time of Pitt, who in 1798 made it perpetual and redeemable at four shillings on the pound at the valuation of 1692. This tax remains to this day; and, though originally it was placed upon land and improvements, it has in the course of time resolved itself into a tax on economic, or ground rent only, and the only direct tax which that rent now bears in England. According to the same Dugald Stewart in 1696 Mr. John Asgill, in a treatise entitled, "Several assertions proved in order to create another species of money than gold and silver," advocates the same opinion with respect to a territorial tax. This treatise was in advocacy of a land bank proposed to the House of Commons in 1693 by a Dr. Hugh Chamberlayne. I will make but a brief quotation:

Man deals in nothing but earth. The merchants are the factors of the world to exchange one part of the earth for another. The King himself is fed by the labors of the ox; and the clothing of the army and the victualing of the navy must all be paid for to the owners of the soil as the ultimate receivers.

Stewart also quotes Jacob Vanderbilt's pamphlet, "Essay to make money plentiful," published in 1734.

If all taxes were taken off goods, and levied on lands and houses only, the gentlemen would have more net rent left out of their estates than they have now, when taxes are almost wholly levied on goods. That land gives all we have would be self-evident, if we did not import many goods which are the produce of other nations. But this makes no alteration in the case, since the quantity of foreign goods which we import can not continually be of greater value than the goods we export; because this in the end must exhaust our cash, and so put an end to that excess. Therefore, the goods we import stand only instead of those we export; and, consequently, the land gives not only all we have of our own produce, but virtually all we receive from other nations. * * * That the land must pay all taxes in what manner soever they may be levied; a proposition which might perhaps be assumed as virtually implied in a self-evident truth, that what gives all must pay all.

Mr. Vanderbilt goes on to elaborate his views regarding taxation at length. Thus, commencing with Locke, we have really the crude presentation of the single tax upon land stated in the language of that day. But there was soon to arise in France a school of economists, the physiocrats, characterized by great scholarship and wonderful intellectual ability, unsurpassed in unselfish devotion to humanity, which should bring economics into scientific form, and should urge with great earnestness and power the "import unique," or single tax.—James Middleton, New Orleans, La., in The Standard.

Lecky on Ireland.

Lecky, the historian, writes in the same magazine about "Ireland in the light of History." The article is principly remarkable for ignoring the land question as a cause of trouble. Mr. Lecky thinks the disturbed state of that country is primarily due to the fact that the conquest of Ireland under Elizabeth took place just after the reformation. He says that the result of this was that the conquerors became Protestants, and the conquered remained Roman Catholics, but that, nevertheless, all breaches might have been healed by a union of the countries about 1700. He does not explain how this could have reconciled the religious differences.

The land question shows itself, nevertheless, in such incidental phrases as the following: "When population pressed closely on subsistence the system of middlemen produced a fierce competition, which raised rent in the lower grades to an enormous height." It would be more consistent were the disturbances attributed to the ownership of the land by Protestants whose tenants are Roman Catholics.

A COUNTRY CLUB.—The handsome new home of the Union County Country Club was opened to visitors on the last day of the old year, and it is described as one of the most attractive buildings of the kind in that portion of New Jersey lying adjacent to New York. Its casino is one of the prettiest play-houses imaginable, and there are, in addition, billiard-rooms, bowling alleys, tennis courts and a fine library, all furnished in the most artistic and luxurious style. One might suppose from all this that the farmers of New Jersey are amazingly prosperous, but those who read the description to the end found tacked to it a modest announcement that most of the members of the club are New York business men. When real country-men can enjoy the privileges of country clubs, even approximating this in convenience and elegance, there will be less complaint of the disposition of farmers' sons to come to the cities and try to be business men.

Place 100 men on an island from which there is no escape, and whether you make one of these men the absolute owner of the other ninety-nine, or the absolute owner of the soil of the island, will make no difference either to him or to them.

In the one case, as the other, the one will be the absolute master of the ninety-nine—his power extending even to life and death, for simply to refuse them permission to live upon the island would be to force them into the sea.—Progress and Poverty.

NAAMAN IS HEALED.

LESSON X, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 8.

Text of the Lesson, II Kings v, 1-14. Commit Verses, 13, 14—Golden Text, Ps. ciii, 3—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

1. "Now Naaman, captain of the host of the king of Syria, was a great man with his master and honorable, because by him the Lord had given deliverance unto Syria."

"He was also a mighty man in valor, but he was a leper."

Gideon and Jephthah and others who served God are called men of valor (Judg. vi, 12; xi, 1; I Chron. xii, 8, 30), but so also was Jeroboam, who made Israel to sin (I Kings xi, 28). Some are men of valor or might for God, and some are valiant for the devil. May our song be, "Through God we shall do valiantly" (Ps. lx, 12; cviii, 13). What availed all Naaman's greatness since he was a leper? And what avails all the might of the world, with all its honor, if one is a sinner in the sight of God, and on the way to endless torment (Matt. xxv, 41, 46; Rev. xx, 15)?

2. "And the Syrians had gone out by companies, and had brought away captive out of the land of Israel a little maid; and she waited on Naaman's wife."

Let any little girl consider well the situation of this little maid, stolen from home, which was as much to her as home is to any child, and now a little slave in a far off land, with little if any prospect of seeing father and mother again; and yet she seems to be faithful in her new home under these hard circumstances. Let the boys consider Joseph, stolen from home by his own brethren and serving as a slave in Egypt; and yet we read four times in one chapter that the Lord was with him (Gen. xxxix, 2, 3, 21, 23).

3. "Would God my lord were with the prophet that is in Samaria! for he would recover him of his leprosy."

Not only faithful as a servant, but faithful in testimony, and that for the benefit of her enemy, reminding us of Rom. v, 8, 10; Matt. v, 44; Rom. xii, 20, 21.

4. "And one went in and told his lord, saying, Thus and thus said the maid that is of the land of Israel."

The little girl's saying is being spread abroad. It has now reached his ears for whom it was intended. We have only to speak of Jesus as we have opportunity, and we may be sure that the message will in due time be owned of God. His word will not return to Him void (Isa. lv, 11).

5. "And the king of Syria said, Go to; go, and I will send a letter unto the king of Israel."

"And he departed, and took with him ten talents of silver and six thousand pieces of gold and ten changes of raiment."

6. "Behold I have sent Naaman, my servant, to thee, that thou mayest recover him of his leprosy."

Thus wrote the king of Syria to the king of Israel. The Lord who gave deliverance to Syria is not recognized. We cannot wonder at this if we consider the church of Christ today and see her reliance upon money and influence and the favor of this world, while He whose name she bears is comparatively unknown and unsought and unhonored.

7. "Am I God, to kill and to make alive, that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy?"

Thus spake the king of Israel, when having read the letter he rent his clothes and fancied that Syria's king sought a quarrel with him. "Am I God?" reminds us of Jacob's angry words to his wife Rachel (Gen. xxx, 2), and killing and making alive reminds us of Deut. xxxii, 39, I Sam. ii, 6.

8. "Let him come now to me and he shall know that there is a prophet in Israel."

Thus spake the man of God when he heard that the king had rent his clothes.

9. "So Naaman came with his horses and with his chariot, and stood at the door of the house of Elisha."

A great and honorable and mighty man of this world stands in his majesty at the door of this poor and dependent servant of God. He is now in the right place, but not in the right spirit. He knows that he is a leper, that he has a deadly disease, and he has come a long journey seeking for health; but then he is no poor man; he does not come as a beggar; he is not like the leper of Matt. viii, nor the ten of Luke xvii. He is able to pay for his healing and he wants it done as to a great and mighty man. He is dealing with men and wants his position before men to be recognized. He does not know Luke xvi, 15.

10. "And Elisha sent a messenger unto him, saying, Go and wash in Jordan seven times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be clean."

What magnificent indifference to earth's potentates and earth's favors. What an opportunity to make a friend with great influence and obtain a great sum of money. But, like Abram before the king of Sodom, he is conscious that the possessor of heaven and earth is his friend, and he can afford to say concerning the king of Syria's gold and silver, "I will receive none."

11. "But Naaman was wroth, and went away and said, Behold, I thought" * * *

He wanted health, but he wanted it given in a style befitting his high position.

12. "Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel?"

Here are some more of his thoughts: Syria is better than Israel, Damascus than Jerusalem, Abana and Pharpar than Jordan. It is a great humiliation for him, a Syrian, to come to Israel seeking any favor, and he does not want favors; he can pay for all he gets.

13. "My father, if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldst thou not have done it?"

Thus reason his servants with him, showing more wisdom than their master, for "Great men are not always wise" (Job xxxii, 9); and they had him, too, as we say, for that was just the thought of his heart.

"How much rather then when he saith to thee, Wash, and be clean?"

14. "Then went he down."

That is good, for every proud person must come down, and if they come willingly it will save God the trouble of bringing them down.

"And dipped himself seven times in Jordan, according to the saying of the man of God."

"And his flesh came again like unto the flesh of a little child, and he was clean."

Just as the man of God had said so it came to pass. It always has been, is and will be just as God says. There is nothing like the word of God, and on our part nothing like obedience. It is not some great thing we are to do to be clean, but just come as we are, and accept Jesus as God's gift to us, and He will do great things for us. Then, being clean, He will do great things in us and through us.

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT

Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.

"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."

REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years, and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain ten years and then move up to second place in 1900, where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

DR. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

OUR WEDDING DAY.

Our wedding day, dear heart,
Well I remember
How crisp the hoar-frost lay
That chill December.
I was a foolish thing,
How my heart failed me;
Little you knew or guessed
What 't was that ailed me.

I had my doubts of you.
Only just fancy!
Would you have thought it, Jack,
Of your fond Nancy?
People kept telling me
Men were deceivers;
Women most foolish folk,
Heedless believers.

Would you be kind? I ashred,
And my heart fluttered;
True to the marriage vows
Your lips had uttered?
Ten years ago, dear love—
How the time passes.
Jack! drink my health again;
Fill up our glasses.

Don't wipe my tears away;
They're not for sadness.
My heart is full to-day
Only of gladness.
How true you've been to me
None can guess ever;
Husband, stand by me still,
Never to sever.

As o'er the frosty sky
Wintry clouds hasten,
Our joys in future, Jack
Trials may chasten.
Still hand in hand we'll step,
Fearing no morrow;
Wind blows the clouds away,
Love chases sorrow.

Our wedding day is o'er—
Twelve the clock's striking.
Look at me, Jack—am I
Still to your liking?
Don't say a word, you goose;
Only remember
I love you better now
Than that December.

THE PROFESSOR'S BUG.

What an Important Part It Played in a Love Affair.

Miss Florence Taylor, daughter of Prof. Archibald Taylor of —— University, was perched on the top of the stile at the lower end of the garden, with a very tearful expression on her pretty face. With her chin resting on one little hand she looked away into space instead of at the young man who was leaning against the fence but a few feet away. At length he came and leaned against the stile.

"Well?" he inquired, mournfully.

"It isn't well at all, Tom," said Miss Taylor, looking severely at her companion; "and I think it is very inconsiderate of you to hint that it might be."

"I'm sure I meant nothing of the kind," said Tom, humbly. "What did the old—that is what did your father say?"

"He says I am not to see you any more, and that I must tell you it is all over between us."

She spoke without lifting her head, and closed her speech with a heavy sigh.

There was a silence for some minutes, and then Waters spoke again, a little more cheerfully.

"And what do you intend to do, Flos?"

"I suppose I have got to do as my father says, and we will have to bear it," she said, playing mournfully with a leaf that came fluttering down from the tree overhead. There was something so resigned in her words that Tom took offense at once, and thrust his hands into his pockets.

"You seem to bear up well so far," he said, very bitterly. "I don't think there is much more to say," and he turned and walked two or three paces up the road.

"Tom!" called Miss Taylor from the stile.

He came back immediately.

"Tom," with great severity, "don't you think it is positively wicked to be so unkind when everybody is against me. I didn't think you would be so, and now there isn't anybody to—to—"

Waters interrupted her hastily, for she was growing more tearful with every word she spoke.

"There, Flossie, dear, I know I'm a big brute, and I hate myself for making you so unhappy—"

"It's just as bad to call yourself a brute—as if I would care for a brute," said Florence, sobbing violently on his coat.

"Well, I didn't mean that either, then," said Tom, and peace was restored once more. The sobbing grew more faint, and at last stopped altogether.

"I didn't tell you the worst, Tom," she said presently from his coat.

Water's face was the picture of despair.

"Well," he said, "what is it?"

"He is going to take me away," said Florence solemnly and tragically.

"Where, Europe?" asked Tom.

"No, down in the country where he is going to spend a whole month. He is going to hunt for a new bug or something, and I just know he will stay for ages."

"He may find the bug and come away," suggested Tom, vaguely.

"I know he won't. They never do."

There was a silence, during which there were symptoms of returning sobs.

"Flossie," said Tom, suddenly, "I have an idea."

"Really," with unconscious sarcasm.

"Perhaps you don't care to hear it," said Tom, with dignity.

"Tom!"

"When are you going?" asked Waters.

"I think he said to-morrow."

"Well, then," said Tom, stepping back to watch the effect of his words, "I am going too."

"Is that all," said Miss Taylor, scornfully. "You know he won't ever let me see you. It will be no better there than here."

"You wait and see," said Tom, sagely.

Florence felt her curiosity rising.

"Perhaps you had better tell me what you are going to do," she said as indifferently as possible.

Tom shook his head gravely.

"You wouldn't understand. No woman would," patronizingly. "And now," he continued, "I see somebody coming this way and I presume 'twere better we should part." Then tenderly: "You will be glad if it does come all right, little sweetheart."

"You know I will," she answered, and in a moment he had swung himself over the fence and gone striding down the road.

That evening he made a call on Prof. Taylor. He found that gentleman in his study and received a stiffly frigid bow as he entered.

"I have come to ask a favor of you, sir," he said, taking a chair and seating himself comfortably, with his hat in his hand.

The professor wheeled around in his chair.

"I don't want to hear you say any thing about my daughter," he said, with rising wrath. "I presume she has told you what I have said. Let that be enough."

"Excuse me, sir," said Tom, calmly; "I had not intended to speak of your daughter. It was a very different matter."

"Well," said the professor, a little mollified.

"You see," said the young diplomat, "I have been a good deal interested in the work in your elective. I heard that you were going to spend a month or so in search after some new specimens, and, as I have nothing particular to do this vacation, I thought perhaps you might allow me to accompany you."

Prof. Taylor knitted his brows for a moment and thought. He really liked Waters, and it was true he had worked well in the professor's particular branch. It would be an advantage to have him around, but—

"This is some trick," he said, looking sharply at Waters. "You think it will be easier to follow Florence in this way. I won't allow it. I tell you, I'm not too old to see—"

Tom rose with dignity and moved toward the door.

"I am sorry you are able to so misjudge me. I wish you good evening," he said gravely.

"Wait," said the professor.

"Sit down again, Waters, and we will talk this over. Perhaps I was a trifle hasty in what I said."

Tom resumed his seat, and the professor continued:

"Now what assurance can you give me that it is not as I suggested?"

"I suppose if I help you in your search, sir, and show no disposition to trouble you with regard to your daughter, that will be assurance enough," said Tom, a little coolly.

"Certainly," said the professor.

"And if you are not satisfied I suppose you can send me off whenever you choose," added Tom.

The professor thought for a minute or two and then said:

"Very well. You can go, and I may add that personally I shall be very glad to have you with me in the work."

"Thank you, sir," said Tom, rising. "When do we go?"

"To-morrow at eleven. I am going to Summersville, where a few very curious and valuable specimens have been found. I hope to make some interesting investigations."

"Very well," said Tom, as he bowed himself out, "I shall be there."

A servant came to open the door for him, and Waters managed to scratch a few words on the back of an envelope. "It is all right, I am going," he wrote, and succeeded in bribing the girl to give it to Florence.

But he did not appear at the train in the morning. Another plan had come to him as he walked home, and all the way from —— to Summersville the professor and his daughter were left to wonder secretly at his non-appearance.

When they arrived at their destination, however, they were both surprised to find him waiting at the station with a dilapidated chariot-like vehicle which he had procured in the village.

"I thought I had better run down by the early train and see to things," he explained to the professor. "I found some fairly desirable rooms which you can get if you like them. We will drive there now if you wish."

"That was thoughtful of you. Let us go at once," said the professor.

They found the rooms even better than they had expected and engaged them at once.

"I suppose you found yourself a room here, too," said the professor to Tom as that individual prepared to leave them.

"Well, no," said Waters, "I thought I would stay at the hotel. It's a miserable place, but well enough, I'm not particular."

"Oh," said the professor, and nothing more.

After making a few arrangements for beginning their search Waters withdrew, bowing gravely to Florence as he opened the door.

The search began almost the next day, and continued for many days thereafter. Tom was really interested to some degree, and was of much assistance to the professor. He studiously kept away from the latter's rooms, and saw scarcely any thing of Florence; the only deviation from the direct line of duty in that direction being sundry hastily scribbled notes that he bribed and cajoled the landlady into carrying. Now and then he got a word or two in reply, but that was all.

One evening, after they had been in Summersville a couple of weeks, the two men were returning after an unusually successful day's work. The professor was in high spirits. After they had exhausted the subject of the day's success, the professor took a fatal step.

"I fear you must find it lonesome at the hotel," he said.

Tom felt his heart take a flying leap for his mouth, but contrived to answer indifferently:

"Well, yes, it is a little, especially of evenings, but I make out well enough with a few books and things."

"We find it somewhat lonely, too," admitted the professor. "I fear it is a little tiresome for Florence. She has no one but the landlady to talk with except me, and, strangely enough, I seem unable to interest her in our work."

"Indeed," said the young man, sympathetically.

"We would like to have you drop in now and then of an evening, Waters," continued the professor.

"Thank you," said Tom, and there and then he felt an all-inspiring desire to stand upon his head.

After that he dropped in for awhile each evening at the professor's rooms, and with the help of the landlady they played a good deal of very poor whist, and indulged in a few other more or less pleasing amusements.

One evening they were sitting around the table, the professor reading a magazine and Tom and Florence carrying on an indifferent conversation. At length the professor laid down his book and turned to Tom.

"I have just been reading the description of the only thing that I need now to complete my collection," he said. "It is exactly like some of the specimens which we found to-day, except that it has striped coloring on the back. I would give any thing to possess one."

"We may find one," suggested Waters.

"I hope so, of course, but they are very rare."

That night Tom lay awake with a great idea in his head. The next day he obtained two of the largest of the specimens that had been found the day before, and then he told the professor that he was not feeling well and would stay at home for a day. The professor said nothing, and went his way unaccompanied, except by a little boy who had been employed to carry baskets, etc., on the daily excursions.

Tom went directly to the professor's rooms and there found Florence. He gave her a lover's greeting and then began to look about the room hastily.

"What is it, Tom?" asked Florence.

"The magazine! Where is it?"

The magazine was found, and Tom seized it eagerly and turned quickly to the article the professor had been reading the day before.

He read it through, and then almost leaped into the air. In fact, he went dancing around the room in so much exultation that Florence began to wonder if he had not gone a little crazy.

"Do you feel ill, Tom?" she asked, anxiously.

Tom paid no attention to her question, but continued his powwow about the room. Florence waxed indignant.

"I don't know what it is you find so very funny," she said scornfully and severely.

"I know you don't; but you will," answered Tom, and not a word more would he say.

All the rest of that day, except an occasional visit to the village drug store, Waters stayed locked in his own room at the hotel. In the evening he went to see the professor and he carried with him something in a little tin box. He went in and laid it down before the professor without a word.

Prof. Taylor opened the box, and there lay before him the wonderful specimen for which he had looked so long and so vainly.

It was a wonderful specimen, large and fully developed, and all up and down its back ran beautiful lines of red and gold.

After the professor and his daughter had admired it and questioned about it, Tom rose to explain.

"You see, sir," he said, 'I wasn't ill to-day at all, but I thought I knew where I could find one of these if there were any around here, and I thought I would like to go alone."

"Quite natural, quite natural," said the professor, beaming benignly on Waters. "I am greatly indebted to you for this rare specimen. It will quite complete my collection. And I don't mind telling you," continued the professor, "that I have had reason to change any slight feeling of distrust which I may have felt toward you. Your assistance in this work has been great, and I am sure if you continue as you have begun, you may look for large results from your labor, both for yourself and for the scientific world."

While the professor had been making this long speech Florence had slipped out of the room.

Tom looked, or tried to look, becomingly modest. The professor extended his hand as he finished.

"You have pleased me very much," he said.

"Thank you," said Tom, "and now if I might—"

The professor interrupted him, hastily.

"Wait till you've graduated and then we'll talk about it," he said, not unkindly.

"But in the meantime I can come to see her?" asked Tom, anxiously.

"Why, yes; you've been doing that all the time, haven't you?" And the old man relapsed into a contemplation of the new acquisition to his collection.

"Tom," said Florence, after he had told her the news and they had rejoiced over it together in true lover's fashion, "Tom, where did you find that horrid bug?"

"Well, the fact is," said Tom, "it isn't exactly the bug I found. I took one of those common ones and made it over with a sharp needle and some indelible ink. I knew your father wanted one very badly, and it seemed too bad that he should be disappointed. And besides he would never have let me have you if I hadn't done something extraordinary."—J. T. Newcomb, in Boston Globe.

Stage Heroes and Fair Ladies.

It is incomprehensible why women will make such fools of themselves over stage heroes. They rave about them in public, moon about them in secret, dream of them by night and dog their afternoon strolls. All their spare cash is spent on matinee tickets and flowers for the beloved object. Once let a stage hero make known that in a certain scene he is expected to wear a certain flower, and there will be no dearth of these sent daily by fair ladies.—Boston Herald.

All Else Forgotten.

"Didn't he once say he would never speak to you again?"

"Yes; but he saw I had a cold, and he couldn't resist the temptation to tell me of a sure cure."—Puck.

A Great Record.

Mrs. Riverbank (proudly)—Never, since my first batch.—Puck.

Will it Cause War?

Feeling Between France and Germany

HAS BEEN RAISED ALMOST TO THE BOILING POINT.

Passports at Alsace and Lorraine Ordered Stopped by Caprivi.

PARIS, Feb. 27.—The Empress Frederick left this city for England at eleven o'clock this morning. The hour for her departure had been changed, and there was only a small number of people at the station. No disturbance occurred and there was no outward manifestation of hostility.

The organization known as the League of Patriots issued a manifesto advising the people of France to allow the empress to pass in peace through the country. They say that as Germany had already suffered defeat in her advances, French dignity and French patriotism were sufficiently avenged. The empress is expected to arrive at Windsor Castle at six o'clock this evening.

Queen Victoria is deeply grieved at the turn of affairs in France in which her daughter is involved, and has been very anxious for her safety, in view of the sensational reports from Paris.

Apartments have been prepared for the Empress Frederick on the south side of the palace, and the Second battalion of Scots will be stationed in that quarter as a mounted guard of honor.

The German ambassador to Great Britain, the Greek minister and queen left for Calais last evening where they met the Empress Frederick and act as her escort to England.

Enforcing Passport Regulations.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Chancellor Von Caprivi's instructions to Prince Hohenlohe, governor of Alsace-Lorraine, to enforce the passport regulations on the frontier, and in no way to extend the facilities now granted to residents of the French communes on the frontier, have aroused a storm of angry commotion in this city. The visit of Ex-Empress Frederick, it is declared by indignant Parisians, was a quite gratuitous stirring up of slumbering hatred between the two nations, and Chancellor Von Caprivi's orders have added fuel to the flame, which may cause the most disastrous results. The press of the city is unanimous in bitter denunciation of the orders as a willful provoking of hostilities between France and Germany. The subject is discussed everywhere today. The cafes are filled with crowds of excited Frenchmen who seem for a moment to have forgotten everything but a common hatred for Germany. The feeling is in such a state of tension that the people are ready, if popular expression be taken as evidence, to go to any length to revenge themselves on Germany's latest actions.

What Russia Thinks.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 28.—The Russian press heartily approves the attitude of the French artists in refusing to take part in the exhibition at Berlin, and regard the irritating tone of the Germans as highly reprehensible. It is reported that the Czar has expressed the opinion that Chancellor Caprivi's orders in relation to Alsace give grave cause for disquiet and that he regrets that so harsh a measure was promulgated.

Horrible Result of a Boiler Explosion.

CAIRO, ILL., March 2.—A terrible explosion occurred at Hanley's Switch, a point fifteen miles south of here on the Cottage Belt road. The boiler of a portable sawmill owned by James Fuget burst, killing two men and injuring two others, tearing the mill into splinters. The men killed were John Cobbles and Sam Dowdy. The names of the injured could not be learned. Cobbles, the engineer, was thrown one hundred and fifty yards, one leg being hurled into a cornfield and an arm into a ditch fifty yards away. Dowdy's jaw and tongue were torn out and his head nearly wrenched off. The mill was an old one. They were engaged in cutting half a million feet of gum timber for the Singer Works, of this city. The wounded men are not expected to recover.

Boy Torn to Pieces.

ALLIANCE, O., March 2.—Roy, the nine-year-old son of Lee South, a brakeman in the employ of the Pennsylvania company, met with a horrible death here. The boy, with a playmate, had been foolishly trying to stop the revolving shaft of the turbine wheel used for regulating the flood-gates at the water works, and thoughtlessly wrapped his coat around the shaft, thinking to secure a better hold, when in an instant he was pinioned and his body revolving with the shaft at the rate of 120 revolutions per minute. He was horribly crushed and mutilated. The ground in the immediate vicinity of the accident was bespattered with the flesh and blood of the unfortunate boy, and a foot which had been torn off at the ankle was taken from the water after the accident.

BOLO'S BREAK.

A Judge, While Drunk, Fatally Shoots His Son.

DECATUR, IND., Feb. 28.—Ex-Judge of Circuit Court J. B. Bobo, of Decatur, while under the influence of liquor shot his son Roland, aged twenty-three years, inflicting a wound that may prove fatal, the bullet entering the body below the fifth rib, lodging against the spinal cord. Judge Bobo being intoxicated became abusive and ordered his son from the house, the latter not obeying immediately, the father drew a revolver and fired, with the above result.

He Choked to Death.

TIFFIN, O., March 2.—John Wise, an old and respected resident of the town of Burgoon, met his death in a sudden and unexpected manner While engaged in eating his supper a piece of steak lodged in his throat, and almost within the moment he was dead. For several weeks he had been afflicted with paralysis, and this is supposed to have been the cause of his death.

IT IS MANDERSON

Who Will Succeed Senator Ingal s as President Pro Tem.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The Senate adopted a resolution of thanks to Senator Ingalls for his services as presiding officer of the Senate, and elected Senator Manderson as president pro tempore to act as president in the absence of the vice president.

GONE UP IN SMOKE.

THE SPLENDID FLOURING MILL OF HECK BROS. BURNED TO THE GROUND MONDAY NIGHT.

The Loss Heavy and Only Partly Covered by Insurance—Burning of Arthur Dibble's Barn on Friday Night of Last Week.

Shortly before midnight, on Monday night last, the alarm of the fire bell called our citizens out to witness the most disastrous conflagration that has visited Tecumseh in several years.

Heck Bros' have been running their flouring mill over time lately. In addition to their domestic trade, which is always good, they have filled several heavy foreign orders. Last Monday night, about ten o'clock, the mill was shut down and the workmen left for home, after taking their usual precaution to see that the stoves were securely closed. About half past eleven some of the hands in the paper mill, which is located across the river, discovered the fire and gave the alarm. When the first help arrived the south end of the mill was entirely enveloped in flames, and within half an hour, the whole structure was in ruins. The steamer was on the ground as soon as possible, but when it arrived, it could do nothing but protect the adjoining property. The paper mill property was in considerable danger at one time. Huge sparks and bits of burning boards were carried almost to the piles of straw on top of the south river bank. The large trees on the flat south of the flouring mill were burned to a crisp. A former mill on the same site was burned 23 years ago, and as there was no insurance upon it, several months elapsed before it was rebuilt.

At the time of the fire last Monday, there were nearly 7000 bushels of wheat in the mill and about a car load of flour ready for shipment, all of which was a total loss. Heck Bros' estimate their aggregate loss at about $40,000, which is protected by insurance to the amount of $20,500 in six good companies. Will the mill be rebuilt? It was one of the finest mills in Southern Michigan and its brands of flour had attained a national reputation. The members of the firm do not look with favor upon stopping such a business enterprise, but unless they receive their insurance money promptly their inclination to rebuild can hardly be gratified, as the bulk of their property was locked up in that mill.

The permanent stoppage of the mill would be quite a serious business loss to Tecumseh. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

MR. DIBBLE'S BARN BURNED.

The barn on the old Whitnah farm about a mile east of Brownville, and opposite Jacob G. Robert's place, burned last Friday night. Mr. Dibble was sick at the time and confined to his bed. About seven o'clock Mrs. Dibble went to the barn with a lantern to see that everything was all right. A wagon load of straw stood on the barn floor. In passing behind one of the horses, it got freightened by the lantern, snorted and jumped back. Mrs. Dibble sprang back to save herself and hit the lantern against the wagon tire, breaking the chimney and upsetting the lantern on the floor. The straw on the floor caught fire at once, and in three minutes the whole interior of the barn was a blaze. Jno Thurlby was the first neighbor on the ground and many others soon gathered. They managed to get the horses out of the barn and saved them, but everything else was a total loss. The barn was owned by Thomas Boyd and Arthur Dibble and was partially insured.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 5, 1891

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

A high-arm Singer for sale cheap Call at this office and examine it.

Sheriff E. H. Merritt of Big Rapids was in town the first of the week.

A Wheeler & Wilson New No. 9 can be bought cheap by calling at this office.

Mrs. M. S. Hendershot who has been visiting friends in Brooklyn for a week or so, is home again.

John Hialey has sold over fifty cutters since last Thanksgiving day, notwithstanding the open winter.

E. F. Muir has sold his saloon building in Clinton to Chris Schmitt. The consideration paid was about $2,000.

The coldest weather of last winter came in the month of March. This winter bids fair to adopt the same plan.

Don't fail to see the Laughing Gas There is barrels of fun for everybody. Don't miss it, for if you do you will regret it. Secure your seats now.

The Macon Grange is preparing an entertainment which will far surpass anything ever presented in their hall. Watch next week for date and program.

At the State Farmers' Institute held at Plainfield, Ill., last week under the auspices of the State Board of Agriculture, Mrs. M. K. Elliott delivered an address.

Mrs. A. M, Keeney attended the birth-day party at her father's F. A. Dewey's, at the old home in Cambridge last week. It was a most enjoyable family reunion.

W. D. Meeker of Chicago, paid his Tecumseh friends a flying visit on Tuesday. He has taken a month's trip through the South, much to his enjoyment, and paid Tecumseh a short call before returning to his post of duty.

The Chip o' the Old Block will be at the Opera House, March 10th without fail, with all the scenery and comedians to make you laugh. Don't forget the date, March 10th. Secure your seat.

They are taking two heats a week at Heesen Bros' foundry, and are getting a large lot of hollow ware on hand. They have just placed in position a fine new polishing machine, and will soon set up two more.

Rev. J. E. Parker, of Adrian, took charge of the regular quarterly meeting at the Tecumseh M. E. church last Sunday in place of Presiding Elder Joslin, who could not attend. He filled the position most creditably.

John F. Schreeder has worked a portion of the Ed. Smith farm on the "school section" between here and Clinton, for fifteen years, and the whole farm, comprising 400 acres, for the past nine years, and he is likely to stay there for nine years more.

While at Dundee one day last week we called on M. H. Goodrich. Found him running the restaurant as usual. He seems to be doing a good business. We understand that his wife, who has been spending several months in New York, has returned to Dundee.

We paid our old friend C. H. Gainsley of Dundee a call the other day at his store in Dundee and found him very busy taking an invoice of stock. Considering the awful condition of the roads in that section he is having a good winter trade. He is evidently a business fixture at Dundee now.

Eli Gray's flock of Shropshire ewes, which he imported last fall, is beating the record on lambs. Eight of them have 17 lambs and eight more have one each, all marked exactly alike. Eli attributes his good luck in raising all the lambs to his Scotch shepherd dog. The dog and the flock are well matched.

Prof. Palmer's lecture, or rather crayon drawing, at the M. E. church last Saturday evening was without doubt, the finest specimen of crayon work ever seen in Tecumseh. His skill in handling the pencil was wonderful. His talks were brief and to the point, but sufficiently lengthy to explain the pictures.

Some heavy iron working machines have lately been set up at the Tiffany Iron Works. They are running a full set of hands now and taking two heats a week in the moulding room. Their Centennial brick and tile machine is a beauty and is bound to be a success. They have received several orders for them and have about a dozen machines in process of construction.

The village election last Monday was a very quiet affair as there was only one ticket in the field. Sixty-one votes were polled and the following officers were elected:

President—Dr. George Howell.
Recorder—Chas. F. Field.
Treasurer—Jos. H. Smith.
Trustees—Chas. Bidwell, Jno D. Shull, H. E. Stout.
Assessors—Jas. A. Boyd, Benj. J. Garlinghouse.

E. F. Muir, of Clinton, was in town Monday.

Satterthwaite Bros. have a new card this week.

Frank Kennedy has a new wheel. It is a safety.

J. H. Smith visited Toledo last Monday on business.

John J. Orr has a beautiful new sign over his door.

Ernest Gamble is at home from Ann Arbor for a few days.

David Woodward, of Clinton, was in town last Monday.

J. E. N. Bowen's children are all down with the measles.

Ed. VanDeMark, of Clinton, was in town yesterday on business.

A. D. Hall and Emma Hall are visiting friends in Adrian this week.

Mrs. R. B. House, of Springfield, Ohio, is visiting friends in town.

Mrs. Frank Snedecor is taking a few days visit with friends in Dundee.

Fred Chase is the happy father of a fine boy, who arrived last Saturday.

C. D. Loose, of Monroe, was in town last Friday, and gave the HERALD a call.

John Townsend, of Lodi, Seneca county, N. Y., is visiting at A. K. Waldron's.

Deacon and Mrs. Downs, of Clinton spent last Sunday with friends in Tecumseh.

Prof. and Mrs. L. M. Kellogg went to Ann Arbor last Friday, returning Saturday evening.

Ernest Munsell, who has been at work for Frank Snedecor, has returned to his home in Burr Oak.

Misses Carrie Huston and Susie Meffert, of Hillsdale, are visiting Tecumseh friends this week.

We are pleased to learn that Prof. E. A. Wilson is rapidly recovering from his recent severe illness.

Do you want a new sewing machine cheap? Then call at this office and examine the two we have for sale.

The painter and kalsominer are getting in their work this week upon the interior of Anderson & Co.'s three stores.

Yes, plenty of good singing and dancing at the Opera House March 10, in the "Chip o' the Old Block," where they are all comedians.

Geo. S. Tiffany was at Columbus, Ohio, last week, in attendance upon a Brick and Tile Convention. He delivered an address while there.

Bert Waring is going to Chicago to reside. We exceedingly regret to have him leave Tecumseh, but wish him good luck wherever his lot may be cast.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian church will give a Bluejay social at the parlors of the church, on Tuesday evening next. Everybody come. Refreshments, ten cents.

The Detroit Journal's Annual is at hand, and it is the neatest souvenir that has yet come under our notice. It is a calendar and carrier's address combined, executed in the highest style of the typographic art.

In the Chip o' the Old Block there are more comical situations than all the best musical comedies combined, for it is bound to drive away the blues. So don't miss it, for they will be sure to be at the Opera House on March 10th. Secure your seats.

The W. C. T. U. meets weekly on Friday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. This week will be the mother's meeting, conducted by Mrs. N. R Merritt. Loyal Legion meets every two weeks; next meeting March 14, at 2:30 p. m. Good Templars will meet on Monday evening, at 7:30.

The Detroit Free Press has begun the publication of a semi-weekly edition, the price of which has been put at $1.50 per year. It will contain the cream of the daily edition and will be almost as good as the daily for mail subscribers residing in Michigan. It ought to have a large circulation.

The Home Magazine, conducted by Mrs. John A. Logan, should find its way into every home in the country. It prints only that literature which is helpful to every member in the family and beneficial to good home influence. It is practical in all its departments. Every number excels the previous one.

The W. C. T. U. have leased the second story in the Cheever block, on the corner of Chicago and Ottawa streets. Having larger and more convenient rooms, we hope to do more to advance the cause of temperance in all its varied lines, and shall be glad to have all the friends of temperance unite with us in this grand work.

The meeting of the Young Mens' Band Association for the election of officers, was held on March 2, 1891, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Pres.—John Nyland.
V. Pres.—Robt. McCure.
Sec.—Cleo Hall.
Treas.—Albert Howard.
Board of Directors—Bowen, Barager, Gray, Nyland and Prof. Skinner.

"It was the finest specimen of oratory ever listened to in Tecumseh" was the universal verdict of all who heard Daniel Dougherty's lecture last Thursday evening. The subject was a congenial one and well adapted to bring out his full talents, viz; "Oratory and orators"—No synopsis of the lecture would do it justice. He is a man of striking personal appearance, who would attract attention at once among strangers. He possesses all the graces of a polished elocutionist, a wonderfully modulated voice and a marvelous vocabulary. In his quiet passages he resembles Wendell Phillips, and he excells as a humorist and actor. The very highest encomium that could be bestowed upon the distinguished lecturer would not be overdrawn. Owing to the fearful weather that evening many people from the country were doubtless deterred from attending but all who braved the elements were well repaid. Several were present from Manchester, Clinton, Adrian and other towns. No one who had the pleasure of listening to the lecture can ever forget it.

Will Schreder and wife were treated to a little surprise on Saturday last, which they will long remember. Just before dinner about fifty of their neighbors and friends, led by Mrs. Vance Goheen, drove into the yard and took possession of the house. The ladies of the party unpacked the baskets and soon served up such a dinner as only farmer's wives know how to prepare. Besides a good dinner they brought a fine couch which Mrs. Schreder accepted in a neat little speech. How did all this happen to transpire? Last Saturday was the eighth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Schreder's marriage. The guests departed about four o'clock wishing them many happy returns of the day.

The Friends commence a series of meetings at this place, Wednesday evening, March 4th. They will be held this week at the Friends meeting house, and conducted by Amos M. Leaworthy, of Cass County, Mich. Commencing Sunday evening, March 8th, they will be held at the Universalist House, conducted by David J. Lewis and others. Everybody is welcome.

James A. Boyd has retired from the firm of Satterthwaite Bros. & Boyd the brothers buying his interest. While we regret to see him retire from the firm, we know that it remains in good hands. New t and Boly almost grew up in that store and the business will move right along as ever under the new management.

Miss Allie Warren left last week for Detroit, to take a position in the wholesale house of W. H. Mitchell & Co., until the middle of March, when she will return to her old stand over Anderson's dry goods store, with a new and complete line of spring millinery.

UNPARALLELED OFFER TO ALL NEW SUBSCRIBERS TO

THE ARENA,

THE BRILLIANT BOSTON REVIEW.

The Publishers of THE ARENA take pleasure in announcing that they have just perfected arrangements by which they can send free, as a premium to every new subscriber of THE ARENA, the COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE for the ensuing year (old subscribers of the Cosmopolitan must remit fifty cents extra.) This is not only the most liberal offer ever made by a leading review, but

THE COMBINATION IS UNSURPASSED.

THE ARENA, being conceded one of the few really great reviews, is without question the most liberal and progressive leading magazine published; while the Cosmopolitan is a richly illustrated, popular family magazine.

The subscription price of THE ARENA is $5.00; that of the Cosmopolitan is $2.40. But for $5.00 we will send The Arena and the Cosmopolitan, postpaid, for one year to new subscribers.

How THE ARENA is regarded by Leading Thinkers.

ALFRED RUSSELL WALLACE, LL. D., F. L. S., Author of "Darwinism," "Malay Archipelago," etc. The Eminent Scientist and Author writes:—

"I think you have succeeded in the very difficult task of improving on all existing literary periodicals. The articles deal with questions of vital interest to every thoughtful person."

Rev. CYRUS A. BARTOL, D. D, the Distinguished New England Clergyman:

"The place that was waiting for a periodical, got only free and able, but catholic and comprehensive,—fair to every thinker and just to all thought, while open to any subject, in which our common humanity was concerned.—in my judgment you fill."

OPINIONS OF CRITICAL JOURNALS.

"Full of mental stimulus, of breadth and vitality."—Boston Traveler.
"The Arena is a fine magazine of the best writings."—N. O. Picayune.

"At the head of magazine literature of a superior sort, and is more particularly designed for educated minds."—New York Times.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—This great offer—The Arena and the Cosmopolitan Magazine combined is only made to new subscribers of both magazines. Old subscribers must remit $5.50 when sending their order. Address THE ARENA PUBLISHING COMPANY, Copley Square, Boston, Mass.

WHEN TIME IS DONE.

"Hereafter in a better world than this,
I shall desire more love and knowledge of you."—As You Like It.

Now and again, amid the thronging street,
As hastening through our daily round we go,
Our pulses to unwonted measures beat,
To see some face of light,
Seen and then lost to sight,
Whereat we muse "How fair a soul to know!"

Now and again, in quiet peaceful hours,
Some precious page will steal our hearts away;
The while we read we feel life's dormant powers;
"To touch that robe of white,
Live in that presence bright!
Why dwelt we not near that sweet saint?" we say.

Now and again the patient waiting faces
Of aged folk whose days are nearly run,
Gentle manhood, children's tender graces,
Bring wistful joy like pain.
Could these with us remain,
How different were life beneath our sun!

Once and forever, from beyond the sun,
Shall come the light to show all longing heart
Their never-found, their loved and lost, each one;
And thus great promise give
That all on earth who live
Shall love and knowledge have when time is done.

—W. Henry Winslow, in Youth's Companion.

A MOTHER-IN-LAW.

How a Fault-Finding Husband Was Trapped by Her Aid.

"I wouldn't have believed it of you, Rachel," said Mrs. Edmonstone, plaintively. "No, I wouldn't, not unless Betsy Tacker had told me; and Betsy, she never told a lie no more than George Washington did."

"Why, mother, what are you talking about?" questioned Mrs. Thomas Edmonstone, untying the elder lady's bonnet strings and relieving her of a splint basket, a black silk bag, a waterproof cloak and an umbrella.

"And I've come to see if it's true," added the old lady.

"If what's true, mother?"

"That you said you wished there wasn't no such person as m—me!" faltered Mrs. Edmonstone.

"Mother, you know I never could have said such a thing!" cried out Rachel.

"Well, it wasn't exactly that; but Betsy Tacker heard you say you wished there was no such a thing as a mother-in-law."

"Oh!" cried Rachel, with a hysterical little laugh. "I plead guilty. I did say that. But, oh! mother! it was under such strong provocation, and I never meant you. How could I, when you have always been so good to me?"

"I knew it couldn't be true," said Mrs. Edmonstone, settling herself in the easiest rocking-chair and nodding her cap-strings comfortably. "But how came you to make that ex-tra-or-dinary speech, Rachel, about mothers-in-law in general?"

"It was Tom," said the young wife. "He was so aggravating!"

"Thomas always was aggravating," said Mrs. Edmonstone, stirring the cup of tea that Rachel had brought her. "And what was it about now? The breakfast cakes?"

"Oh, you remember about the breakfast cakes, don't you?" said Rachel, with merry mischief sparkling in her eyes. "No, it wasn't the breakfast cakes this time; it was the shirts."

"The shirts?"

"Well, you know he said it was such a wasteful, extravagant proceeding to buy shirts ready-made," explained Rachel. "He said the linen was poor, and the work regular slop-shop style, and he declared you always used to make his shirts at home, every stitch, before he was married."

"So I did," acknowledged Mrs. Edmonstone, with a groan. "But that was in the old times, before you could buy such a good article as they have now."

"Yes, but Tom doesn't make any allowance for difference in times and customs," sighed Rachel. "He wanted home-made shirts, and home-made shirts he would have!"

"And you made 'em?"

"Yes, I made them."

"You were a great goose," reflectively spoke Mrs. Edmonstone.

"And—and Tom swore dreadfully the first time he put one on"—

"I don't in the least doubt it."

"And he said they set like meal bags, and that they twisted his neck around as if he had just been hanged, and grasped him on the shoulders like a policeman! Oh, I can't tell you what he didn't say!"

"Bless me!" said Mrs. Edmonstone.

"He told me his mother's shirts set like a glove, and fitted him perfectly—and why couldn't I turn out a shirt like those? And it was then, mother dear," suddenly flinging her arms around the old lady's plump, comfortable neck, "that I lost my head, and told him I wished there wasn't such a thing as a mother-in-law in the world! And Betsy Tacker sat in the sewing-room altering over my dolman in the spring style, and I suppose she must have heard me."

"Don't mind it, my dear," said Mrs. Edmonstone.

"No, I won't," protested Rachel. "But, oh, those shirts! I've been ripping them apart and sewing them together again, and rounding off a gusset here, and taking in a plait there, until I've got so that I dream of 'em at night; and the more I try 'em on the worse they fit, and the more unreasonable Tom becomes. 'My mother never made such work of it as this!' says he."

"Thomas forgets," observed Mrs. Edmonstone, severely.

"And I am sure, if things go on like this," added Rachel, pushing her short brown curls off her forehead, "it will end in a separation on account of 'incompatibility of temper.'"

"No, it won't, my dear," said the mother-in-law. "Here, get me the pattern and some shirting muslin, and a pair of scissors."

"What are you going to do, mother?" eagerly questioned Rachel.

"I'm going to make Tom a shirt. But don't you tell him, Rachel. We'll see whether it is Tom or the pattern that has altered."

Once more the mischievous light came into Rachel's bright blue eyes.

"I wish all the world were mothers-in-law!" she cried gleefully. "Why didn't I think of this before?"

"One can't think of every thing, child," said Mrs. Edmonstone, consolingly.

Thomas Edmonstone welcomed his mother cordially when he came home from business.

"I'm so glad you've come!" said he. "We can have some of the nice old-fashioned dishes now. Rachel can't seem to get the hang of them, although she has always had your book of recipes to guide her."

"Rachel's a good deal better cook than ever I pretended to be," said Mrs. Edmonstone. "They have patent egg-beaters and cream-whippers and raisin-seeders, and all that sort of thing now, that they didn't have in my day. I never tasted nicer bread than Rachel makes, and these pop-overs are delicious."

"You're just saying that to encourage Rachel," said Mr. Edmonstone, with an incredulous smile. "Things will run smooth now you've come. That's one comfort."

"Oh, I shouldn't think of interfering in Rachel's kitchen," said the old lady.

"Please do, mother," coaxed the wife, not without a certain quiver in her lip. "Do let Tom have a reminiscence of the old days while you are here."

"Well, just as you children say," conceded the mother-in-law, good-humoredly.

She remained a week at her son's house, during which period of time Tom was all exultant complacency.

"This," said he, "is something like living. I feel myself a boy again when I taste these apple-fritters."

"They're not bad," said Rachel, who had made them with her own skillful hands. And she helped herself to a little of the sauce.

"And why didn't you learn my mother's knack of making such pie-crust as this?" demanded Tom. "There's no dyspepsia here."

"I'm glad you're pleased," said Rachel, with a guilty glance at her mother-in-law. "Oh, by the way, Tom, the last of the set of shirts is finished now. Will you put it on to-morrow?"

"I suppose so," ungraciously uttered Tom. "Will set like fury, I dare say, like all the rest of them!"

"You might at least give it a trial."

"Didn't I say I would?" still more ungraciously. "Those shirts will be the death of me yet," he added, turning to his mother with a groan, while Rachel sat steadily observing the pattern of the tablecloth.

The breakfast stood smoking on the table next morning when Mr. Edmonstone came into the room twisting himself as if he were practising to be a human corkscrew. Mrs. Edmonstone glanced timidly up at him.

"Doesn't it fit, Tom?" she questioned.

"Fit! Just look at it, will you?" he retorted. "Fit! Hangs like a window-curtain around my neck—pinches my wrist like a pair of handcuffs! I feel as if I were in a strait-jacket"—writhing impatiently to and fro. "Oh, I might have known it beforehand. You haven't an idea what the word fit means. I wish, mother, you could teach this wife of mine how to make a decent shirt!"

"Thomas," said Mrs. Edmonstone solemnly, transfixing him with the glistening spheres of her spectacle glasses, "you are not very polite. I made that shirt."

"You, mother!"

"Yes, I myself. Just as I used to make shirts for you in the old times that you're always sighing after. I've been working at it ever since I've been in the house. Throw away the pattern, Rachel, and don't waste any more time trying to make your husband's shirts," she added. "It's an economy of time and temper, as well as of money, to buy them ready-made. And as for the cooking you have been praising up so eloquently all the time I've been here, Tom, I haven't touched a pot or a pan. It's all your wife's work. So much for imagination! Oh, you needn't hang your head so sheepishly; you're neither better nor worse than most men," went on Mrs. Edmonstone. "I never saw the man yet that didn't need to hear a little wholesome truth now and then. You've got the best and sweetest little wife in the world."

"Mother!" pleaded Rachel, trying to put her hand over the old lady's mouth, but Mrs. Edmonstone resolutely persisted:

"And it's my advice to you to try to treat her as she deserves."

"I—I don't know but I have been rather cranky of late," said Tom, self-consciously, "now that I come to think of it."

"Cranky! I should think so," said the old lady. "I'm sure I don't know what the world's coming to. Here's little Georgy toddling around with his wooden cart. The first you know he'll be telling his wife about the wonderful successes his mother used to make in this, and that, and the other thing. We've all got to come to it."

"And Georgy'll be right," said Tom, who, after all, had a magnanimous streak through him. "What a crab I've been! Hang the home-made shirts! I'll buy 'em out of the store next time! Kiss me, Rachel—and you, too, mother. And be sure you let me have a dish of scalloped oysters when I come home to dinner." The oysters Rachel cooked.

He ate his breakfast and departed. And when he was gone, young Mrs. Edmonstone looked with shining eyes at old Mrs. Edmonstone.

"Oh, what a nice thing to have a mother-in-law!" said she, fervently.—Fireside Companion.

DEPRESSION AND ITS CAUSES.

Having received assurance from one of your staff that the columns of THE STOCKMAN were open to a candid and impersonal discussion of farmers' grievances, and remedies thereof, I avail myself of this "open space" to submit a few thoughts. I need not furnish evidence to prove that farmers as a class are not as prosperous as in the past. Farm values all over the country have shrunk in the past fifteen years from 30 to 50 per cent. It is clear that this shrinkage is the result of low prices of farm produce on one hand, and of unjust tribute paid to favored classes on the other.

The pertinent inquiry then is: What has caused the low prices, and by what means is unjust tribute collected from the farmer? This is a broad inquiry, and cannot be answered in one nor a score of papers. If it be found true, as I assert, that the farmer's taxes, direct and indirect, have increased, while his means of payment, through low prices, have grown less, there need be no wonder why the greatest of all interests—agriculture—is languishing, and discontent and agitation are filling thoughtful minds with grave concern.

There are essayists and orators who attribute the hard times experienced by farmers as a class to faulty personal management. One of these, in a recent issue of THE STOCKMAN, informs us that he has money enough at interest, loaned to brother farmers, to "buy another farm." He receives interest while they pay it. The suggestion is: "Be a lender of money instead of a borrower." I too know gray-headed farmers who long ago made and saved money at farming, but, shrewder than the average, saw in time that money lending would in the future pay better than farming, and so in time took the advice of your Stark county correspondent, "dumped" a portion of their land upon somebody else at a good price, and began to take in interest more than the land will yield to the husbandman. But had he held his land till now to "dump" at 40 per cent or the price he paid for it he would not distinguish himself as a money lender. If he were to adopt the advice to "stop the interest by paying the principal," and his only means of paying the principal was to "dump" the home upon a ruinous market, he would find himself down and out among the millions who are poorer than "the foxes that have holes and the birds that have nests." I admit that personal management has much to do with personal success in life. But the general depression in agriculture cannot be justly attributed to bad personal management. There are economic and social conditions for which society as a whole is responsible, which make it either easy difficult or impossible for the producers of wealth to prosper. Heretofore few, comparatively, have studied or understood these "conditions." The average citizen has built upon the idea that "personal management" was the sure road to success, and left political economy to professionals with time to study it. Too often the "professional" has built his theories upon feudal or aristocratic authorities, or framed them as attorney for the highest attainable fee.

I am of the opinion that a "false balance" between debtor and creditor, between the producer of wealth and the distributor of wealth, between the plain people theoretically sovereign, and public officials theoretically servants, is at the bottom of all our trouble. The great farmers' movement is educating the people to think for themselves. The "sir oracles" who have led public sentiment in the past are at a discount. Some good people, and more selfish ones, are alarmed "lest agitation lead to revolution." I am not alarmed at all; for with Jefferson I regard "error as harmless if truth be free to combat it." A "revolution" is the one thing needful. A change wrought by enlightened public sentiment and a quickened public conscience. A change of laws and systems that makes Goulds and Vanderbilts impossible, that will make honest labor more safe and honorable than crafty combines, or gambling devices, to amass fortunes.

The above are but "generalities." However, by your permission, I may, in future numbers of your valuable paper give more specifically what I regard as the chief causes of agricultural depression and some practical and logical remedies.—JOHN SEITZ, in National Stockman.

HE WILL WEAR NO SOCKS.

A Protection Organ's Comments Upon Hon. Jerry Simpson's "Free Trade Prejudices."

One of the favorite lines of "argument" adopted by the defenders of the McKinley law in the campaign last fall was to point out that the free list was larger in it than in any tariff since the war. When the opponents of protection ridiculed this boasted free list by quoting its provisions for free "acorns," "assafetida" "ashes," "beeswax," etc., the McKinleyites were wroth and claimed that this was but another attempt by the "British free traders" to mislead the people by disguising from them "the strong points" of the McKinley law.

No one expected that after the election was over a leading protection paper would undertake to show what a narrow and unsatisfying thing McKinley's free list is; but the Manufacturer, the organ of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Club, has just done precisely that service to the country.

Hon. Jerry Simpson, the Farmers' Alliance Congressman-elect from Kansas, wears no stockings, and a Jersey City manufacturer sent him several pairs, which were sent back with the following letter:

Sir: Our forefathers refused to drink tea because it was taxed 3 per cent., and held a tea party in Boston to get rid of the stuff. I have just finished figuring up the tax upon those stockings and I find that it amounts to 70 per cent. I will wear no socks till the tax is taken off.

The manufacturer proceeds to comment upon this letter to show the difficulties which the Congressman-elect will encounter if he seeks to be consistent and will use no tariff-taxed articles; and it must be confessed that the high protection organ does this in a way which would make the uninformed reader suppose that the following extract was taken from a "free trade" journal:

As there is a heavy duty upon soap, no doubt the Kansas statesman finds a pretext for positively declining to use that article. In such matters, however, it is likely that he finds his natural inclinations fitting in nicely with his free trade prejudices. But, if he is indeed going to try to live up to his principles it is difficult to perceive how he is going to live at all. Nearly every article of clothing and the great mass of articles of food are subject to duties; and, therefore, his theory ought to confine him rigidly to use of materials that are upon the free list. The attempt of the Honorable Jerry to live within the boundaries of the free list would excite universal interest and curiosity. He would, of course, clothe himself with "hides, raw or uncured," with "asbestos" trimmings, perhaps, and his diet would range from "acorns," "aconite" and "assafetida" to "oil-cake," "caoutchouc," "verdigris" and "yams." The Kansas Congressman is going to be a particularly entertaining object of consideration if he shall try to be consistent.

The Manufacturer should be congratulated for showing up the limited character of the McKinley free list. If the "Hon. Jerry" will follow its suggestion that it should be consistent and will dress himself up in "hides, raw or uncured," with "asbestos" trimmings, he will become, in this John the Baptist garb, a preacher of "free trade" such as this country has never seen. The Kansas Congressman-elect, thus rigged out in the precarious habiliments of McKinley's free list, would not need to utter one word against our high tariff laws: his very appearance would have all the eloquence of a "voice of one crying in the wilderness."

A PLATE-GLASS TRUST.

The American Manufacturers of Plate-Glass Meet and Raise Prices—A Highly Protected Industry Gets More Tariff Pap—Great Profits of the Industry—The English Take a Hand.

On the day after Christmas the New York Tribune, the champion high tariff organ of the country, printed the following dispatch from Pittsburgh, Pa.:

A meeting of the manufacturers and jobbers of the plate-glass trade will be held in this city in the near future. At the recent New York meeting it was decided to advance prices 30 per cent., but since then Western men have made a stand for a 25 per cent. advance. The avowed intention of the fraternal combination is to keep plate-glass prices at the highest figure possible, and at the same time keep it low enough to shut out all importation.

When trusts are formed the manufacturers who go into them usually put forward some such excuse as "ruinous competition," and sometimes they call it "cut-throat competition." Before the Ways and Means Committee at Washington they plead for protection upon the ground that it will bring about competition; but when competition has begun to do its work they suddenly discover that competition is the very thing that they do not want; hence they must "get rid of competition," and so a trust is formed.

But the plate-glass manufacturers are the last men that should complain of excessive competition and low profits. There are only nine or ten factories in this country which make plate-glass; and there is usually an understanding among these as to their price lists. This combination, however, was not so strong as to prevent some of the manufacturers and dealers from cutting prices, hence at the New York meeting referred to steps were taken to make the combination more solid.

The New York Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter, which is also an organ of the glass trade, printed an editorial on the subject of the New York meeting, in which it said:

"On Saturday last the dealers of this city and Boston met at the Metropolitan Hotel and held a prolonged session with closed doors. At the end of the meeting it was announced that the combination had been materially strengthened by the exaction of renewed pledges to maintain the agreed prices."

This paper furthermore described the plate-glass market as "in better shape than ever before," there being an active demand and "stocks in all hands low." These low stocks can not, however, be replenished by importation, as the McKinley duties are almost prohibitory, and the Reporter points out further that "no relief can be looked for from the other side, as prices there have been advanced of late, and the import cost is altogether too high to encourage importations."

The protectionists are fond of pointing to the plate-glass industry, as one of the best illustrations of the wisdom of our high tariff policy. They point out how the industry had to struggle for a foothold here in its infancy, how protection came to its aid, how the production has increased to 25,000,000 feet annually, and how the price has gone down under protection from 65 to 90 cents.

At first sight this looks like a strong case for the protectionists; but some further facts need to be told to show its "true inwardness." The small quantity of plate-glass that came into the country for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1890, was admitted, according to the treasury reports, at 32.86 cents per square foot. Now if we calculate the total cost of our 25,000,000 feet of home manufactured glass, (the amount claimed by the protectionists as our annual output), at this price we find that it would have been $8,215,000.

But the price of the glass manufactured in this country ranged, according to protectionist authority, from 65 to 90 cents a foot. The average of these two figures would be 77½; but putting the average still lower, say 75 cents, the wholesale price of this glass was $18,750,000. In other words, we paid $10,535,00 more for it in the home market than if we had bought it from the foreign manufacturers at the average prices prevailing in 1890.

The full significance of these figures can be seen by taking the case of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company. In their advertisement in the latest number of The Manufacturer and Builder they claim to have a "capacity of 260,000 square feet monthly." This would be 3,120,000 feet in a year, which, at 75 cents a foot, would bring $2,340,000. If the same quantity were bought at 32.28 cents per square foot, the foreign price as above given, the total cost would have been $1,025,232, or a net tariff difference of $1,314,768 for the American consumer to pay.

Early last year there was a case in Pittsburgh in which one of the men interested in this company testified that it cleared 34¾ per cent. on its capital in 1889. About the same time a representative of this company went to England to negotiate with an English syndicate, with a view to uniting the nine plate-glass factories of this country. The English had already gotten wind of the great tariff spoils our glass men were making, for it was announced at the same time that an English company had begun the erection of a factory at Irwin, a town near Pittsburgh, Pa.

The high protection given the plate-glass men under the old law had become almost prohibitory even before McKinley began to turn his tariff mill. The last English firm doing business in New York closed up its establishment in that city several years ago, and our importations of plain polished plate-glass are now less than one million dollars' worth a year. Yet McKinley strengthened the practical monopoly enjoyed by our manufacturers by raising the duty on the smallest size of glass from three cents per foot to five cents—an advance which was not asked for by the manufacturers themselves, so far as the official published reports show. The duty on the largest sizes of plate glass is 50 cents a foot, which is equal, according to the official figures used by the Senate, to 141.43 per cent. ad valorem. Additional protection is now given the manufacturers by the new customs law, which allows nothing for broken glass.

The McKinleyites did all they could to smooth the way for trusts, and trusts are now springing into life with a rapidity which ought to be very gratifying to McKinley, who believes that "cheap merchandise means cheap men."

TO PUT IN YOUR HAT.

How McKinley Increased the Duties on Wool Hats.

The McKinley duties on wool hats show a sharp increase upon the old rates. The duties in both the old law and in the present law are so-called compound duties: that is, there is a specific duty of so much per pound and an ad valorem duty in addition. Thus on hats valued at 30 cents a pound or less the old duty was ten cents a pound and 35 per cent. ad valorem—the compound duty being equal to an ad valorem duty of 68 per cent. The corresponding McKinley duty is 16½ cents per pound and 30 per cent., the two duties here being equivalent to an ad valorem duty of 85 per cent.

Hats of the next class are those valued at more than 30 and not more than 40 cents a pound. The old duty on this grade was equivalent to 65 per cent. and the McKinley duty 90.

The next grade of hats under the old law was those valued at between 40 and 60 cents a pound. The McKinley law makes this class stop at 50 cents and adds a class covering those between 50 and 60 cents per pound. Thus under the old law hats in the class between 40 and 50 bore an equivalent ad valorem duty of 71 per cent., and under the McKinley law the equivalent ad valorem is 101 per cent. On hats worth between 50 and 60 cents the equivalent in the old law was 68 per cent.; in the McKinley law it is 112 per cent.

The next class in both laws extends from 60 to 80 cents a pound—the ad valorem equivalent being 72 per cent., and the McKinley ad valorem 100 per cent.

The last class in both laws covers hats valued at above 80 cents a pound. The old tariff levied a duty here which was equal to 69 per cent.; and McKinley made only a slight advance in this highest class of hats, his equivalent ad valorem being 71 per cent. Having gotten above the range of the poorer class of buyers he saw no good reason for increasing the duty very much.

The equivalent ad valorem duties here given are obtained by combining the pound duty and the ad valorem rate and calculating them upon the value of hats imported. Very few wool hats, however, were imported under the old law, the rates under it being almost prohibitory; but under the McKinley law importation may be expected to cease entirely. The American manufacturers had a practical monopoly before, and McKinley gives them a complete monopoly. Shall we not now have a wool hat trust?

—The McKinley law increases the already high protection given to our manufacturers of calico prints; but calicoes are not demanded in the same quantities this year as last year, and no amount of protection medicine will avail in such cases.

The Voice

Is easily injured—the slightest irritation of the throat or larynx at once affecting its tone, flexibility, or power. All efforts to sing or speak in public, under such conditions, become not only painful but dangerous, and should be strictly avoided until every symptom is removed. To effect a speedy cure no other medicine is equal to

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

The best of anodynes, this preparation rapidly soothes irritation, strengthens the delicate organs of speech, and restores the voice to its tone and power. No singer or public speaker should be without it. Lydia Thompson, the famous actress, certifies: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been of very great service to me. It improves and strengthens the voice, and is always effective for the cure of colds and coughs."

"Upon several occasions I have suffered from colds, causing hoarseness and entire loss of voice. In my profession of an auctioneer any affection of the voice or throat is a serious matter, but at each attack, I have been relieved by a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy, with ordinary care, has worked such a that I have suffered very little inconvenience. I have also used it in my family, with excellent results, in coughs, colds, &c."—Wm. H. Quartly, Minlaton, Australia.

"In the spring of 1853, at Portsmouth, Va., I was prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia. My physicians exhausted their remedies, and for one year I was not able to even articulate a word. By the advice of Dr. Shaw I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and to my surprise and great joy, in less than one month I could converse easily, in a natural tone of voice. I continued to improve and have become since a well man. I have often recommended the Pectoral, and have never known it to fail."—George R. Lawrence, Valparaiso, Ind.

Miss Florence Graham, who was here to attend the wedding, was taken sick on the return journey to London and was obliged to remain in Detroit. Her friends here feel very anxious about her.

Albert Kishpaugh has been quite sick, but hopes to be out in a few days.

Died Sunday morning at ten o'clock Hattie, wife of Henry Starrett. She has been an invalid foryears, but for the last few weeks she had seemed better than in some time past. She was taken worse last week and Friday ight she became unconscious remaining in that state until her death Sunday morning. Mrs. Starrett leaves a husband, four sons, and one daughter to mourn her loss. They have the heart-felt sympathy of many friends in their affliction. The funeral services were held Wednesday at ten o'clock.

The community was shocked to hear of the sudden death of Mr. Charles T. Clark last Saturday evening. Mr. Clark had driven to Tecumseh in the afternoon returning about 5 o'clock. He ate a hearty supper and expressed his intention of going down town. He had been absent from the house but a few minutes when his sister, Mrs. Tuttle, heard some one groning and opening the door found him trying to get up the steps. She assisted him into the house and sent immediately for Dr. Tuttle. After a time he became easier and was assisted into bed but about nine o'cloek the pain returned and he grew rapidly worse until ten o'clock when he breathed his last. The doctor pronounced the trouble apoplexy. The funeral was held Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Laura Tuttle; Mr. Clark was a member of the Masonic Lodge and was buried with Masonic honors.

At half past six o'clock last Thursday evening the little church of St. Johns was filled to its ut ost capacity with invited guests to witness the marriage of Miss Blanche Smith and L. W. Kimball. As the strains of the beautiful wedding march were heard the bridal party appeared and advanced to the alter where the groom and his best man V. E. Haywood awaited them. The bridal procession was led by the ushers, Chas. Thompson, Ben Garlinghouse, Ben Ellis and Will Eagan. Following them were the bridesmaids: Misses Florence Graham, Bertha Rose, Ronaldine McDonald, Vesta Mills and Clyde Marsteller. The bride leaning upon her father's arm was preceded by the maid of honor Miss Marie Marigold. The party took their positions at the alter where the impre-sive marriage ceremony of the Episcopal church was read by Rev. Abram Reeves. After the ceremony the guests were received from seven until nine at the beautiful home of E. R. Smith. A sumptuous banquet was served by a Detroit caterer, and from beginning to end the ceremony and reception were perfect in every detail. The presents were numerous and elegant; among them a diamond pin from the bridegroom and a pair of diamond bracelets from the bride's mother. The bride wore an elegant white silk, her graduating costume at Hellmuth College. Her veil was trimmed with orange blossoms from Florida and California, and only partially hid the bright young face with its look of happiness, which will linger long in the minds of those who witnessed the ceremony

Those who were present at the wedding from abroad were; Mr. and Mrs. Ruel Mills and daughter, Saline; Mrs. Whitmore, Mason; Mr. Will Hunter and Miss Hattie Hunter, Detroit; Mrs. I. W. Miller, Albion, Miss Laura Clark, Ann Arbor; Miss Lou McDermott, Detroit; V. E. Haywood, Port Huron; Miss Marie Marigold, Winona; Misses Florence Graham, Bertha Rose, Ronaldine McDonald, Hellmuth College, London; Miss Carl Corey, Paw Paw; Mr. Will Eagan, Ann Arbor; Mr. and Mrs. S. MARVELOUS ENDURANCE

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 164 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry, or smothering spells, swolen ankles, etc. Dr. Franklen Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only reliable remedy. Sold by Baker & Hall.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

If a price can be placed on pain "Mother's Friend" is worth its weight in gold as an alleviator. My wife suffered more in ten minutes with either of her other two children than she did all together with her last, having previously used four bottles of "Mother's Friend." It is a blessing to any one expecting to become a mother, says a customer of mine.

Loss of the Iowa.

Correct Details of the Disaster Last Week.

SHE ENCOUNTERED A FIELD OF ICE AND WAS STRAINED,

Springing a Leak Which Led to Her Abandonment After She Had Half Filled With Water.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The Warren line steamer Iowa, Captain Owens, bound from Boston February 17 for Liverpool, has been abandoned at sea. News of the disaster was brought to this city this morning by the Red Star line steamer Pennland, from Antwerp. Captain Bushmann, of the Pennland, reports that on the 22d inst., at 10 a. m., when his vessel was in latitude 46.29 north, longitude 45.54 west, he sighted the steamer which appeared to be stopped and carrying no sail. She had a heavy list to the starboard and was blowing signals of distress. The disabled steamer proved to be the Iowa. Standing by her was the British steamer Chester, Capt. Tolle, from Rotterdam, February 16, for this port. The Chester was taking off in her boats the crew of Iowa, and will bring them to this port. The Pennland's commander reported that he could not get near enough to ascertain the nature of the Iowa's trouble, but thinks she must have been in a collision.

The Correct Details.

NEW YORK, March 2.—The Standard Oil steamship Chester, from Rotterdam, brings the first correct details of the loss of the Warren line steamship Iowa, before reported as abandoned at sea. These show that the Iowa did not collide with an iceberg, but sprung a leak after being strained by field and drift ice, and had to be abandoned, when half filled with water. All on board, numbering seventy-five, were saved and brought to this port by the Chester. The only person injured was Michael Donnelly, a seaman, who was badly crushed in launching the life boat of the Iowa. Captain Owen, of the Iowa, says the weather after leaving Boston, was very favorable until she ran into the ice field, February 21, which grew thicker and more dangerous and so strained the ship that she sprung a leak.

KEPT THEIR WORD.

A Mississippi Incident—Shot His Brother by Mistake.

TEMPLE, Miss., March 1.—A negro arrested for stealing a bale of cotton was told by Milton Smith and S. F. Smith, brothers, that they would kill him if he implicated them. The trial was set for yesterday and the Smith brothers rode off. Bailiff Drake, fearing that they would leave the county, organized a posse to arrest them, but before the posse started the Smiths returned. Drake ordered Milton to surrender, when both the Smiths drew their guns and began firing. Milton shot at a man who had his hand on his brother's shoulder, but missed and shot his brother in the eye, killing him instantly. Milton was then shot from his horse by the posse and cannot recover. He received a number of balls and fired back at the posse after falling to the ground.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

The Plans are Not Yet Perfected—They Will Start Soon, if at All.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The President and Mrs. Harrison have not yet settled all the details of their southern and western journey, or in fact whether they will go; but in a few days, if they decide to go, their plans will be in such shape that something definite about the trip may be announced. This much, however, is known about the proposed trip; that the president, if he goes, will start from Washington early in May, and that the itineram of the journey will be planned so as to permit the president to make a number of speeches while en route—most of them in the southern states.

TERRIBLE SNOW SLIDE.

Four Persons Buried and All Probably Dead.

CRESTED BUTTE, COL., Feb. 28.—A snow slide swept over the Bullion King mine at Irwin at one o'clock Wednesday afternoon, carrying the boarding house and Superintendent Ropell's dwelling house. Mrs. Ropell, Mrs. Ed. Clarke and child at the boarding house and B. F. Smiley, the engineer, are still buried in the slide with but little hope of their recovery alive. The miners had gone to the shaft houses and escaped. Every man was put to work and about thirty left here yesterday morning for the scene, in the vain hope that some of the victims may be found alive.

CENTER OF POPULATION.

It is Now in Decatur County, in the Southern Portion of Indiana.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The census office has just issued a bulletin announcing that the center of population of the United States is located in the southern portion of Indiana, slightly west of Greensburg, in Decatur county. The movement of the centre of population which was 23 miles east of Baltimore in 1790 has moved westward on about the 39th degree of latitude at the rate of from 10 to 30 miles each decade in the century, the most rapid stride being between 1850 and 1860 when it moved from near Parkersburg, W. Va., to Chillicothe, Ohio, 41 miles. The distance moved westward in the last decade was 48 miles.

BIG BOILER BURSTS,

Hurling Three Men Into Eternity—Bad Accident in Missouri.

CHARITON, MO., March 1.—The boiler of James Fugates sawmill, located nine miles south of here, exploded, killing Jeff Cobb, Charles Cobb and John Dawdy. The body of Charles Cobb was thrown 700 feet in the air and one leg was picked up in a cornfield 100 yards from the body. Four other mill hands were dangerously injured. Lack of water in the boiler is supposed to have caused the explosion.

Wagon Factory Burned.

ST. LOUIS, March 2.—The two-story brick factory of the Schelt Wagon and Carriage company, 229 to 239 Carr street, was almost completely destroyed by fire. An employe of the adjoining wagon company named Hornecke was severely injured internally by falling bricks. The total loss is placed at $50,000, fully insured.

The real need of a sick baby is not so much medicine as it is something to "assist nature." Many things are recommended, but the best known remedy for the ailments of young children is Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup.

Dr. James Corrie, Dentist in Baltimore, writes: "I have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup personally and in my family for two or three years, and I am prepared to say that there is nothing to compare to it as a remedy for cough, cold, etc. 25 cents.

March April May

Are the best months in which to purify your blood, for at no other season does the system so much need the aid of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, as now. During the long, cold winter, the blood becomes thin and impure, the body becomes weak and tired, the appetite may be lost. Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiarly adapted to purify and enrich the blood, to create a good appetite and to overcome that tired feeling.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has a larger sale than any other sarsaparilla or blood purifier, and it increases in popularity every year, for it is the ideal Spring Medicine.

"I have for a long time been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and believe me, I would not be without it. As a spring medicine it is invaluable." E. A. RHODES, 130 Ontario Street, Chicago, Ill.

Be sure to get

Hood's Sarsaparilla will cure, when in the power of medicine, scrofula, salt rheum, sores, boils, pimples, all humors, dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, indigestion, general debility, catarrh, rheumatism, kidney and liver complaints, and all diseases or affections arising from impure blood or a low condition of the system.

"In the spring I got completely run down. I could not eat or sleep, and all the dreaded

DO YOU WANT A PENSION?

Do You Want Your Pension Increased.

There is a New Pension Law and nearly every soldier is now entitled to a pension.

DR. J. H. REYNOLDS

Late a member of the Board of Examining Surgeons at Adrian, Mich., and who has examined over two thousand soldiers for pensions, will hereafter devote two hours each day to

PENSION BUSINESS

The Doctor was a soldier and is a pensioner, and with his five years' experience as Examining Surgeon for Pensions, believes he can make it PAY YOU to come and see him.

He knows the RATE on every known disability

Knows what Diseases or Disabilities are the results of any other.

Knows (as every EXAMINING SURGEON will tell you) that many men do not draw what the law allows them, because their claims are not presented in proper shape.

Knows how to put your claim in such shape that you will get pay for ALL results of the disease or wound for which you are pensioned.

Knows all the recent decisions made by Commissioner and how to give you the advantage of them in dollars.

Knows that some recent rulings are of vital importance to many pensioners, if their claims are only properly presented.

Knows whether you are entitled to Rerating, and how to get it.

I charge just the legal fees because I earn them ALWAYS BRING YOUR CERTIFICATE WITH YOU.

If you want the benefit of a Pension while you live go and see Dr. Reynolds.

I can get you from $2 to $6 more per month under the new law than other agents.

To any person examined by the board, at Adrian, before Aug. 1, 1889, I have something of importance to tell you.

Come and let us examine you (no charge) and will tell you all about it. About one-third of all the soldiers examined while I was on the board were rated for disabilities not claimed. You had better come and see me about it.

Correspondence solicited, with stamp for reply

15 East Maumee-st., Adrian, Mich.

ATTENTION, Soldiers & Sailors,

Under the new pension law just passed by Congress all Soldiers and Sailors who served 90 days in the Rebellion, and who are disabled from any cause permanently, (need not have originated in the service,) are entitled to a pension of from $6 to $12. All soldiers' widows, minor children and dependent parents come under this law. Being located at the Capital near the U. S. Pension office, we can give our personal attention to your claim and thus ascertain any defect quickly and supply the same.

Write for blanks. Give full description of service and disabilities.

The Power of Necessity!

IS THE MOTHER OF INVENTION.

There has long been a NECESSITY for a clean and convenient place to keep Flour. By this Combined Bin and Sifter, as shown in this cut, that want is now being supplied. The Flour is taken from the bottom, instead of the top, and by so doing the first flour put in is the first taken out. So you can see at once that there is no flour remaining in the bottom of the bin, to become old and musty, as often is the case in the old way of keeping it. It is made durable and strong, and is NOT like some Sifters that have been placed on the market, bought to-day, used to-morrow, and then are a thing of the past,—but last a family a lifetime. All parts are made removable. You may ask anyone who has seen or used them, what they are. Manufactured and sold by

MORE ABOUT HARVEY, ILL.

THE READERS OF THE HERALD WHO HAVE BECOME INTERESTED IN THE

New Temperance and Manufacturing Town

—SHOULD KNOW THAT THE—

HARVEY LAND ASSOCIA'N

Is Grading all the streets, putting in the main Sewerage, also the Sidewalks, Water Pipes, and Shade Trees on Every Street where houses are built, and the ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT for the town, WITHOUT EXPENSE to Lot Owners, on account of which there will be No Taxes this year and comparatively very light for a number of years at least. ALL SHOULD ALSO KNOW that ONLY THOSE who locate and make purchases WITHIN the Corporation of Harvey will obtain the Profit and Advantages of these public improvements. Those who have invested outside are disappointed and provoked when learning this fact. All the Property Offered for Sale by WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., whom we represent in Michigan, IS WITHIN THIS LIMIT, and upon which these improvements are now being made. We have the exclusive sale of all lots less than $300 remaining unsold within the Harvey tract. OVER FIFTY WERE SOLD last Monday by us. Those who want a lot for $200 should act promptly, as they are going rapidly, and an advance will no doubt be made within the next 30 days. The very best thing to do is to come and see for yourself. The next best thing is to select from plats, freely sent to any asking for them; or Write or Telegraph us to select best lots for you remaining unsold. There is good reason to believe that investments made soon will bring double money within a year. Many have done this in the past six months.

The First Impetus to this "Magic City,"

Is that the traffic in Liquors, Gambling and Virtue WILL NOT BE PERMITTED within its borders. FOR THIS REASON extensive manufactories are already established here and more are coming, which will employ at least Five Thousand Operatives in a few months. One company a few days since ordered every house, and the capacity of every boarding house engaged, as they would be on the ground with from 500 to 800 men in ten days. There is a good demand for skilled machinists and mechanics, and it will take an army of common laborers to complete the public improvements and build the houses, etc., needed to accommodate those who come to stay. Our faith is so great in the future of Harvey that we continue to stand by our former proposition to Pay the Expense of any Michigan people to the amount of two per cent. of their investment who will call at our Chicago office and go with us to Harvey. Expense means railroad fare to and from Chicago and Harvey. The usual business methods would place local agents in the field on commission, but we propose to give this commission to the investors, and have no local agents. Such a plan would be a total failure if Harvey was like most of the boom towns. This rebate will be allowed to Michigan people, and to only those who call at our Chicago or Harvey office. Arrangements have been made for LOW RATES at the Grand Hotel, 230 State street, a TEMPERANCE HOUSE, only a short walk from our city office. An extended description of the town, with plats, and any information, will be sent to anyone writing us. REMEMBER TO ADDRESS,

WARING BROS.,

The Foreign and Home missionary societies held a joint meeting in the lecture room of the church, last week Wednesday afternoon. A very pleasant afternoon was spent by all and a splendid supper furnished.

The students in Dist. No. 3, made Lulu Rappleye a surprise on Wednesday evening of last week.

Ida Pocklington, who is teaching in the Blissfield schools came home on Thursday of last week sick. At present she is gaining very finely.

Lelia Sutton was the recipient of a fine upright Newby & Evans Piano, on Monday.

Mrs. J. F. Temple, while preparing breakfast Sunday morning met with a painful accident in going to the cellar for vituals, fell and broke the large bone of the right wrist and cut an ugly wound on the head. She is doing as well as could be expected at present.

Emma Miller left on Thursday afternoon for Detroit for an indefinite stay with her sister, Mrs. B. J. Coller.

Mr. & Mrs. Jessie Lowe, of Barry county, returned Wednesday after a visit with relatives for a few days.

Rev. Russell H. Conwell, the fifth on the Tecumseh musical and lecture course, will lecture at the Tecumseh Opera House on Monday evening, March 23d. Tickets may be had by calling at the library; single tickets, 50cts.

Mrs. G. P. Waring and daughter, Ruth, are in Harvey this week, with Mr. Waring.

Ella Jackson, of Tecumseh, spent Tuesday and Wednesday with relatives.

All on the sick list are improving finely.

The next meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be a mother's meeting held at the home of Mrs. S. P. Smith, March 19th in charge of the Superintendent. At the last meeting two new names were placed on the pledge card as members. They gave us words of encouragement and Godspeed. Voted not to have any more notices of regular meetings read from the pulpit on Sunday mornings. After quite a spirited discussion it was carried by eight yeas to two nays.

The log for the ship social is now complete and is receiving careful and thorough preparation, so as to be one of the finest entertainments given here for several years. The date of launching of our ship has been set for Wednesday evening, March 25th, '81. The log will be given in full next week.

Agnes Swick was born in Macon, Sept. 9th, 1846, where she lived until she was married to Wm. H. Hoagland. Since that time her residence has been in the town of Dundee, where her death occurred, March 4th. She was an affectionate wife and mother, a kind neighbor, always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to those in distress. She leaves a husband, one son, two daughters, five sisters and two brothers to mourn her loss. The funeral services were held on Friday at the Christian church, Britton. Rev. J. A. Lowry officiating, assisted by James Wright.

ONSTED ODDS.

A quantity of hogs and calves were shipped from here last Saturday.

The widow of the late John Lee fell the other day, causing the fracture of an arm.

John Onsted is down with measles, and he's a boy of about 35 summers.

Mrs. Emma Walker has moved into her house on Fourth-st., where she expects to run a loom and weave carpets for whoever wishes anything in that line.

The Grangers will give another of their good entertainments at their hall, on Friday evening of this week.

Go and see Louva, the Pauper, in five acts, which will come off soon here.

Fred Daniels and wife intend soon to start for North Dakota. Therefore the young people of this locality will indulge in a social dance at his house, on Tuesday evening of this week.

G. C. Randolph and sons have rented the farm of Fred Daniels.

Senator or ex-senator? Well, Mr. G. B. Horton can now resume cheese-making at his factories, without being molested with senatorial affairs.

The branch store of Culver & Co., of Brooklyn, has been duly opened to the public and business with them is already very good.

Mr. Goodell, the agent who solicited for Cram's Atlas and other works, informs us that he will be in this locality delivering the books April 1st.

MACON MUSIC.

Mrs. Catharine Burdette, who has been dangerously ill for some time is gaining, with every encouragement for recovery.

Mrs. Ed. Morgan of Mason, Ingham Co., is visiting her many relatives and friends in this vicinity.

John Gordon's machine has been sawing a "big job," about 50,000 feet of lumber, in this vicinity. Mr. Gordon's men are hustlers and have the honored reputation of economizing the timber more closely than any sawyers in the country. Six thousand feet is the average day's work with no stopping for wind, weather, rain or luncheon.

Sam Hatch has come home to stay and will settle down with his family at the old homestead. A royal greeting is extended Mr. Hatch by all the old friends and neighbors of his boyhood day.

Joe Sage has sold his interest in the Dewdrop, and will give his whole time to farming and door-stripping.

Celia Brewster, Grace Sage, Sadie and Minta Jackson, attended the teacher's examination at Adrian last Thursday and Friday.

Darius Hendershot expects to move on his farm, known as the Hall farm, about the middle of the month.

B. S. Scudder and Calvin Davenport went to Clinton on business last Monday.

Bell Ogden of Clinton, spent last Sunday with Kate Ellis.

There was no preaching at the M. E. church last Sunday, on account of Rev. Stalker's fatigue, from a call to the sick bed of Mrs. Stalker's father, at Ann Arbor.

Milton Davenport has sold his stock and farm implements and will leave the farm; he is thinking of building a house on Pearl street and trying city life.

A young Hunter of South Macon, is Walping game in this vicinity.

John Mooney while sawing buzzwood last week, started for the saw with a stick when the pile fell striking him on the head knocking him down, falling upon the stick he was carrying. His head and hip were hurt quite bad.

Albert Collins will move back on his farm this spring.

School closes next Thursday, the 19th, and an exhibition will be given in the evening at the Baptist church. A small admission will be charged; the proceeds to be used in purchasing a flag for the school building.

Mrs. Marian B. Baxter, a clebrated lecturer, will speak in the M. E. church of this place, on Tuesday evening, March 17th. Subject, Temperance. Remember this is the first time we have been able to secure a national lecturer in this place, and only now through the special benefit given to Michigan by the Woman's lecture bureau. Mrs. Baxter has been all through the land from east to west, and everywhere the press speaks loudly in her praise. Never mind the wind or weather, but let everybody come; this will be a rare treat and no one can afford to miss it. A collection will be taken to help defray expenses, which, without some assistance, will fall quite heavily upon the temperance union.

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

The ladies of the M. E. church society held a social at the parsonage on Wednesday afternoon, Mar. 4th.

Jacob Miller will move into the tenant house vacated by Mat Ehnis, and will work for Wm. Burtless this year.

Wm. Burtless sold his fat cattle to Jackson parties and on Monday took them as far as Napoleon.

Daniel Burch having sold a mooley cow, adopted a novel way to lead her by tieing a block to one end of a rope. When mooley stared to run he stepped on the block; but it was drawn from under his feet, throwing him to the frozen ground, cutting a deep and severe gash in his forehead.

The Alpha Sigma society, connected with the High School, gave a good program before an attentive audience on Monday evening, consisting of a recitation by Miss Julia M. Kirchgessner and a solo by Miss Anna Gieske. The debate upon the question: "Resolved that the English were entirely to blame for the French and Indian war," was participated in by Eugene Kirchgessner and Miss Edith Knapp on the affirmative, and Bert Riggs and Miss Francis Logan on the negative side. The committee composed of Miss Edith Case, Dennis Torrey and Will Gieske decided in favor of the negative. Music by an amateur orchestra closed an interesting evening's exercises.

A dancing party at Alden Blaisdell's, at Burch's Corners, last Thursday night. He has recently moved upon the Wm. Freeman farm.

Mrs. H. T. VanValkenburg and Ora returned from Clayton, on Saturday, where they had spent several days visiting relatives.

Bert Chase, of Jackson, who is employed in a carriage factory, is at his parents in town, nursing a felon on his hand.

Mrs. Chas. Cooley and her little son, of Muskegon, came here last Saturday to visit her mother, Mrs. H. T. Van Valkenburg, and other relatives.

Miss Maud E Lapham closes her school, on the "turnpike," today with an interesting program of literary exercises.

There was a surprise at Dudley Witherell's, for his son, Vernie, last Saturday night. Will and Wells Martin furnished music on the occasion. Our readers will remember that Vernie had the ill luck to break his leg a year ago, but is doing finely.

Rev. W. J. Gray, of Hillsdale, who preaches at Woodstock, occupied the F. B. pulpit at Iron Creek, last Sunday.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

There is a general indisposition of heavy colds, distemper or "grippe" going the rounds.

M. Yates is seriously afflicted with Sciatic fever, and is losing his mind, but is a little better at this writing.

A sad death occurred Thursday evening, Feb. 26th, in the person of Wm. Goodrich, after a short illness. A post mortem revealed tumor on the brain. The funeral was conducted at the Lutheran church, 11 A. M. Sunday, the Britton G. A. R. Post assisting, with Rev. Hoag in charge. A wife and four children are sadly afflicted, and have the sympathy of the entire community.

Andrew McCreary has rented Wm. Pilbeam's farm.

Fred. McCreary will move onto the Lew Martin farm.

Chas. Shafer has moved onto his new farm on the Ridge.

In our last communication we reported that Geo. Kempf had cut 160,000 feet of lumber from the timber he bought of Frank Clarkson, but the typo thought it a "fish story" and cut it down to 16,000 feet. Now we wish to renew the application by making it 180,000 feet cut for Kempf, and 31,000 feet for customers round about, making 211,000 in all cut by Chas. Avery's portable mill, at one sitting, besides several thousand cords of stove wood.

The Democrats made a "home run" in the Senatorial contest scuffle. The Republicans were "caught out on a fly." Good enough, "dog eat dog," that is what modern legislators are for, to attend conventions and "build party."

J. W. Osborn made 32 gallons of maple syrup during the Feb. thaw He has between 200 and 300 buckets.

Carl Grady is out from Caro, and contemplates hiring out to work on a farm the coming summer.

Manager Bowen was around last week, fixing up breaks from the ice storm. He is formulating an automatic key closer, which in connection with the ground plug, will make a "dead open and shut," or words to that effect.

Our commercial telegraph line is a great dispenser of current events. The burning of the old Whitnah barn, the White mill, the killing of the brakesman on the C. J. & M. at Manhattan Junction, the numerous deaths and prevailing sickness—though sad in themselves—with the every day "chit chat," weather reports, time, and current events in a circuit of many miles, and business transactions, is a fund of knowledge more fresh and crisp than can be obtained from the average daily newspaper.

The Farmers Alliance met pursuant to adjournment, Tuesday evening the 11th. The constitution and platform reported by committee, after thorough discussion was unanimously adopted. The meeting adjourned to Tuesday evening, March 17th, for the election of officers. A public speaker will be procured to address the meeting. Everybody come out.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Measles have appeared in the Bradley and Center school districts.

Mrs Walter Osborne has an attack of neuralgia of the heart.

School closed in the Hurry district last Friday.

The surprise party at Frank Marshall's, Tuesday the 3rd., was much enjoyed by all. H. Welch, E. Witherell and Mr. Zimmerman rendered good music. Hot coffee and an excellent cold collation were served.

BRITTON BUDGET.

A number of friends and relations gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Winsley, of Britton, Wednesday evening, Feb. 25th, to celebrate, it being his 46th birthday. After partaking of a bountiful repast, Mr. W. was presented with a very fine couch, a patent rocker and many other small presents, for which Mr. Winsley extends his heartfelt thanks.

We regret to say that Mr. Samuel Gibson, Sen., is quite sick and under Dr. Hendershot's care.

Minie, the Quadroon, and a farce entitled, "The Best Cure," will be put on the boards by the Britton Dramatic Club shortly. The club is going to considerable expense to make this entertainment a success. New scenery will be procured and the drama will be staged in an elegant manner. The following is the cast:

Fred Grover, a doctor....E. Lenardson
Chas Hayden, } .....Cass Zeluff
Old Nathan, }
Oscar Daville, a Southern Planter, A. Lee
Ford, a sheriff,.....Joseph Hunter
Freddie, Millie's son,..Lawrence Sink
Seabi, a slave,.....Henry Miller
Millie Grover, } the Dr's } Miss Martha
Sister Agnes, } wife, } Ackley.

John Gibson has three very fine draft horses that he intends shipping to Toledo.

Mrs. Geo. Exelby is somewhat better at this writing, but is mending very slowly.

Mrs. M. Thorpe, of Toledo, Ohio and Mrs. Jane Durfee, of Noblesville, Ind., are visiting their friend, Mrs. W. Lenardson.

Mrs. John Exelby, of Detroit, is visiting friends in Britton.

Owen B. Lenardson is now the owner of a genuine full-blooded registered Guernsey cow, and has contracted to supply the Hotel Cadillac with butter. She's a dandy.

NORTH-EAST FRANKLIN.

William Dunn has been on the sick list for several days. La Grippe.

Miss Eva Wheeler came out from Adrian Monday to attend the medal contest.

We have never yet been able to quite settle in our own minds the question whether "measles" is in the singular or plural number. But, whichever the word may be, the disease is certainly plural in Franklin now; many are already sick and many more appear to be just "coming down." Among the sick ones are Mrs. Willis Smith, Frank Billington and S. N. Munger.

We have the greatest respect for the compiler of Franklin Facts, as newspaper correspondent, neighbor and friend. Nevertheless, in the role of prophet that writer has been known to fail, at least once, and the failure, not of the prophet, but the prophecy, was a source of satisfaction to members of the White Rose Club. It did not rain Monday and the slight sprinkle of snow was not worth minding. The Church was nearly filled, which was better than was expected, after the repeated postponements of one medal contest. Every thing went off well and all the contestants acquitted themselves admirably. Judges and singers from Tecumseh had been engaged, but sickness prevented the attendance. However, Rev. and Mrs. Patchin and Rev. Mr. Gibbs were induced to act as judges and the Congregational choir kindly consented to fill the gap left by the absence of the Glee club and filled it too, as no one who has ever heard them sing will doubt. Ruth Taylor was awarded the medal, but two or three others must have crowded close upon her marks.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAR. 12.

Tom Reed's congress went out in a blaze of profligacy, plunder and perdition.

Governor Winans was quite ill two or three days last week, but he soon recovered, and is again attending to his official duties.

Perhaps the tory success in Canada will be a good thing in the end. When the reaction comes, it will hasten the day of annexation.

Ex-speaker Reed can now join Ex-speaker Kiefer. Reed's outrageous record in the fifty-first Congress has made Keiferism quite respectable.

The tories of Canada have won the election, and trade restriction will still be the policy of the Dominion. McKinleyism will rule a while longer in Canada.

A soap trust and a type founder's trust are the last two combines to organize. If this thing continues, what under the sun will become of the country printer?

Tom Reed will be a member of the next Congress. He can have lots of fun as leader of the minority, but his opportunities for raising hades will be seriously curtailed.

The gallant 101 still hold the fort in the Illinois legislature. They are obeying the mandates of the people; they are fighting for a great principle, and they intend to stick.

If the Democratic members of the Michigan legislature expect to make a creditable record this session, it is high time that they stopped fooling and buckled down to business.

The direct tax steal was rushed thro' congress during the last days of the session, which will relieve the treasury of about seventeen millions. Michigan's share of the plunder will be $426,498.

The moulders in the Detroit Stove Works, three thousand in number, are threatening a big strike. There is something peculiar about this. We supposed the McKinley bill was going to raise wages.

If Gov. Hill had only followed an historical precedent, and said to Gov. Bulkley what the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina, how it would have smoothed political asperities and mitigated the evils of political strife.

The Boston Herald says: We are rather inclined to think that the pen with which President Harrison signed the direct tax bill will not be regarded by the coming generations as so choice a souvenir as that with which President Cleveland wrote a veto of the same measure three years ago.

The action of the Democratic members of the House in voting against a resolution of thanks to Speaker Reed was unprecedented, that is true, but it was an unprecedented occasion. No Democrat could afford to stultify himself by voting, even us a matter of courtesy, to sanction Reed's reckless rule.

The center of population has drifted westward during each decade since 1800, but it has kept on nearly the same parallel of latitude. In 1800 it was eighteen miles west of Baltimore; in 1880, eight miles west of Cincinnati; in 1890, twenty miles east of Columbus, Ind. Westward the star of empire still takes its way.

Notwithstanding the excitement consequent upon the closing hours of congress, an open meeting of "the Citizens' Alliance, which was addressed by Senators Pfeffer and Kyle and Representative Jerry Simpson," has attracted a great deal of attention. The speeches, particularly that of Mr. Simpson, were a revelation to Washington people, who had attended from idle curiosity." Before they left they were unanimously of the opinion that Jerry Simpson was a born orator.

The Toledo Bee says: The "very liberal" estimate of $5,000,000 for miscellaneous items, made by committees at the close of the last session of congress is already doubled. Washington dispatches place the sum of all appropriations at $525,000,000, the minimum estimate, and predict the total will considerably exceed that figure. The repudiated congress has already spent $100,000,000 more than its predecessor. It has been the worst robber of the people yet written down in United States history.

FIFTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

The Most Profligate of American History.

The Fifty-first Congress closed at noon yesterday and there was a sigh of relief throughout the whole land. It was the most profligate Congress of American history, and, even when condemned by the people by unexampled popular majorities, after its first session, it continued its shameless profligacy until the moment of its death.

The people can hardly realize the measure of profligacy and jobbery of the Congress that has just passed into history. When it came into power with a Senate and President in Political harmony with it, the Treasury was overflowing with surplus revenues, and reduced taxes and reduced revenues were the hunger-cry of the people.

When it closed its blotted record yesterday the surplus was scattered; the revenues were largely exceeded by expeditures; a forced loan of $54,000,000 of sacred trust funds will not save the Treasury from Bankruptcy within the next year; the expeditures commanded by the Fifty-first Congress will [illegible] from $100,000,000 surplus to fully $100,000,000 deficit before the close of the next fiscal year, and the additional pension, subsidy and other jobbing schemes fastened upon a looted Treasury by positive law, saddle the people of the nation with over one thousand millions of new expenditures.

In addition to this bewildering waste of public money, chiefly in the interest of jobbers, largely increased taxes have been imposed upon the necessaries of life. While the surplus has been scattered and a Treasury deficit of fully $100,000,000 a year made inevitable to be met by increased taxes on the people, the wanton, cruel, additional taxes levied on the necessaries of life, reduced the value of the earnings of industry fully ten per cent. by that percentage of increase on articles of universal consumption.

That the people should condemn such a Congress with an emphasis never before exhibited in popular elections was only logical, and the close of the Fifty-first Congress sends more men into retirement by defeat at the polls than was ever known or even approached in all the political revolutions of the past. The great North was revolutionized by the mad recklessness of the Congress just closed, and for the first time since the successful organization of the Republican party, the Northern States sent a clear majority of Democrats to congress and reversed a Republican majority of 400,000 in 1888 into an anti-Republican majority of 200,000 in 1890.

No party in all the varied political history of American politics ever suffered such a defeat when it held every department of power, and no Congress since the insane Democratic Lecompton Congress of 1857-8, ever so insolently defied the people after its entire policy and leadership had been over-whelmingly condemned by the country.

The Fifty-first Congress now belongs to history and considerate men of all parties rejoice to-day that its work is ended. The one silver lining to the impenetrable cloud that shames its record, is the failure of the party of power to consummate its crowning wickedness by the passage of the Force Election bill. The few Republicans who rescued our politics from chaos and our business from paralysis by defeating the Force revolutionists, will be crystalized in the greatful memories of the Republic; but the midsummer madness of the defeated party is exhibited in the effort to exclude the bravest and the best of its men from party fellowship for a conspicious patriotic service. The Fifty-first Congress is dead, and the American people of every section of the Union will give fervent thanks that its death is without the hope of resurrection.—Philadelphia Times.

TARIFF AMENDMENT.

That stanch Republican paper, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, takes no stock, and advises Republicans to take none, in the notion that the tariff cannot be changed within the next two years. It reminds them that while there is going to be a Republican majority in the Senate that majority "cannot be strictly depended on to assert itself on all partisan questions." In closing it says.

It is well known that most of the northwestern Republicans in both branches of Congress voted for the McKinley law under a sort of mental protest. In the case of some of these Republicans the protest took a more pronounced and practical shape. The law has certainly made no proselytes in any part of the west since it went into operation. It is extremely safe, indeed, to say that the economic idea which the act represents is distinctively weaker throughout this section of the country than it was six or eight months ago. Even the most extreme champions of the measure will now, we presume, concede that it was a blunder, and that it was almost wholly responsible for the disaster which the party met last November at the polls. And very few of them can imagine that sentiment has changed in their direction since the election.

If a moderate and conservative measure of tariff revision comes from the House in the next Congress it is likely to pass the Senate, unless that body prepares a measure of its own, in which case the matter will go to the conference committee.  A presidental veto may come, but if the bill proposes no radical or dangerous changes in the existing law the chances, at this distance from the event, seems to be in favor of its obtaining the requisite two-thirds vote to override the executive disapproval. The devotion to protection among western Republicans is as strong as ever, but it is to the protection with which the party was identified until recent years. They favor the protection which affords a reasonable amount of advantage to the home producer, but they oppose and will strike down the sort which builds up monopolies and trusts and levies a needless and oppressive tribute on the masses of the community.

ENJOYING M'KINLEYISM.

The Menhaden Oil Trust Meets and Moves Up Prices—A Tariff Story of the McKinley Stripe—One Industry Aided By McKinley in Preying Upon Another—The Leather Men Under the Tariff Wheel.

The people of this country have no idea how far trusts and trust methods have been developed in this tariff land. They do not know all the nooks and crannies of industry into which the trust, usually the tariff trust, has crept and built for itself a home in which to thrive and grow fat. Nor do they know all that is going on in these same industries in the way of appropriating the spoils which the McKinley tariff law puts in their reach.

One of these industries is that of making what is called menhaden oil. The men engaged in this industry have an association which they call the Menhaden Oil and Guano Association. The annual convention of this body was recently held in New York, and one result of this meeting was thus stated by the New York Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter:

The menhaden oil manufacturers are determined to get a better price for their product and since their meeting in this city last week, they have concluded that they might as well extend their plans for regulating the market so as to include the stock now on hand. Accordingty they have fixed prices that are about two cents per gallon above [illegible]

There is a tariff story behind this menhaden oil trust which deserves to be told, as it will illustrate the character and working of the McKinley tariff. It is a fair sample of the "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" in every page of the tariff law; and it shows how McKinley's new brood of protected infants are plotting behind their cradles and devising means to squeeze the protective pop bottle and satisfy their greed.

The menhaden is a fish similar to a herring which is very abundant in summer on our coast from Maine to New Jersey. Menhaden are taken in nets in great numbers, it being reported at this New York meeting that the numbers taken during the past season was 558,000,000. These fish are used for making oil, and the refuse from the oil press is used in making fertilizers. The menhaden are also used in their natural state as fertilizers.

The menhaden oil trust, as was reported by the secretary at the New York meeting, embraces 28 factories, employing 4,368 men, and having a capital of $2,500,000. The industry produces annually about 3,000,000 gallons of oil, of which nearly one-third is exported.

The principal use of menhaden oil is for illuminating purposes in mines, and it is used to some extent in finishing sole leather. The better classes of leather, however, are treated with a product called degras, which is collected from the water in which greasy wool has been washed. This degras, or brown grease, as the leather dressers call it, has in the past fifteen years come to be recognized as a necessity in dressing upper leather. It gives a softer finish than Menhaden oil, which is no longer used for finishing upper leather. The gum in this oil frequently comes out of the leather in a few months and collects on the surface; and then the leather is worth less than the raw hide of which it was made. The superiority of the degras in currying leather is so great that it has taken the place of menhaden oil, and the result has been better leather and better shoes for millions of people.

But this result has not pleased the Menhaden Oil Association, or trust: and hence they invoke the help of our protectionist lawmakers, asking them to put a prohibitory duty on degras and thus compel the leather curriers to use menhaden oil and produce an inferior quality of leather for the people. Three years ago they asked for such a duty from the Senate committee and it was given them; but as that bill did not become a law they were still without the "protection" for which they were clamoring.

Degras was admitted under the old law as waste at 10 per cent. ad valorem, and the Mills bill placed it on the free list. When the present Congress assembled McKinley had barely got his tariff mill running when the menhaden trust again put in an appearance in the person of its president, who said he felt "that we are entitled to protection against the importation of foreign greases which are produced by the employment of cheap labor in foreign countries." He objected to the importation of degras as follows: "The result upon the fish-oil market, which is largely attributable to the free importation of this special grease, has been to reduce the price of fish-oil so materially that many have abandoned the business, and all are suffering from the effects of this foreign competitor." He asked for a duty of 1½ cent per pound on degras, the same as in the Senate bill two years ago. As the old 10 per cent. duty was equal to only about one-fifth of a cent per pound, the duty asked for would have been a clear increase of 650 per cent. The unblushing character of this request will be seen at once when it is stated that nearly all the degras used in our leather industry is imported, only about 5 per cent. being produced in this country.

The injustice of this proposed duty was so great that the leather industry of the country was at once aroused. A petition was presented from the leather men of Chicago and Wisconsin in favor of free degras, and another to the same effect came from the great shoe and leather industries of Massachusetts, signed by about 200 firms representing more than $100,000,000 of annual product.

Then there was the usual pretty tariff squabble; but in a tariff fight the dog that asks for protection always gets the bone, while the dog that asks to be let alone gets kicked and cuffed by the givers of tariff bones. The great leather industry asked to be let alone, to have no higher duty or no duty at all on degras. It is the very nature of McKinleyism to kick industries which make such free trade requests, and the leather industry got kicked. The duty on degras was changed from 10 per cent. ad valorem to a half cent per pound. This duty is equal to from 25 to 40 per cent. ad valorem, and is an increase, therefore, of from 150 to 300 per cent. on the old rate.

But this was not the only advantage given to the menhaden oil trust. The duty on their oil under the old tariff law was 25 per cent. ad valorem, a duty which the Mills bill proposed to abolish altogether, as the industry does not need it. Nearly one-third of the menhaden oil is exported and there is no mention of any imports. But the McKinley law changed the 25 per cent. duty to a specific duty of 8 cents per gallon. The average price of menhaden oil last year was about 24 cents a gallon; and the McKinley duty, therefore, is equal to 33⅓ per cent.

So it is the old tariff story once again. The menhaden trust pushes matters in Washington and gets a heavy increase of the duty on degras; the duty on fish-oil is increased by nearly one-third; then the trust meets and moves up prices two cents a gallon. The menhaden oil trust is simply taking possession of the tariff that McKinley prepared for it. They have as much right to combine and raise prices as McKinley has to raise duties and make such a combination possible. McKinleyism and trusts go hand in hand, and it only remains for the people to say how long this unholy alliance is to continue its work of raising prices.

PROTECTION WANTED AT HOME.

Cheap Southern Iron Close Up Furnaces in Pennsylvania and Ohio—"Protection" Asked of the Railroads.

The lowest cost of making pig iron in Europe, given in United States Labor Commissioner Carroll D. Wright's "Preliminary Report of the Cost of Production," is $7.67 per ton; and the European average cost is $9.91 per ton. In the same report seven Southern establisments are given in which the cost of production is below the average in Europe.

Since this report was publised last summer a British mining expert has made a report on a certain iron property in the South where iron can be produced, he claims, at a cost of $7 per ton.

It is a remarkable fact that the Southern infant iron industry is now producing the cheapest iron in the country, and is actually closing up old and well-established furnaces in the North. The furnaces in the South have had no sort of "protection" against those in the North; but now the amusing thing happens, and some of the Northern furnaces are anxious for a form of "protection" against those of the South.

Twenty-three blast furnaces were recently shut down in the Mahoning and Shenango valleys of Pennsylvania and Ohio, throwing nearly 10,000 workmen out of employment.

In explaining this event the American Manufacturer, a great protectionist trade journal of Pittsburgh, says: "The first reason given by the furnace owners why they can not continue operations under present conditions is the large amount of Southern iron now being shipped into that district."

As no tariff can be levied by one State against another the Pennsylvania and Ohio iron men know not where to turn for "protection" from Alabama. They find that "iron is hauled from Birmingham, Ala., to Youngstown, O., about 800 miles, for $4.10 a ton. The rate paid on pig from Youngstown to Pittsburgh, 94 miles, is 80 cents per ton. In one case this is a half cent a ton a mile, in the other it is 1.23 cents."

What, then, do the Shenango and Mahoning men want? The Manufacturer says they "hold that they should be protected from Southern competition by making the rate in iron from the South commensurate with that on iron going out of the valleys. The valley furnace men say that, being situated midway between the ore and the coke supplies, they should be able to produce iron in competition with any part of the North, and would do so were they protected from Southern inroads."

These men have relied on "protection" so long that they turn now to the railroads and ask them for protection against the Southern competitors, the "infant industries" which as yet are barely started on their course of development.

"Infant Industries" in South Carolina.

A stockholder of one of the cotton mills in South Carolina recently stated in a debate in the Legislature of that State that many of the cotton mills there are making as much as twenty-five per cent. in dividends. These South Carolina cotton mills grew up without any protection at all against the well-established mills of the North; yet they have gone forward developing skill and capacity and growing rich. The protectionists tell us that this can not be done. A favorite doctrine of theirs is that "infant industries" can not spring up and flourish in a new country without protective duties. Yet they are springing up and flourishing in South Carolina and in all parts of the South. That part of the country has got control of the market for coarser yarns and fabrics and has begun already to make the finer fabrics.

Precisely the same thing is happening in India. This country belongs to England and has no protective tariff against it; yet cotton spinning and weaving has been developing in India with astonishing rapidity within the past few years. In the face of this fact it is pretended that our cotton mills need protection against England.

What becomes of the "infant industry" argument in view of this development in South Carolina and in India?

"Hedging" in Massachusetts.

The Massachusetts Republicans got such a thorough drubbing in the tariff issue last fall that they are already beginning to "hedge."

A meeting of Republicans was recently held at Boston to issue a call for delegates to form a Young Men's Republican Club. Here is their tariff plank:

We believe in a protective tariff that shall impose duties where they are needed, and only where needed, to equalize the labor cost of production and to develop American resources and American commerce, but not to relieve favored corporations or individuals from foreign competition.

Which being interpreted means: "But we don't believe in the McKinley style of protection—not much!"

What a Difference between the WOMAN who is wedded to old-fashioned ideas and she who is bright enough to appreciate a new one. Everybody is striving to get something to make life easier—often it's right beside them—those who are bright enough to embrace it get the benefits, those who don't go backwards—their work grows harder. Pearline makes life easier and cleaner. Washing and cleaning done with Pearline has about enough work in it to make it good exercise—but not enough to tire the body or ruffle the temper.

Not ours, but the word of the millions who use it as to whether it hurts the hands, clothes or paint—probably your neighbors can tell you all about PEARLINE.

Send it back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, the honest thing to do is—send it back. 167 JAMES PYLE, New York.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

THE FARMER AND THE SINGLE TAX.

It is a favorite notion of the pro-poverty press and platform that the land value tax will never be accepted by farmers or small home owners. If that tax were what its ignorant opponents describe it these classes would be hostile; but when the farmer and rural home owner learn what the tax is, as those of New York State will in the political campaign this fall, they will be even more eager to adopt it than the artisan classes of the city have been.

W. T. Hopkins, of Enterprise, Kan., forwards a clipping from a paper of his State which gives a fair idea of the way the land value tax is misrepresented to farmers. After a long statement of what he supposes the land value tax to be and how it would affect the interests of farmers, the editor says: "This is a plain and simple statement of the Georgian land tax theory, put in the vernacular of the common people." It would be better English and nearer the truth to say that it is a statement of the Georgian land tax theory, put into the vernacular of an ignorant editor.

According to this Kansas quill, "under the George regime, the lawyer, the doctor, the merchant, the manufacturer—men of every trade and profession who own no land and who only represent billions of dollars' worth of personal property—will escape all taxation, and the whole burden will be thrown upon the farmer and home owner, except where business men carry on enterprises in their own stores and mills." There is more ignorance to the thousand cms in this quotation than there are puns in the funniest of Tom Hood's jingles.

Until we raise up a class of lawyers, doctors, merchants and manufacturers who can live without land, we shall have no man of either class who, under the land value tax, can escape his share of public burdens. They all pay a land value tax now and to the full annual value of the land they use; but it goes into the pockets of landlords instead of going into the public treasury.

This Kansas editor seems to think that a man who did not own the land he used would be untaxed. It is true he would not pay any more for the land than he pays now, but he now pays all he ought to pay. The trouble is that he pays the wr g man. He would pay no less under a land value tax except as the land he used fell in value, but so long as that land had a value he could not escape taxation. And he ought not to pay for any thing but the land value he appropriates. That, and that alone, of his wealth is produced by the community, and belongs to the community; his personal property and land improvements being of his own production, the community has no right to take them. When the community compels him to pay for the land value he appropriates it takes only what belongs to it; but when it compels him to give up to it of the products of his labor one penny over and above the land value he has appropriated it robs him.

It is not true, however, that lawyers, merchants, manufacturers and doctors represent billions of dollars' worth of personal property. What the astute Kansas editor means by personal property may be itemized as railroad stock, corporation and government bonds, and so on. Of the value of this class of property, very little is a property value at all. So much of corporation stock and bonds as represents actual labor products, like rolling stock, rails and stations, is property value, and ought to be free of taxes; first, because the community did not produce these things, and second, to encourage the production of more. But so much of such stock and bonds as represents special privileges and "water" is a mere device of robbery, bearing a relation to the industry of our time similar to what pirate ships bore to commerce a few generations ago.

When we propose to exempt labor products from taxation, we mean labor products. As for public franchises that are special privileges, we would abolish them altogether.

And how about the whole burden of taxation being thrown upon the farmer and home owner?

The Kansas editor will certainly exclude tenant farmers. It is strange that he does not classify tenant farmers with "men of every trade and profession who own no land;" for surely if doctors are to escape taxation tenant farmers will too. The truth is that tenant farmers, like doctors, will pay the same ground tax that they do now, except as it falls in consequence of the fall of land values, and that what they pay will find its way into the public treasury instead of settling, as it does now, in the coffers of landlords.

And why does not the Kansas editor classify mortgaged farmers with doctors, lawyers and merchants? The mortgaged farmer is to the extent of his mortgage, a tenant farmer.

That the whole burden of taxation will be thrown upon farm owners and home owners is false upon the face of it. How about mine owners? How about factory owners? How about store owners? How about water front owners? How about the owners of vacant lots?

The burden of taxation that house owners will have to bear will depend upon the value of the land upon which their homes are built. If they build on the most desirable land in the community—as poor home owners never do, by the way—they will have a high tax to pay; if they build on the least desirable land in the community—as poor home owners are now compelled to do—they will have little or no tax to pay; and according to the desireableness of the land upon which they build, from the least to the most desireable, so will their taxes be graduated. If they adorn their grounds, embellish their houses, enlarge their living accommodations, or otherwise improve their homes, their taxes will be no more than if they let their homes run down to the level of pig sties.

Which is better for the home owner—to be taxed on every improvement he makes as he is now, or to be taxed only for the special privilege by way of location that he enjoys and to be left free to improve to the extent of his desire?

The burden of taxation that farmers will have to bear will depend, like that of the home owner, on the value of the bare land they appropriate. Farmers are now taxed on the value of their land, their buildings, their fences, their drainage, their stock and their produce. Let our brilliant Kansas editor submit to the farmers of his acquaintance the alternative of a tax on all these values or on the value of the land alone, and see which they will chose.

When the average working farmer appraises the value of his buildings, fences, drainage, stock and produce in one class and the value of his bare land in another, he will find that the totals are about as four to one. The total of the first class it is proposed to exempt; but under the present system the total of both classes is taxed.

And this is not all. When taxes are imposed solely on land values, so much land that is now held out of use for speculation will seek a market that the value of all land will fall; and as it falls the farmers' tax will recede. It is probable, if the speculative value of land were eliminated, as it would be under the land value tax, that the value of the average working farmers' improvements, stock and produce, compared to the value of his bare land, would be as ten to one. In many cases it would be as the whole is to nothing.

Home owners and farmers now bear the burden of taxes, and the land value tax would emancipate them. When we consider the special privileges that the wealthy classes enjoy, their taxes are exceedingly light compared to those of the house owner and the farmer, whose special privileges are meager. The only special privilege that the average home owner and working farmer enjoys is the exclusive right to a piece of land, the value of which relatively to the value of the wealth he produces is a trifle; but there are mine owners, city lot owners, railroad owners, telegraph owners and currency makers whose special privileges relatively to the wealth they produce are in value close on to a hundred times. Owners of coal mines, for example, get thirty-five cents a ton for all coal mined; how much wealth do they produce? None. Under the land value tax, which bears only upon special privileges, they, and such as they, and not the home owner or the farmer, would bear the burden of taxation; and it is in the interest of beneficiaries of these special privileges that the farmer is appealed to to defeat the land value tax.

Thus far of the farmer who owns his farm and the head of a family who owns his home. But what of the tenant farmer and the tenant house holder, two constantly growing classes? They must now pay annually to a landlord all that their land is worth and an indirect tax on what they consume, as well as direct taxes. Under the land value tax they would pay no more for the land than they do now; indeed, they would pay less, for land values would fall with the increase of the market supply of land. They would pay no more for the improvements than they do now, but less; for with the increase of production and reduction of land values both parties to an exchange would get more with less work. And they would pay no taxes on what they consumed, nor any other tax except what they paid to the landlord in the form of ground rent.

But the sum total of benefits to the farmer and the home owner is not yet reached. The average farmer and the average home owner are workingmen. I have considered, so far, only the benefits they will enjoy as consumers; their benefits as producers are yet to be seen. We have already observed that their interests as capital owners and laborers are greater than their interests as land owners; therefore a tax that exempts their interests as capital owners and laborers, even though it wholly absorbs their interests as land owners, must be beneficial to them. And so it is. The wages of their labor will rise with wages generally.

Stating the proposition in the terms of political economy, the land value tax will raise the margin of production, and as wages rise with the rise of the margin of production wages will rise with the imposition of the land value tax. In terms more familiar to the Kansas editor, the land value tax will abolish the value of all land not especially desirable. Any land that is not in demand for use will bear no rent; and land that is not more desirable, even though in use, will also be free of rent. Consequently, occupiers of such land will have no tax to pay. Now, there is a great deal of just such land, but because it is held out of use for speculation users of land must take up with less desirable locations, and as wages are regulated by the produce of the least desirable land in use wages are lower now than they will be when the more desirable locations are to be had free of rent or purchase price.

By wages is meant, of course, the return for one's labor, whether paid by an employer as in factories, or directly out of his produce as in the case of farmers. Hence, the condition of a working farmer in his capacity of producer, as well as in that of consumer, must improve under the land value tax, as will that of the small home owner, what ever be his vocation.—Louis F. Post, in the Standard.

So far from the recognition of private property in land being necessary to the proper use of land, the contrary is the case. Treating land as private property stands in the way of its proper use. Were land treated as public property it would be used and improved as soon as there was need for its use or improvement, but being treated as private property, the individual owner is permitted to prevent others from using or improving what he can not or will not use or improve himself.—Progress and Poverty.

The equal right of all men to the use of land is as clear as their equal right to breathe the air—it is a right proclaimed by the fact of their existence. For we can not suppose that some men have a right to be in this world and others no right.—Progress and Poverty.

GEHAZI IS PUNISHED.

LESSON XI, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 15.

Text of the Lesson, II Kings v, 15-27. Commit Verses, 15-17—Golden Text, Num. xxxii, 23—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

15. "Behold, now I know that there is no God in all the earth but in Israel."

Thus spake Naaman as, having returned with all his company from Jordan, he stood before the man of God and prayed him to accept a blessing in the form of money and raiment.

16. "But he said, As the Lord liveth, before whom I stand, I will receive none. And he urged him to take it; but he refused."

Thus spake and acted the man of God. He was not rich in this world's goods, and yet he turns away from riches when voluntarily offered to him, and apparently from a grateful heart. How different from most people! How different from the church of today, which in the most ungodly ways seeks to raise money for what is called the Lord's work!

17. "Thy servant will henceforth offer neither burnt offering nor sacrifice unto other gods, but unto the Lord."

Naaman seems truly to have turned from idols to serve the living and true God (I Thess. i, 9), and he desires to take home with him some of the earth of the Lord's land (Hos. ix, 3), that when he offers sacrifice to the Lord he may do it literally upon holy ground, though in a far country. He did not understand the worship of Jehovah; he did not know that God would hear him from any soil (I Kings viii, 48, 49), but he seems sincere, and if any one sincerely desires to know God He will enlighten him. "Then shall we know if we follow on to know the Lord" (Hos. vi, 3).

18. "When I bow down myself in the house of Rimmon, the Lord pardon thy servant in this thing."

19. "And he said unto him, Go in peace."

This is the decision of the man of God in the matter, and this is his blessing. See in II Chron. xxx, 18-20 how the Lord pardoned His own people, and allowed them to eat the passover otherwise than as it was written. And observe that the attitude of the heart toward God is more in his sight than the outward form.

20. "But Gehazi, the servant of Elisha, the man of God, said * * * as the Lord liveth I will run after him and take somewhat of him."

Here is an idolater indeed—an idolater in Israel, an idolater in the house of a holy man of God, for covetousness is idolatry (Col. iii, 5). He forgot that the law taught to hate covetousness, and that Achan was stoned and burned because of his covetousness (Ex. xviii, 21; Josh. vii, 21).

21. "So Gehazi followed after Naaman."

When Elisha said "Go in peace," Naaman departed; but it seems that he went but a little way ere this covetous Gehazi overtook him. Living with one like Elisha how was it that he had not more of Elisha's spirit?

"And when Naaman saw him running after him he lighted down from the chariot to meet him, and said, Is all well?"

Or, as in the margin, "Is there peace?" There was little peace in that covetous soul. "There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked" (Isa. xlviii, 22; lvii, 21). "The way of peace they know not" (Isa. lviii, 8).

22. "And he said, All is well. My master hath sent me" * * *

23. "And Naaman said, Be content, take two talents."

His little scheme was working well. Lying seemed to be a paying business. He had only ventured to ask for one talent of silver, and now two talents are pressed upon him, which, with some urging (?), he consents to receive. Some three thousand dollars for one lie; many a man has lied for even ten or five dollars or less, and boys and girls have been known to lie for a very small amount.

24. "And when he came to the tower (Margin, secret place) he took them from their hand, and bestowed them in the house: and he let the men go, and they departed."

He had no desire to make a great display of his riches, at least not for the present. He had that which he coveted, it was safely in his possession and securely deposited, and no one about the premises was any the wiser, as he thought; and like the rich fool of Luke xii, 19, he perhaps said to himself, What a good time I can now have!

25. "He went in and stood before his master."

As if nothing had transpired worth mentioning, as if he were a very devoted and faithful servant, as if he would say, "My dear master, thou man of God, what is thy pleasure?" We read in Ezek. xxxiii, 31, of some who "sit before the servant of God as the people of God, and they hear His words but they will not do them; for with their mouth they show much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness."

"And Elisha said unto him, Whence comest thou, Gehazi? And he said, Thy servant went no whither."

Lie upon lie. This is at least the third in this transaction. How hard the heart grows! It is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked (Jer. xvii, 9). What a gulf has opened between him and his master! Let some boy tell how he felt, when, having spent the afternoon in some forbidden place or way, he was asked at the tea table where he had been. Let some Christians say how they feel about prayer when they have been doing what they know God does not approve.

26. "Went not mine heart with thee, when the man turned again from his chariot again to meet thee?"

Ah, Gehazi! he's got you now. Covetousness is a bad thing, and lying won't help it any. "Be sure your sins will find you out." "A lying tongue is but for a moment" (Num. xxxii, 23; Prov. xii, 19). Eve obtained and perhaps enjoyed with Adam the forbidden fruit. Achan obtained and possessed the garments and the gold. Gehazi obtained and possessed the coveted silver and raiment; but in no case did these things bring peace. There cannot be true enjoyment of anything unlawfully obtained. And even though not in this life is the sin laid bare, there is a day coming when the Lord will bring to light the hidden things of darkness and make manifest the counsels of the hearts (I Cor. iv, 5). We should always remember that the eyes of the Lord are in every place beholding the evil and the good, and that "all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of Him with whom we have to do" (Prov. xv, 3; Heb. iv, 13).

27. "The leprosy, therefore, of Naaman shall cleave unto thee and unto thy seed forever. And he went out from his presence a leper as white as snow."

A moment of sin, a lifelong punishment. He begins at once to eat the fruit of lies (Hos. x, 13). It did not pay after all.

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT
Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.
"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."
REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure dyspepsia. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.
"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It starts in the third place in 1890 where it will remain two years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.
There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.
The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889 where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.
The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE FARMER AND FINANCE.

A Paper Read at the Farmer's Institute in Tecumseh by B. F. Deputy of Macon.

The topic assigned to me for discussion, is one of much impertance, not only to the farming community, but to all classes of society. The Good Book tells us that the love of money is the root of all evil; but this saying, I apprehend, should be construed as the inordinate love of money, rather than money itself. Money itself is certainly a public blessing, as every candid man must admit. Among barberous nations money is but little known and trade consists chiefly in barter. As nations advance in civilization and enlightenment, money becomes more plentiful, trade increases, agriculture thrives, and manufactures multiply.

I confess that I approach this subject with some misgivings. I do not claim to be a student of finance. I am not posted in the intricacies of banking. I have not made the subject of money a special study. But I have endeavored to gather the facts coming within my reach, to view them in a candid spirit, and I shall discuss them from the standpoint of a practical farmer. I do not claim that my opinions are better than those of other men, but I do claim to honestly entertain them, and that I have good reasons for the faith that is in me.

At the outset I wish to observe that I do not favor special financial legislation for the benefit of the farmers alone, to the detriment of all other classes. I am not a believer in class legislation of any kind. The farmers of this great republic do not ask any favoritism at the hands of our lawmakers, but they do ask fair play, and fair play they are bound to have.

The old Jeffersonian doctrine is good enough for me, that the best government is that which governs least. We have had altogether too much legislation since the war. During the past twenty-five years the laws have been shaped to promote the interests of Wall st. and to foster monopolies and corporations, at the expense of the masses. I would wipe out or modify all of these restrictive laws. All the farmers ask is a fair field and no favor. Give us these and we are willing to take our chances in the battle of life.

In discussing this money question, there are two foundation principles, which should be kept in view:

First—Stability of character. The circulating medium should be of a stable character, not fluctuating in price.

Second—Stability in supply. The supply of currency should be uniform, not fluctuating in volume.

With these two principles in view, let us examine the character and volume of our present circulating medium. We have two kinds of hard money, gold and silver; four kinds of paper money, green backs, national bank notes, gold and silver certificates. The nickel coinage is so small that it may be ignored in this discussion.

Since the Sherman act of 1873 went into effect, the money value of the silver coinage has been to a great extent neutralized. The amount of silver coinage has been restricted and silver has been degraded from a money metal to a bullion metal. Gold and silver have always been regarded as money metals by all commercial nations, even from the time when our Savior scourged the money changers from the temple, down to the demonetization act of 1873. Up to that date, gold and silver had occupied an equal position as money, and there is no good reason why silver should not be money to-day, equally with gold. By the usages of trade for eighteen centuries, silver has been money, the same as gold. Silver is, or ought to be legal money, the same as gold. The silver dollar has rightly been called "The dollar of the Daddies." Under the articles of confederation before the federal constitution was adopted, Congress provided that the silver dollar should be the unit of value of the U. S. and that it should be a coin composed of 371 64 grains of silver. The gold coins provided for in the same act were the eagle and half eagle. The name "dollar" applied exclusively to silver per se. There was no such thing as a gold dollar when the Constitution was adopted, nor for fifty years afterwards. The silver dollar was the standard and unit of value from 1786, before the constitution was adopted, until 1873. By the act of Feb. 12th, 1873, the silver dollar was stricken down and the gold dollar installed in its place and made the unit of value. The term "dollar" by itself meant a silver dollar, for the law expressly stipulated that the dollar should be composed of silver. There was no other unit of value but the silver dollar until 1873. By that act the silver dollar was abolished and the gold dollar made the unit of value, but it ceased to be coined at all, and for several years no silver money was coined. Then an act was passed under Arthur's administration to coin two millions a month, and this amount was increased, by the act of last summer to four millions a month.

Now, mark the effect of this demonetising act. All the enormous debts of the war period, national, state, and municipal, besides millions of dollars of private indebtedness, were contracted when the old silver dollar was the unit of value. Equitably, and righteously, these debts should be measured and paid in the same unit of value. The demonetising of silver has reduced its price. Restoring it to its old place as money would increase its value again. The opponents of free coinage tell us that it would be dangerous to remonetise silver, for it is below par. It is worth only eighty cents to the dollar. But what, I ask, forced it below par? The John Sherman act. Make the silver dollar the unit of value, as formerly, make it full legal tender money the same as gold, make coinage free, and silver would soon rise to par. Again, the coinage of silver being restricted and limited in amount, the currency to which the people are entitled is contracted in volume. Thus we see the double outrage committed on the people by this Wall street legislation. By demonetizing silver, and hammering down its price, all debts contracted prior to 1873 are augmented in the neighborhood of twenty per cent. By restricting the coinage of silver, it produces further contraction, thus adding still more to the burdens of the people, and depriving them of the money which Providence intended they should have, with which to pay their debts. The people have long felt that a great wrong was committed in striking down the silver dollar, and that an act to remonetize the white metal is simply a measure to rectify that wrong.

These few observations will illustrate the position I look at the outset, that our currency should possess the attribute of stability. Our present silver policy makes stability a farce Never since the government was established has silver known such violent fluctuations in price, as since 1873. Every time the silver problem is subjected to a turn of the legislative crank, up or down goes the price of silver. Since the act of last summer, and within the last six months, silver fluctuated in price at least twenty per cent. Restore silver to its old and honored place as full legal tender, make the silver dollar again the unit of value, and silver will soon be at par with gold. Then practical bimetallism will be established and a stability will be imparted to our circulating medium, which it has never known since John Sherman crucified the white metal by the act of '73. The Wall street policy is a good thing for the silver pool gamblers and speculators; it is a good thing for the bond holders; it is a good thing for professional money lenders; but for the masses of the people and especially for the agricultural classes, it is evil and only evil in its tendency. The pernicious effects of this policy were not felt and appreciated at first, but the people are now informing themselves, and agitation can never cease until the proper remedy shall be applied.

One objection is made to free coinage, which is very plausible and deserves notice. It is claimed that the unlimited coinage of silver by the United States alone, without the cooperation of other nations, would make the mints of the United States a dumping ground for the silver of the whole world. This would glut the American silver market, and still further reduce its price. The result would be the establishment of a debased silver standard, which would drive gold wholly out of circulation, and produce absolute contraction. Whether this danger would menace the country in the event of unlimited coinage, I am not prepared to say. But I frankly confess that this theory deserves careful investigation, and that the friends of silver should not act hastily. For myself I borrow no trouble on that score. When the act was passed coining two millions of silver per month, its opponents predicted that dire disasters would follow. But the dire disasters never materialized. Last summer when the four million act was passed, they predicted a financial panic. A panic impended, that is true, but the false prophets were again put to shame, for the threatened panic was caused by an absolute shortage of currency, not by the increased silver coinage. However I am in favor of cautious, conservative action. If unlimited silver coinage would be hazardous, then confine it to the product of American mines. Give us free American coinage. That would be entirely safe and it is favored by many banking authorities in the east. I can see no valid objection whatever to the absolute free coinage of all American silver. In the mean time, steps should be taken, by treaty or otherwise, to establish bimetallism among the leading commercial nations, to the end that unlimited free coinage may be inaugurated at an early day.

I now come to the second point suggested at the outset: the volume of the currency. This should be uniform, not absolutely uniform, but relatively so. My position is this and it seems to me incontrovertible: The volume of our circulating medium should bear a fixed proportion to the volume of business transacted, and the annual increase of currency should keep pace with the increase of business.

The excessive paper money inflation, caused by the necessities of the war, upset financial stability, and encouraged all kinds of legislative tinkering with the currency. Many of us remember the hardship inflicted upon the peopleby the contraction of the currency, during the process of resumption. Although the policy of resumption was violently opposed by many, yet the people acquiesced, because the resumption of specie payments seemed essential to the stability of business. The existence of two kinds of currency, one of which was a debased paper currency, disorganized prices and was a constant menace to business prosperity. The policy of contraction at that time was a wise one. But the moment specie resumption was reached, from that time henceforth, the policy of contraction was no better than highway robbery under the forms of law. This contraction has been gradually going on ever since—not absolutely, but relatively. Business has increased more rapidly than the currency. Compared with the increase of population, the volume of currency has increased in sufficient ratio, and this is a favorite argument with the enemies of silver. But compared with the increase of business—and this is the only legitimate comparison to make—the increase of our circulating medium has been utterly inadequate. This shortage in the necessary increase of the currency each year has produced a gradual annual contraction, and this annual artificial contraction has been going on steadily ever since the demonetizing act of '73. The shrinkage of values, the ruin and bankruptcy, which have followed in the wake of this cut-throat policy, are beyond computation. It is high time to call a halt, to reverse engines, and to inaugurate a policy by which the annual increase of currency may keep pacewith the annual increase of business. If the free coinage of silver, added to gold circulation, is insufficient to accomplish this result, then there should be an annual issue of paper money of some kind to meet the deficiency. A recent number of the Christian Union contained an able financial article, a portion of which meets my views so exactly, that I reproduce it here.

"The business of the commercial world has immensely increased within the last quarter century; the money of the commercial world has not increased in any such ratio. There is too little coin for our currency and too little currency for our business. As a result there is an enormous credit system, the great transactions of the world being done by bits of paper. When anything occurs to disturb confidence, these bits of paper lose their value, and their comes a stringency in the money market. A partial remedy for this condition of affairs is the practical application of bimetalism. If all commercial nations would agree to the free coinage of silver, absolutely interchangable, in a certain fixed ratio, with gold, that agreement would keep gold and silver as money in that fixed ratio, and there would be a more substantial basis for the credit currency, in which the business of the world must always be largely carried on."

I would not inaugurate a policy of flat paper money inflation. I do not believe in a debased paper dollar, nor in a cheap silver dollar, nor in a dear gold dollar would have free silver coinage, and thus bring the silver dollar to par with gold. I would issue paper money in sufficient quantity to meet the demands of business, but not to an excess that would reduce it below par. In other words, I believe in a gold dollar, a silver dollar, and a greenback dollar, each interchangable with the other, receivable for all debts and dues, both public and private, and all worth one hundred cents.

The agricultural classes will never again witness the prosperous times that existed before the war, until our national finances are shaped in accordance with the principles I have herein endeavored to set forth.

EXHAUSTIVE REVIEW OF THE MEASURES CONSIDERED.

Comprehensive Statement of the Business Which Came Before the Second Session of the Fifty-First Congress of United States.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Among other measures enacted by the Fifty-first congress were those providing for the settlement of the Indian depredations claims by the court of claims; creating a court for the judicial investigation and settlement of private land claims; providing that the reciprocity clause of the tariff act of 1890 shall not be construed as affecting the treaty between the United States and the Hawaiian Islands; repealing the timber culture law; providing for the inspection of live cattle, hogs and the carcasses and products thereof which are subjects of the inter-state commerce; providing for the payment of judgments of the court of claims for army supplies under the Bowman act; authorizing the payment of drawback or rebate on tobacco and snuff in certain cases; allowing the president to fill for thirty days vacancies caused by the death or resignation of a head of a department, and for a tunnel under New York Bay.

Among the bills of a general character that failed to become laws were the following: To create a court of patent appeals, for the relief of female nurses in the late war, for the settlement of the church and school property war claims, the service pension bill, for a government ship canal around Niagara Falls, providing for a railway to connect North and South America, imposing a discriminating duty on tea imported from countries discriminating against the United States, to cede the arid lands to the states and territories in which they are situated and to provide for irrigation and the protection of forest and pasturage lands, to establish postal savings banks to encourage small savings, for the recoinage of the subsidiary silver coins of the United States, to enforce the eight hour law on government premises, the Canadian reciprocity measure, for a commission to adjust questions affecting the interests of Mexico and the United States, for constitutional amendments in regard to woman suffrage and prohibition; to prohibit aliens from acquiring title to lands in the United States; for the incorporation of the International American bank and the Pan-American transportation company; providing that no person employed by the government shall receive less than $2 per day; for the retirement of national bank circulation; to absolutely prohibit the coming of Chinese into the United States, whether subjects of the Chinese empire or otherwise; for a uniform standard of cereals; the Butterworth anti-option bill; the resolution citing a protest against the treatment of Jews in Russia; to prohibit the importation, exportation and inter-state transportation of alcoholic beverages: the government postal telegraph bill; transferring the revenue marine service to the navy department; to prevent the sale of firearms and ammunition to Indians; for the reorganization of the army, and creating a commission to investigate the effect of the use of alcoholic beverages.

In the Fifty-first congress 14,033 bills were introduced in the House, and 5,129 in the Senate. In the Fiftieth congress 12,654 bills were introduced in the House and 4,000 in the Senate. In the Fifty-first congress 297 joint resolutions, (or twenty-eight more than the number introduced in the Fiftieth), were introduced in the House. In the Senate 169 joint resolutions (twenty-four more than in the Fiftieth) were introduced.

In the fiftieth congress President Cleveland vetoed 161 bills and joint resolutions, while in the fifty-first President Harrison vetoed only 11. Among these were the following: Act for the erection of a public building at Bar Harbor, Maine, to authorize Oklahoma City to issue bonds to provide a right of way for the Choctaw Coal and Railroad company through Oklahoma City, act to establish a record and pension bureau in the war department and to create the present head a colonel in the army, act for the relief of the administratrix of the estate of George W. Lawrence.

The bills that became laws during the congress just ended numbered 2,186. In the fiftieth congress 1,824 were enacted. The number of bills etc., introduced in the fifty-first exceeded by 20 per cent. the number introduced in the fiftieth congress.

The following measures became laws throughout the congress without the president's signature: Act for the relief of the sureties of George W. Hook; act giving the Court of Claims jurisdiction of claims on account of property of the Chesapeake female college; act for the relief of J. Hollis McBlair; act authorizing the president to restore Tendore Teneyck to the army and place him on the retired list; act for the relief of A. S. McCreary, administrator of J. M. Hiatt, deceased; act to provide American registers for the steamers Montauck and Minepid.

Ten private bills which had passed congress failed to become laws because of their failure to receive the president's signature. (Election cases.) Contests for seats held by Democrats in the House were made by eighteen Republicans. The elections committee decided seventeen of these—eleven in favor of Republicans and six in favor of Democrats. The House seated eight Republicans in place of sitting Democrats, and declared the seat of one Democrat vacant. The House adopted the report of the committee in every case presented.

Three senators and twelve representatives died in office during the Fifty-first congress. This is the largest mortality in point of numbers in any congress. In the Forty-fourth congress, however, the percentage of deaths was larger, the membership being smaller.

The regular and miscellaneous appropriations made by the Fiftieth congress amounted to $817,965,859, while the appropriations of the congress just ended aggregated between $900,000,000 and $1,000,000,000.

Killed by a Falling Tree.

VAN WERT, O., March 9.—While chopping timber near this city, a twelve-year-old son of John Thompson was crushed to death by a large tree falling upon him. The boy saw his danger, and attempted to get away, but did not succeed. His head was crushed and his back broken. Death resulted instantly.

OBITUARY.

DIED.—In Tecumseh, Mich., March 9, 1891, Jairus P. Slayton.

Deceased was born in Yates county, N. Y., March 1, 1819. His boyhood and youth were spent in Yates and Ontario counties, N. Y., where he was occupied in teaching, in the dry goods business and farming, till the spring of 1861, when he removed to Tecumseh, engaging in the shipping of grain, etc., and agricultural implement business. He disposed of his interest in the firm to his son in 1885, and has spent the time since in leisure. Mr. Slayton was a man of great strength of character, upright and honorable in all his business relations, a firm friend and an indulgent parent.

He was married in January, 1843, to Mary A. Fowler, by whom he had three children, Augustus W., Charles A., and Mrs. J. E. Waring, who all reside in Tecumseh. The death of his wife in 1889 was a great blow to him, and since that time, failing in strength of body and mind, he has often expressed a wish to be at rest.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. H. Babbitt, of the Presbyterian church, at his late residence, on Tuesday afternoon, and were attended by a large gathering of sympathizing friends.

Mrs. Edward Bardwell, of Tecumseh, Mich., was called home Feb. 1st, 1891. She, with her husband and son, had been a resident of this village for several years. Her health had been gradually failing many months, till at last the end came. She was born in Albany, N. Y. When fourteen years of age she professed her faith in Christ and was baptized by Dr. Welch, and through a long life was faithful to the vows she then assumed. Most of her life was spent in Rochester, N. Y., where she married Mr. Edward Bardwell, who survives her. An only son and one daughter were given her there, and can testify how earnestly she endeavored to train them in the fear of the Lord. The last years of her life were spent in Tecumseh, and from her home there she ascended to join the large family circle who had gone on before her to the glorious rest above. Only one sister remains, now residing in Los Angeles, Cal. She was so quiet in her demonstration of her religious faith that it might not seem at first that much had been accomplished by her here, but the calm, sweet home influence that went out from her everyday life will long linger with those who knew her best. The patient spirit and sweet submission to God's will, when in later years the shadows crossed her path, will never be forgotten. A short time before she crossed the "bridgeless river," she said: "My trust is in the Saviour,—blessed trust!" and after a few days of gradually failing strength she quietly, peacefully, breathed her last, and the angels came and bore her through the open gate to the mansion Jesus had gone to prepare for her. Can we mourn, that after so long a journey with her life work accomplished she was called to receive her reward? Let us rather bless God that he led her so gently down the "dark valley" till the gloom of earth was lost in the glories of heaven. Hers was not a public life, widely known, but a quiet walk with Jesus, shedding the fragrance of his love that filled her heart, on all around. The seed she was permitted to sow for him may never be known here, but when the record is revealed of her faithful service, we know that she will hear the Master's "well done."

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Feb. 13, 91.

Nathaniel K. Bowen died Feb. 27, 1891. He was born Feb. 15th, 1810, in Bristol, Ontario county, N. Y., and moved with his parents to Monroe county, N. Y., in 1829. Emigrated to Michigan in 1839. Took up sixty acres of land on section 18 in Clinton township, Lenawee county, when almost an unbroken wilderness, but by perseverence and push he conquered all obstacles and added to his domains till he had a large farm under good cultivation, and the comforts of a well spent life.

He had been married twice. His first wife was Sophia Phillips, of Ontario county, N. Y. Their union was blessed with two sons, Jeremiah C., who died at an early age; George W., who settled in the neighborhood. His second marriage was to Miss Elizabeth Spaulding. The offspring of this union were two sons, Daniel E. and DeWitt C., who are left with their mother to mourn the loss of a kind, indulgent father. Edgar always lived at home with his father. He and his worthy wife have been indefatigable in their efforts to smooth his pathway in his declining years. D. C. is on a farm in this vicinity, doing well and gaining a competence.

N. K. Bowen has walked in and out amongst us for half a century or more; a man of strict integrity, the very soul of honor, affable, courteous to all, genial and pure in deportment. A just and good man has left us at the ripe old age of 81 years and 12 days. We all loved him, and will miss his genial face; but we mourn not as those without hope. Yes, father; brothers and sisters, we all loved thee, but must bid thee farewell till we meet thee in the resurrection morn.

—Before you buy a sewing machine call on your local dealer and see the different kinds and prizes. I will sell you a first-class machine for less money than you can buy of soliciting agents. M. P. Brown, agent for piano's organs and sewing machines, Tecumseh Mich.

Alva Spade is already preparing for the Spring trade and has a message on hats in another column. Read it.

The funeral of the late Samuel M. Satterthwaite was held this afternoon at two o'clock, at the Friends church in the Valley.

The first sparring and wrestling contests for championship of Michigan will take place at the Lyceum Theater in Detroit, on Friday and Saturday, evening, March 20 and 21.

P. J. Welling has a new tricycle and it will be a boon companion for him. He was out on Chicago street yesterday enjoying the balmy air. How strange that he never thought of this scheme before.

James Kelly, special agent of the National Loan and Investment Co., of Detroit, was in town last week. If sufficient encouragement is given him he will organize a local advisory board in Tecumseh.

The Friends are holding revival meetings at the Universalist church of this place, conducted by David J. Lewis and Amos M. Kenworthy. Meetings are at 10:30 o'clock A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Everybody is welcome.

In an item last week about Ell Gray's Shrophire lambs the omission of a sentence so radically changed its meaning that the author would scarcely recognize it. Ell attributes his good luck to the Scotch Shepherd in his employ and his collie dog.

Several insurance adjusters were in town Friday and made an investigation of the Heck mill fire. They satisfied themselves that the loss was due to no negligence or carelessness on the part of the owners, and the losses will be paid within a reasonable time.

Tecumseh W. C. T. U. will hold their annual meeting for the election of officers, on Friday, March 20, at at 3 o'clock P. M. at the Hall they now occupy, S. E. corner of Chicago and Ottawa streets, up-stairs. It is important that all our members be present.

The indications are now favorable for the rebuilding of the Heck Mill this summer. While we do not wish to intrude unsollcited advice, we take the liberty of making this suggestion. Why not enlarge the size of the mill, put in more rolls and double its capacity?

Married on Wednesday, March 4th, at the residence of John Cook of this village, Mr. William Smith of Ridgeway and Miss Adah Cook of Tecumseh, by Rev. Frank E. Arnold. A large company of friends and relatives shared in the pleasure of the occasion, and testified their good will by presents varied and beautiful.

Mr. Samuel Satterthwaite died quite suddenly Tuesday afternoon. His death was caused from acute inflammation of the bladder. He had entirely recovered from the severe injuries which he received between three and four weeks ago.

Waring Bros. have an extended announcement on the first page of this weeks HERALD giving some interesting information about the new city of Harvey, a suburb of Chicago. People who have idle money to invest should open a correspondence with them.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church will convene in the Church parlors on Wednesday, March 18th. Business meeting at 4 p. m; supper will be served from half past five until half past six by Mrs. N. R. Merritt's Committee. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

"Rev. R. H. Conwell was introduced to an Atlanta audience for the first time last night by Rev. J. W. Lee, at Trinity Church. He is a tall, well-formed gentleman of about forty, dark hair, dark mustache, pleasant expression, and was perfectly at home the moment he faced the large, cultivated and expectant audience. In his lecture he gave the people what they wanted—plenty of good common-sense, plenty of every-day language, plenty of apt illustration, plenty of opposite anecdote, plenty of wit and humor, which rose naturally from his subject as water bubbles from a spring, and plenty of fine sentiment and pathos which never failed to strike home at the right time. There are orators and orators, but few like Conwell, and after he spoke two hours and a half all were sorry when he concluded. All want to hear him again."—Atlanta Constitution.

Elsewhere in this issue can be found an extended advertisement of Harvey, Ill., a new suburban resident and manufacturing village two miles from Chicago. It has been a marvel as to rapid growth, which has only just nicely begun. One very attractive feature is the fact that all deeds, given for land for any purpose include a prohibitory clause against gambling, prostitution and liquor traffic. For this reason Christian and temperance people are rapidly locating there that they may live in peace and bring up their children away from the contaminating influence of the saloon.

THE ENTERTAINMENT COURSE.

To the Stockholders.

When the stock was subscribed for the entertainment course, it was with the understanding that the stock holders would not be called on to pay for their season tickets unless the financial conditions of the treasury required it. The condition of the treasury at present will be seen from the following statement made by Treasurer Smith:—

RECEIPTS

450 Season tickets for full course @ $1.50	$675.00
20 " " 4 entertainments @ 1.25	25.25
Single tickets sold	118.45
Total	820.70

EXPENDITURES.

For printing 601 season tickets	9.00
For other necessary printing etc.	14.63
Paid Miss Aus der Ohe	125.00
" Musin Co.	200.00
" Lotta Glee Club Co.	151.00
" Daniel Dougherty	200.00
" N. M. Sutton for opera house	48.00
Total expenditure to date	778.03
Cash on hand	44.10
Estimated expense for other entertainments	$345.00

It will require about $200 more to carry us through. The executive committee have therefore decided to make an assessment of $2 a share, and the stockholders are requested to pay their assessments as soon as possible to the treasurer J. H. Smith, at O. P. Bills & Co's bank.

As the regular price of season tickets was $1.50, those of us who became responsible for the course will thus be called upon to pay 50 cents more than the rest of the holders of season tickets.

Considering that we have enjoyed during the past winter the best talent in the land, and that, too, without having to go out of town, the committee are confident that the stockholders will cheerfully and promptly meet the assessment.

By order of Executive Com.
C. F. FIELD, Sec.

—A WORD TO TEACHERS.—It will pay you better to attend the Fayette Normal University than to teach a spring school. The next term begins March 31st. Special review classes for teachers are prominent features. Ten weeks in this progressive and popular school will do much to fit you for better positions and more profitable work. Write for information to the president J. E. Dodds, Fayette, Ohio.

—Notice—Owing to the inclement weather and bad roads for the past 30 days, I will continue to make Cabinet photos for $1 50 per doz. for a few days, to give those who live at a distance a chance to secure some of my work. If you want this work come early. W. L. HECK.

UNPARALLELED OFFER TO ALL NEW SUBSCRIBERS TO THE ARENA,
THE BRILLIANT BOSTON REVIEW.
The Publishers of THE ARENA take pleasure in announcing that they have just perfected arrangements by which they can send free, as a premium to every new subscriber of THE ARENA, the COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE for the ensuing year (old subscribers of the Cosmopolitan must remit fifty cents extra.) This is not only the most liberal offer ever made by a leading review, but
THE COMBINATION IS UNSURPASSED.
THE ARENA, being conceded one of the few really great reviews, is without question the most liberal and progressive leading magazine published; while the Cosmopolitan is a richly illustrated, popular family magazine.
The subscription price of THE ARENA is $5.00; that of the Cosmopolitan is $2.40. But for $5.00 we will send The Arena and the Cosmopolitan, postpaid, for one year to new subscribers.
How THE ARENA is regarded by Leading Thinkers.
ALFRED RUSSELL WALLACE, LL. D., F. L. S., Author of "Darwinism," "Malay Archipelago," etc. The Eminent Scientist and Author writes:—
"I think you have succeeded in the very difficult task of improving on all existing literary periodicals. The articles deal with questions of vital interest to every thoughtful person."
Rev. CYRUS A. BARTOL, D. D, the Distinguished New England Clergyman:
"The place that was waiting for a periodical, not only free and able, but catholic and comprehensive,—fair to every thinker and just to all thought, while open to any subject, in which our common humanity was concerned,—in my judgment you fill."
OPINIONS OF CRITICAL JOURNALS.
"Full of mental stimulus, of breadth and vitality."—Boston Traveler.
"The Arena is a fine magazine of the best writings."—N. O. Picayune.
"At the head of magazine literature of a superior sort, and is more particularly designed for educated minds."—New York Times.
SPECIAL NOTICE.—This great offer—The Arena and the Cosmopolitan Magazine combined is only made to new subscribers of both magazines. Old subscribers must remit $5.50 when sending their order. Address THE ARENA PUBLISHING COMPANY, Copley Square, Boston, Mass.

Shot Dead.

Two Prominent Wheeling Physicians Meet.

AN EPITHET IS APPLIED TO DR. GARRISON,

Who Draws a Pistol and Shoots a Rival Doctor Dead—The Killing the Result of an Old Feud.

WHEELING, W. Va., March 7.—One of most sensational tragedies that ever occurred here, took place this morning just before eleven o'clock. Dr. George I. Garrison, a prominent physician, shot and almost instatly killed Dr. George Baird, another prominent physician. There has been bad blood between the men for over three years and about four months ago they had a violent encounter. Both men were of large size and undoubted courage and a fatal encounter was expected when they met. This morning Baird met Garrison on Eleventh street, and made an abusive remark. The latter immediately drew his revolver and shot Baird twice.

The bullets struck Baird in the head and he staggered back into the store, and died without a word. Both men have been active in politics, being members of opposite factions in the Democratic party. Garrison two years ago beat Baird's son for city health officer, and a short time ago was defeated for re-election by the Baird influence. Dr. Baird was one of the first mayors of the city.

THE MONEY DOWN.

Colonel Hovey and Mrs. Armstrong Figure in Another Sensation.

ZANESVILLE, O., March 7.—Colonel H. M. Hovey, who created a sensation some time ago, when he was arrested for larceny on the charge of Mrs. Angie Armstrong at Marietta, is acting a strange role here again. She charged that Hovey had $1,300 belonging to her and he was arrested and taken back to Marietta. As soon as he was in Mrs. Armstrong's possession she withdrew the charge against him. It was said to be only a love quarrel.

Late last night 'Squire Brush was aroused from bed by Hovey and Armstrong who said they wanted to get married right then and there. But before the sleepy 'Squire could pronounce the words of the ceremony they engaged in a quarrel.

The colonel wanted Mrs. Armstrong to count him out $1,000 in advance, and he would then allow the ceremony to proceed. Mrs. Armstrong interposed an objection to this, but she said she would be willing to give that sum after the knot was tied, but he could not see the matter in the same light, and, as no compromise was offered, the case was postponed, and the 'Squire is out his $2 fee. Hovey departed on a trip to Columbus, while the lady is awaiting here for his return.

WELSTON FIRE.

The Business Center of the Place Burned Out.

WELSTON, O., March 7.—Fire yesterday destroyed the business center of this town, entailing a loss of at least $45,000. It started in Greenburg's clothing store on Ohio avenue, though how is not known. The first building that took fire from Greenburg's clothing store was the dry goods house of George X. Atkinson. The fire, owing to a brisk wind, changed its course, coming directly south, consuming the saloon of Ark Allen, Harrison & Magee's drug store, F. A. Carraci & Co.'s dry goods and cloak store, James Brunning's barber shop, F. Straus' clothing store, Carraci hotel, S. H. Rupps' hardware store, Walker Bros.' saloon, Patrick Welsh's residence and all the stables and out-buildings on the square. The town is without adequate fire protection. All the parties burned out are fairly well insured.

WANTED TO BE ABDUCTED.

Curious Trial in Ireland—The Jury Sympathizes with the Prisoner.

DUBLIN, March 6.—A trial with some curious features has just ended at Ennis. A servant named Moriarty was tried for the abduction of the sixteen year old daughter of his employer. The man testified that the girl urged him to the deed, and the letters were produced in which she expressed her willingness to go with him. The jury when first sent out disagreed in spite of the judges warnings that they would disgrace the county, if they allowed the prisoner to go free. When the jury reported their disagreement, the judge told them they ought to be disfranchised, if they persisted in disgracing the county, and sent them back. Later the jury brought in a verdict of guilty with recommendation of mercy.

SHE THREW VITRIOL.

Unnatural Viciousness Between Two Sisters at Rochester, N. Y.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 7.—Lena Cunningham, 34, threw a quantity of vitriol in the face of her sister Matilda, 27, while the latter was sleeping in bed. The sisters had quarreled because Matilda had refused to secure a position for Lena in Briggs' seed-house, where the former worked, on the ground that Lena was not strong enough. Lena was arrested later.

Matilda's forehead, cheeks and nose are terribly burned, eyebrows and lashes being entirely gone. As she was asleep it is thought she may not lose her sight, in spite of her serious injuries. The vitriol burned a large hole in the pillow.

Died in His Wife's Arms.

UTICA, O., March 8.—Charles Trowbridge, boss carpenter for Sinsabaugh, McConnell & Company, living at the corner of Church and Mechanic streets, died suddenly with heart disease about 12 o'clock last night. The noise made by gasping for breath awakened his wife, who raised him up in order to facilitate his breathing, but it was too late and he expired in her arms. Deceased was fifty-five years of age and leaves quite a family.

LIVELY SHOOTING.

Another Kentucky Vendetta Near Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, March 9.—Near Cumberland Gap a pitched battle was fought as the result of a feud of long standing. Moses Gibson was fatally shot and Shelby Gibson, Garrett Latham and a bystander were badly wounded.

PERISHED IN FLAMES.

Two Students Burned in a North Carolina High School Fire.

MONROE, N. C., March 7.—Fire was discovered in the Monroe high school early in the morning. An alarm was at once sent in and the students of the school were aroused as soon as possible, but it was too late to save the building. Two young men, Thomas E. Pemberton, of Little Rock, Arkansas, and Albert Bost, of Bost's Mill, North Carolina, perished in the flames. At the first alarm the young ladies who roomed on the ground floor of the school building made their escape. The young men roomed on the third floor, and when the alarm reached them the means of escape were partially cut off, and the building was filled with flames and smoke.

Pemberton was not seen at all and his remains were found on the wire springs of his bed, which leads to the belief that he did not wake at all. The school building and furniture were entirely burned up.

ELECTED.

SIR JOHN MACDONALD POLLS A SMALL MAJORITY.

A Quiet Election in the Dominion of Canada, With Some Gains for the Liberals in Frontier Counties.

KINGSTON, March 7.—Sir John McDonald is elected beyond a doubt by a majority of about 250, with two or three polls to hear from which will not change the result.

TORONTO, ONT., March 7.—The Hon. John Carling, minister of agriculture, is defeated in London, Sir Hector Langeverin and Sir John MacDonald are reelected by increased majorities. The Liberals are making gains in the frontier counties.

The Summary.

TORONTO, Ont., March 7.—The following summary is compiled from corrected returns up to three o'clock yesterday afternoon: Total number of seats, 215, in three of which, Algoma, Ont., Huntington, Que., and Carriboo, B. C., elections were not held:

	Cons.	Lib.
Ontario	46	45
Quebec	28	36
Nova Scotia	17	4
New Brunswick	11	5
Prince Edward Island	2	4
Manitoba	4	1
British Columbia	5	0
Northwest Territory	4	0
Total	117	95

Conservative majority of 22.

"BRITISH STILL."

England Jollifies Over the Canadian Elections.

NEW YORK, March 7.—A London cable to the "International Telegram Company" says: "The result of the Canadian election is received with general satisfaction. It is looked upon as a triumph of the British feeling and a pledge of attachment to the mother country. The St. James Gazette is exultant and winds up a leading editorial by declaring: "Canada is British still. Washington does not yet rule over Ottawa."

AN ABDUCTION.

A Husband Seizes His Divorced Wife and Carries Her Away.

LONDON, March 9.—While leaving the parish church at Clitheral, Mrs. Jackson, wife of a wealthy Australian merchant, was seized by three men and forced into a carriage which was driven rapidly away to some quarter as yet unknown. It has since been learned that one of the men was her husband, to whom she was married in 1887, and who has just returned from Australia. They have not lived together for some time, though the courts granted a petition of the husband for restitute of his wife.

MARY ANDERSON

Advertises All Her Stage Things for Sale.

LONDON, March 8.—Mary Anderson (Mrs. Navarro) has created some comment in theatrical circles here by advertising the sale of all her stage dresses, theatrical scenery and stage properties, thus seeming to confirm the announcement that it is her intention to retire definitely from the stage.

FOREIGN FLASHES.

Prince Jerome Dying.

ROME, March 9.—The physicians of Prince Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte have given up all hopes of his recovery, and say death is only a question of a few days. His illness has been aggravated by congestion of the lungs setting in.

Suicide in Bed.

LONDON, March 7.—Robert Antrobus, a son of Sir Edmund Antrobus, junior partner in the Coutts Banking company, was found dead in bed this morning, having committed suicide during the night. The cause of the act is yet unknown.

Murdered His Mistress.

PARIS, March 7.—The appeal of Peter Vladminoff from a sentence of twenty years penal servitude for murdering his mistress, Carmine Freycinet, at Ville D'Avray, in October last, has been dismissed, and the rich young Russian, who is but nineteen years of age, will have to pay the penalty.

Cardinal Newman's Will.

LONDON, March 7.—The will of Cardinal Newman bequeaths all his manuscripts and copyrights of books to Rev. Mr. Neville; his real and personal household property to Rev. Mr. Pollen, and the whole of the remainder to members of the oratory at Edgbaston. The cardinal's estate is valued at £3,574.

After the Nihilists.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 7.—Degajeff, the Nihilist leader and murderer of the chief of the secret police, in 1883, has been arrested at Kostroma, the capital of the government of Kostroma. When taken into custody he was found lodging under an assumed name in the house of a government official. A reward of 10,000 rubles has for a long time been offered for his capture. Chief instructor at the Kostroma gymnasium, suspected of being implicated with Degajeff either in the actual murder or in the conspiracy which led to it, committed suicide just as the police burst open the door of his room with the intention of arresting him. A number of other arrests have been made, and sensational developments are expected.

She Sought Death

The Pretty Young Pittsburg Suicide.

SHE IS THE DAUGHTER OF A WEALTHY POLANDER,

Who Eloped With a Polish Army Officer to This Country, and was by Him Deceived and Deserted.

PITTSBURG, March 8.—Saturday evening Emil Hecht, of this city, who formerly worked for President Bloch, of the Vienna, railroad at Warsaw, Poland, called at the city morgue and positively identified the remains of the young lady who committed suicide in the lavatory at Union Station yesterday morning, as Eva Bloch, the daughter of his former employer in Poland. On the girl's wrist is a peculiar silver bracelet, of the design of a bridle bit which Hecht says is the

THE SUICIDE.

Polish insignia of a marriage vow. Passengers who traveled on the same train with the girl from Philadelphia give the information that she was accompanied to this country by an officer in the Polish army; that he had remained in Philadelphia promising to follow her to this city; that they had run away from Poland and were to be married in America.

A cablegram was sent to the girl's parents tonight, asking what disposition shall be made of the remains. Hecht says that the parents of the suicide are very wealthy. The Poles have subscribed $150, which will be used to give the remains respectable burial on Tuesday next, unless definite word contrary to this plan is received from her parents.

Another none written in the Polish language was found secreted in the young lay's clothing, which, translated, reads: "He has deserted me, and I wish to die. Signed)) Eva Bloch."

JACK THE RIPPER.

The Chief of Police at Washington Gets a Letter From Him.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—For some time anonymous letters have been received at police headquarters here. The letters refer to a detective whom the writer designates as a "Dr. Cronin" detective and who was to be "removed." Major Moore, superintendent of police, received the following by mail:

DEAR PEOPLE—Wouldn't you like to catch me? I am Jack the Riper. I am going to kill eight more women before I give up. I am in the city.

"JACK THE RIPER."

Whether the peculiar spelling of "ripper" was intentional on the writer's part or not is of course not known. While the major attaches no importance to the letter, he read it to the different police lieutenants, and the police are trying to find the writer who is thought to be a crank.

SENSATIONAL DEVELOPMENT.

Chief Witness in a Murder Trial Put Out of the Way.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 8.—There was a sensational development Saturday in the trial of Francis Lingo for the murder of Mrs. Annie Miller, when the clerk called the name of Garret Murray, and the court officer notified the court that Murray could not be found. Murray is one of the most important witnesses in the Lingo trial. He also figured conspicuously in the Leconey trial. About three months ago the body of a man was found in a colored cemetery. The police declare this dead man was Murray, and the belief prevails that Murray was put out of the way by the colored folks to save Lingo. A rigid investigation has been ordered.

KILLED BY THE CARS.

Terrible Tragedy Caused by a Balky Horse at Lima.

LIMA, O., March 7.—A terrible accident occured at Sharkey's Crossing, near this city at five o'clock p. m., by which Lyman Hyde, an old farmer, and his twenty-three year old daughter Judith lost their lives and Emeline, a sixteen year old daughter, was fatally injured. The trio were driving toward Lima and at the point named, which is at the end of a deep cut and on a curve, attempted to cross in front of a freight train. The horse balked and the frightened occupants of the buggy became too bewildered to even attempt to save themselves. Lyman and Judith were killed instantly and Emeline had her skull crushed.

Another Badly Ventilated State House.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., March 9.—Twenty-five members of the legislature are seriously ill here. Two have died during the session and one is reported on his death-bed. The general ailment is pneumonia. Inadequate ventilation in the state house which permits of a multitude of draughts has caused the whole trouble. The legislature adjourned having failed by one vote to carry the bill for resubmission of the Prohibition amendment.

Hon. Charles Foster's Mother.

FOSTORIA, O., March 9.—Mrs. Laura Foster, mother of Charles Foster, secretary of the treasury, was 87 years of age Sunday. She is remarkably well preserved for one of her age, and would not be taken for over 60 years old. Her faculties are not in any way impaired, and she gives promise of celebrating her birthday for many years to come.

Fire at Mt. Vernon.

MT. VERNON, O., March 7.—A dwelling belonging to Mr. Kimes, and occupied by William Phillips, caught fire from a defective flue and burned down. Loss $1,500.

A Steamboat Blows Up.

CINCINNATI, O., March 8.—The steamer Buckeye State, exploded one of its drum heads at Patriot, Ind. James Jones and Samuel Hamilton being fatally scalded.

HAPPY HOOSIERS.

Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville, Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from Kidney and Liver trouble." John Leslie farmer and stockman, of the same place, says: "Find Electric Bitters to be the best kidney and Liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says: Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care hether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life.

HARD TIMES!

In periods of universal depression like that which is now prevailing in all sections of the United States it is always a question in the minds of the people as to the cause. This is a very proper query, and upon its correct answer depends the solution of the grave problem now perplexing the minds of our best thinkers and most patriotic citizens. We cannot answer it properly within the limit of a single article of admissible length, if indeed we can fully satisfy all under any conditions, but we propose to call attention to a few points for consideration.

Is the cause over-production? That we should have "hard times" because we have too much to eat and wear appears on its face a contradiction, as it is; but many persons assert that the cause of low prices is because of a large surplus in the article they have to sell, and that low prices brought small returns to the agriculturist, who in turn makes fewer purchases of labor and supplies; and we find because of the dependency of the different classes upon each other that stagnation of business and industry follows. We would call attention to the fact, however, that we can easily sell all we have if we take small enough price for it. This proves the existence of a demand for the supply, but that the two require a third factor in order to facilitate their proper action. When the price of articles is brought within the range of the purchasing power of the masses the supply is readily exhausted.

There never has been, never will be, never can be too much of any good thing upon this earth under normal conditions. We have a greater demand in the United States to-day for food, clothing and shelter than there has ever been, and we have a supply to meet those needs to a large degree, but the demand is going unappeased and the supply undistributed, because of the lack of the third factor in distribution. Millions are unemployed, and the nation is suffering great loss thereby, because while they are not producing they are consuming something. And here we might remark would be a solution if the old theory were true; but as a matter of fact its long continuance will exhaust the reserves and produce revolution, but cannot increase the price, because these consumers have no means to pay and cannot buy at all. Then the only thing necessary to bring the demand and supply into proper relations is the only means of exchange—MONEY—in the hands of those persons who have the demand.

Here, then, is our second question: How shall we get money into the hands of the masses? Plainly it cannot be done by "dividing up," for all persons are adverse, and properly so, to allowing persons "to reap where they have not sown." We only demand that they who work shall enjoy the full measure of the fruits of their toil. If they waste their substance in "riotous living" they have no claims for consideration. We are not making a plea for laziness and extravagance, but for justice and right. As conditions now are we may say with John Stuart Mill, "the very idea of distributive justice, or of any proportionality between exertion and success, or between merit and success, is so chimerical as to be relegated to the regions of romance. Those who work the most get the least; those who work the least receive the most." Monopoly now fixes the price on many kinds of labor and the products of labor, and they allow to the laborers so little that they cannot meet from their allowance the measure of their needs, much less the comforts they should claim as their rights. The monoplists on their part cannot consume the surplus piled up in their hands, and finding the masses unable to purchase at their price discharge their laborers and then aggravate the social situation.

Now, after several years' continuance, when the climax is nearly reached, we find the money, (the medium of exchange), the transportation lines (the means of distribution), manufacturing and mining (sources of production), almost entirely in the hands of monopoly; while agriculture is under mortagage to it. The people are now the serfs of combined capital just as much as were the people of the middle ages the serfs of the baronial lords. As Horace Mann says "We may as well be dependent upon another for our head as for our bread." We must first destroy this power of monopoly. This can only be done through wise and just laws enacted and enforced by the people. We must decide whether we shall make this a government of the people, by the people, for the people, or permit it to remain a government of the people, by monopoly, for monopoly. Monopoly now has the reins, and our course is toward ruin. Shall it still direct us, or shall we change the course to a harbor of safety? This must be answered by our action.

How we shall break the power of monopoly, and secure justice to ourselves, will be discussed later. In our next we propose to show how we can get the money in the hands of the people.

OCEAN STEAMERS AT CHICAGO.

An English Syndicate to Put on a Line of Steamers Between Chicago and England—Opening the Market For a Bushel of Wheat and a Barrel of Pork.

A company has been organized with a capital stock of $5,000,000 to build and operate a line of steamers between Chicago and England. A similar plan about two years ago fell through, as it was found that the Canadian canals could not accommodate vessels drawing nine feet of water. An improvement, however, has been made in the shallowest canal, giving it a depth of more than nine feet. Already the scheme has been revived, and an agent of the company is now visiting the lake ports in order to make contracts for freight. Ten steamers will be built, and these will carry out cargoes of dressed beef, dairy products, etc., and will bring back general merchandise.

Protectionists will doubtless view this movement with alarm, and see in it another scheme of the "greedy, grasping British" to enrich themselves at other people's expense. The protection notion that we should "eat all our beef at home" and buy little or nothing abroad is directly opposed to this scheme to promote trade between Chicago and England. According to the McKinley standard of political orthodoxy it would be better to fill up those Canadian canals rather than deepen them.

But the farmers will not see any thing alarming in having British ocean steamers loading and unloading at the wharfs of Chicago and Detroit. They will rather see in this what Blaine calls opening the "market for another bushel of wheat and another barrel of pork;" and if these ships bring back English hardware, woolen goods, or other articles of merchandise, the farmers will reflect that it is precisely such things as these that they need. They will not hasten to lift up their hands against a "flood of cheap goods."

In fact, the farmers will be so old-fashioned as to rejoice in seeing that flood of cheap goods rise higher and higher; and they will be only too glad to see a corresponding stream of surplus wheat, corn, pork, beef and butter and cheese go out in these ships in order to increase the flow of cheap foreign goods into Chicago for distribution in a hundred country towns. As these same farmers can make wheat and corn and fatten live-stock much more easily than they can make cloth, or knives, or a hundred other articles, they will find it a paying business to ship these farm products to England for the manufactured products named. The farmers will feel no harm to themselves from such an arrangement; and it will be difficult to make them believe that harm results to the country at large by the exchange described. The fact is, as even every half-intelligent man knows, the permanent exchanges which we call trade, can not exist unless both parties make a profit—in other words, unless they get something which they like better than the thing they parted with. A school boy will not swap a top for a set of marbles unless the marbles please him better than the top; and, moreover, the boy is quite sure that he is himself the only satisfactory judge as to which really does please him better. If the father of the family should step in and take 60 per cent. of his boy's marbles and try to persuade him that this was for the good of the family, the boy would for once face a problem that would beat the mysteries of the multiplication table.

There is another point about these ships which deserves the farmers' attention. The ship-owners not only expect to take away cargoes of American produce, but they equally expect to bring in cargoes of English goods. Does anybody suppose that these ships would come for our produce if they could not bring a cargo with them? Or if they should do so, is it not clear that our out-going cargo would have to pay two freights? Would not this make our produce dearer when laid down in Liverpool and less able to compete with the produce of other countries?

If the ideal McKinleyisms were carried out and the tariff made absolutely prohibitory, would not the exportation of our produce practically cease? Would not the glut of the home market make the prices of such produce sink to a ruinous level?

These are simple questions in foreign trade which are, of course, easy to answer; but they deserve to be thought over again and again. They have in them the root of the whole tariff controversy.

FARMERS FOR FREE WOOL.

New York Farmers Are Opposed to the Wool Tax—Strong Resolutions Asking For Free Wool—A Contrast to the Action of Ohio's "Political Shepherds"—The Part Played By the Reform Club.

Two expressions of opinion on the subject of wool duty have recently been made by the wool growers which ought to attract attention by reason of the sharp contrast which they present on the question of free wool.

The first of these was by the Ohio wool growers in a meeting at Columbus. At this meeting Mr. Columbus Delano offered certain resolutions, which were adopted, denouncing the wool manufacturers who had expressed the opinion that a modification of the duties on wool may be expected and that such modification is necessary and proper. This sentiment of the manufacturers was denounced as "unjust, unfriendly, and in violation of the agreement made between the manufacturers and producers prior to the passage of the McKinley bill." With this was coupled the threat once more "that the reduction of duties on wool will secure a reduction of the duties on the manufactures of wool, and any effort to secure such a reduction will be met by a united effort on the part of the wool growers. Free wool and free goods or fair and equal protection to each is the determination of all wool-growers." In his speech Delano reiterated this threat. He "wanted to inform the manufacturers that when the wool-growers go down the manufacturers' monopoly will go with them."

So much for the "political shepherds" of Ohio. In striking contrast with this action are the resolutions passed about the same time by the Sheep Breeders' and Wool Growers' Association of Ontario and Livingston Counties, in New York State. Their twenty-fourth annual meeting was held at Honeoye, in that State, was largely attended, and was marked by an interesting discussion on the subject of free wool. As the result of this discussion the following remarkable resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, It has been the policy in the past for this association to annually pass stereotyped resolutions praying Congress to restore the wool duty of 1867 or its equivalent; and

Whereas, This association finally recognizes the unsoundness of its past position on this question; and ever ready to correct any error into which it may have fallen, we beg leave to submit the following:

First—We recognize that the wool duty is a delusion and a snare to the wool growers, and that it has largely been instrumental in driving to the wall an industry it was calculated to benefit.

Second—Prior to 1867, under the various changes of the wool duties, the price of wool fluctuated, not in sympathy with the tariff, but by reason of the ever controlling law of demand and supply, the grower having received high prices and low prices under high tariffs, and, conversely, low prices and high prices under low tariffs.

Third—The success of the wool-grower depends on the success of the woolen manufacturer, while the American manufacturer is seriously handicapped by reason of being compelled to pay exorbitant tariff taxes on every pound of clothing wool imported for necessary admixture, while all foreign countries of any consequence have the benefit of free wool, and are thus enabled to undersell our manufacturers.

Fourth—The great wool tariff of 1867 resulted in driving from the eight chief wool-producing States—for whose special benefit said tariff was conceived and passed—more than 50 per cent. of their sheep in a single decade, while the price of wool declined in a nearly corresponding ratio.

Fifth—The importation of foreign wool increased from about 26,000,000 pounds in 1867 to more than 126,000,000 pounds in 1871, just four years succeeding the highest duty ever imposed on wool and woolens.

Sixth—During eight of the past eighteen years the foreign price of imported clothing wools at the last port of export actually exceeded the price of our domestic fleece in the markets of Boston, New York or Philadelphia, while in no single year did the domestic wools bring the foreign price, plus the duty.

Seventh—England, France and Germany are the only three countries in the world that export woolen manufactures in excess of the imports of raw wool; in other words, these countries, by admitting wool free, have created a demand for their home wool in excess of all wools required to clothe their people, and after giving employment to labor, export more wool than they have imported. The United States, on the other hand, by imposing a high duty on raw wool, has not only destroyed our export trade, but so throttled our manufacturers as to ruin the market for domestic fleece and give to the English, French and German manufacturers the cream of our market for cloths.

Eighth—The free importation of raw wool into the United States would knock out the imports of woolen goods and would revive the present depressed state of our own manufacturers, thus giving employment to labor here and create an increased demand for our strong wools for necessary admixture.

Ninth—Recognizing the truth of the above facts, therefore, we, the members of the Ontario and Livingston Sheep Breeders' and Wool Growers' Association, in convention assembled, most respectfully petition Congress to immediately place wool and woolen manufactures on the free list, in order that these industries may again thrive and assume that magnitude commensurate with a nation of 63,000,000 of people. * * * * *

At this meeting Mr. John M. Norton read a paper in which he denounced the wool duty in the strongest possible language. One effect of free wool Mr. Norton explained in the following words: "There is just one of our now fat and thriving infant industries that would gracefully 'turn up its toes' at the advent of free wool. I refer, of course, to that beautiful cherub, the shoddy manufacturer."

This association is the oldest one of the kind in the country and it has heretofore been worked for all it was worth in the interest of a high protective duty on wool. The meetings of the association were in the habit of passing the usual resolutions favoring high duties, and petitions were circulated only last year asking for the "immediate passage" of the McKinley bill.

Mr. Norton in a letter to the editor of the New York Standard, says: "Many of us have for years been disgusted with this course, but if any one offered the slightest remonstrance he was promptly jumped upon by the whole gang and effectually squelched. I had resolved that if the opportunity ever offered I would stir them up a little, any how. So, when invited to read a paper at the meeting, I mixed them a mild dose just to see how it would work. One year ago they would have jumped upon me by the dozen and tried to choke me off, but now they took their medicine as meekly as lambs. In the discussion that followed they didn't get up and dust worth a cent."

It is interesting to note that the two counties in which this great change has taken place were thoroughly canvassed by the New York Reform Club last year. Representatives of the club made forty-three speeches in the two counties, six of these being joint debates. Besides this, tariff reform literature was distributed at the meetings and a large number of documents were sent by mail to the farmers of the two counties. Already this work is bearing fruit.

When the wool-growers themselves turn against the wool tax surely that tax is doomed.

A Woman's Tax.

This country spends about $3,000,000 a year for ostrich feathers. California has six ostrich farms; and to protect the six owners of these the women of the country are made to pay a duty of 10 per cent. on all feathers that have not been dyed or finished for use, and a duty of 50 per cent. on such as have been thus prepared for use. Do the women believe in "protection" of that kind?

—McKinley put into his "farmers' tariff" a duty of one cent per pound on oatmeal, which is double the old rate. Now the oatmeal manufacturers have decided to "get together" and have formed a trust. When the farmer buys oatmeal for his breakfast dish and pays trust prices for it, he will have a fair test of what McKinley's "farmers' tariff" means.

—It is stated by the New York Merchants' Review that nine-tenths of the industries of the country are under the control of trusts or combinations of some kind. Never has there been so great activity in forming these combinations as since the passage of the McKinley tariff law. The era of McKinleyism is the era of trusts.

LA GRIPPE AGAIN.

During the epidemic of La Grippe last season Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and colds, proved to be the best remedy. Reports from the many who used it confirm this statement. They were not only quickly relieved, but the disease left no bad after results. We ask you to give this remedy a trial and we guarantee that you will be satisfied with results, or the purchase price will be refunded. It has no equal in La Grippe, or any Throat, Chest or Lung Trouble. Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's Drug Store. Large bottles, 50c. and $1.00.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many costomers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, Knightstown Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction.' Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

ONE DOLLAR WELL INVESTED.

If you have bad breath, constipation, pain in the small of the back, discolored skin, nervousness, or dizziness your only wise course is to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. It will cleanse the blood of all impurities, regulates the Kidneys and Liver, and thus restore a healthy glow to your checks again. All druggists; one dollar a bottle.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, tetter, chappep hands, chilblains corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box for sale by John J. Orr.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
The Best Blood Medicine

So say Leading Physicians and Druggists, and their opinion is indorsed by thousands cured by it of Scrofula, Eczema, Erysipelas, and other diseases of the blood.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla has won its reputation by years of valuable service to the community. It is the best."—R. S. Lang, Druggist, 212 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass.

Dr. W. P. Wright, Paw Paw Ford, Tenn., says: "In my practice, I invariably prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla for chronic diseases of the blood."

Dr. R. R. Boyle, Third and Oxford sts., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "For two years I have prescribed Ayer's Sarsaparilla in numerous instances, and I find it highly efficacious in the treatment of all disorders of the blood."

L. M. Robinson, Pharmacist, Sabina, O., certifies: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has always been a great seller. My customers think there is no blood-purifier equal to it."

"For many years I was afflicted with scrofulous running sores, which, at last became so bad the doctors advised amputating one of my legs to save my life. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon saw an improvement. After using about two dozen bottles the sores were healed. I continue to take a few bottles of this medicine each year, for my blood, and am no longer troubled with sores. I have tried other reputed blood-purifiers, but none does so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—D. A. Robinson, Neal, Kansas.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., MARCH 12, 1891

Mrs. Lousie Clark and Miss Laura Clark returned to Ann Arbor last Saturday.

Miss Louise VanDeMark, went to Tecumseh last Friday to engage in retouching negatives for Photographer Heck.

Charlie Starrett is working for C. S. Burroughs, in his gum-factory.

Mr. and Mrs. Elias DePuy went to Adrian Monday.

Another wedding the last of this month.

Measles are rampant, Eva McFaul, Mary White, and Master Frank Fabrique are the latest victims.

Mr. and Mrs. David Woodward returned from Albion last Saturday.

Miss Ella Smith has been quite sick for several days. Her sister Alma fills her position in the second primary.

The school attendance is very small this week, owing to so much sickness among the little ones.

Solomon Brown has not been as well as usual for a few days past. We were glad to see him out again Tuesday.

Miss May Morey, was unable to teach Monday, the result of a severe cold. Miss Ella Morey took her place.

George Kies of Elkhart, was in town last Friday.

Arrangements are about completed for the Catholic supper, entertainment and Watch contest to take place on St. Patrick's Day. We hope to be able to report it a grand financial and social success next week.

Oliver Hill has given in his time to the Woolen mill employers. He is about to leave with his family for some place in Wisconsin, where he has obtained a position as dyer at a highly increased salary.

We understand that Mr. and Mrs. George Goodrich have rented the house now occupied by Eugene Plimer and intend keeping a large boarding house.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Palmer expect to move in the McConnell house

Miss Mame Bradner has purchased the milliuery stock of Mrs. Kay of Manchester and expects to take possession this week. We wish the young lady success in her new business.

Miss Frances Mathews went to Toledo last Thursday, returning Saturday.

Miss Augusta Hall of Tecumseh spent a few days here last week.

At the donation last Thursday night given by the M E. Church to the pastor Rev. A. W. Stalker, he was made the recipient of about $80.00 in cash, besides many other gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Stalker felt pleased with the expressions of appreciation, that they received.

Dow Draper has been assisting S. W. Demuth in his grocery store for a few days.

Mrs. Hendrickson of Ann Arbor who has been visiting her daughter Mrs. A. W. Stalker was called home Thursday by the illness of her husband. Mrs. Stalker accompanied her and has not yet returned.

The election held Monday, was the most quiet one we have had in several years. The caucus of Saturday evening in justice Brown's office resulted in the nomination of the following ticket:

Pres.—William C. Rogers.
Clerk.—J. R. Blanchard.
Treas.—W. D. VanTuyle.
) J. T. Clark.
Trustees. C. F. Clark.
) Merrill Esterbrook.
Assessor.—Albert Kishpaugh.
Street Com.—Nelson Prentice.
Constable.—G. W. Goodrich.

This was the only ticket in the field and there were 37 votes cast.

F. D. Lancaster was taken suddenly ill last Saturday night with neuralgia, and has been confined to his bed since then. He hopes however to be around again in a few days.

A number of bricklayers came from Toledo Monday to work on the addition to the woolen mill. Work is progressing very rapidly.

Last Thursday about 4 p. m. smoke was seen issuing from the windows of Horace Bartlett's residence and the alarm of fire was given. On arrival at the house, Mr. Bartlett explained that he had been burning out his chimney with cotton and kerosene oil, and it is thought there must have been some defect in the chimney, as the fire caught first between the ceiling of the lower rooms and the upper floor, making it impossible to extinguish the flames until they had gained such headway that there was no chance of saving the house. Attention was then turned to the neighboring buildings, and willing hands and plenty of water saved them. Fire caught in the roof of the house just west of Mr. Bartlett's, but was extinguished promptly. It seems very unfortunate that one of Clinton's finest residences should be burned, but Mr. Bartlett regards it in a very philosophic manner, inasmuch as there was no insurance on the building, and expresses his intention of rebuilding at an early date; a brick structure to take the place of the former one.

Miss Tessie Carroll was the fortunate young lady who won the medal at the contest last Saturday evening.

H. D. Niblack is in the clothing store during Mr. Lancaster's sickness.

The little six-months-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Kishpaugh, that has been sick for several weeks, died last Saturday morning. The funeral was held at St. Dominick's church on Monday, at 9:30.

Major Henry C. Dane, who was to have given the last lecture on our course Tuesday evening, was taken very sick on his arrival here with inflammatory rheumatism, and was unable to fulfill his engagement. He left here Wednesday morning for Detroit, and will return to give the lecture as soon as he is able.

George Spencer is very sick with heart disease.

William Bartlett, of Ashland, is visiting friends here.

W. D. VanTuyle has bought a lot of John T. Clark just south of the school building and will build a fine residence thereon soon.

A. C. Huntington has rented Mrs. E. D. Fenn's house, lately occupied by Oliver Hill, and will move soon.

George Sherwood left the employ of Henry Lancaster last Saturday, and left here Monday for a situation at Grosse Pointe.

BLACK GETS A BLACK EYE.

A New York Judge Renders a Decision in favor of the R. S. Peale Reprint of the Encyclopædia Britannica.

[New York Special]—Judge Wallace, in the United States Circuit Court rendered a decision today refusing to grant an injunction against the firm of Ehrich Bros., to restrain them from selling the "Encyclopædia Britannica," published by R. S. Peale & Co. of Chicago. The complainants are the firm of Black & Co., publishers of the original work at Edinburg, Scotland. In his decision Judge Wallace holds that rival publishers in this country have legal right to use the contents of the original edition, except such portions of them as are covered by copyrights, secured by American authors. The defendant's work, he finds, has substituted new articles for these copyrighted ones.

This decision is a square set back to the book trust, and directly in the interest of education and general intelligence. As an educational factor in every household, no work in all literature is so important and desirable as this KING OF ENCYCLOPEDIAS, of which it has been said that "If all other books should be destroyed, the Bible excepted, the world would have lost very little of its information." Until recently its high cost has been a bar to its popular use, the price being $5.00 per volume, $125.00 for the set in the cheapest binding. But last year the publishing firm of R. S. Peale & Co., of Chicago issued a new reprint of this great work at the marvelous price of $ 1.50 per volume. That the public were quick to appreciate so great a bargain is shown by the fact that over half a million volumes of this reprint were sold in less than six months. It is the attempt of the proprietors of the high priced edition to stop the sale of this desirable low priced edition, which Judge Wallace has effectually squelched by his decision. We learn that R. S. Peale & Co., have perfected their edition, correcting such minor defects as are inevitable in the first issue of so large a work and not only do they continue to furnish it at the marvelously low price quoted above, but they offer to deliver the complete set at once, on small easy payments to suit the convenience of customers. It is a thoroughly satisfactory edition, printed on good paper, strongly and handsomely bound and has new maps, later and better than any other edition. We advise all who want this greatest and best of all Encyclopædias to get particulars from the publishers, R. S. Peale & Co. Chicago.

THE BEST FARM HORSE.

Authorities differ. William Crozier, in his excellent work on farming, says that the Clydesdale is par excellence the horse for the farmer, while the Suffolk Punch makes the best possible draft horse for city work, being capable of hauling immense loads. He pronounces the Suffolk too slow, however, for farm work in America.

A writer in The American Agriculturist, however, says that the Suffolk Punch is just the spry, easily kept beast that is wanted for farm use, and that the English Shire horse, or truck horse, is the one exactly adapted for heavy city hauling. It is certain that the Clydes and Percherons are as yet more popular as draft and farm horses than either the Shire or Suffolk Punch.

The Suffolk is the farm horse of the counties of eastern England. The writer in The Agriculturist says:

The Suffolk horse of the present day retains many of the leading features of the breed the description of which is extant as he appeared at the close of the Seventeenth century. Reference is made to what he was like 190 years ago in the writings of some of the standard authors on British agriculture. The color, the short legs, the powers of endurance and the persevering efforts at the collar were his distinguishing points at that time, and these are still a marked characteristic in the Suffolk as he is now to be found in the east of England. But added to the merits named he has been endowed with an activity and comely appearance not accorded to the original stock.

The Suffolk horse of the Nineteenth century is among the most shapely and certainly one of the handsomest animals on the farm list. Invariably of a chestnut color, occasionally with a darker shade, and rarely whited beyond the pastern joint or a blaze down the face, their uniformity in appearance at once suggests the identity of origin. Indeed, the pedigree charts which are given in Book account for this. Every stallion of the breed in Suffolk can give his genealogical record of identified paternal ancestry for 130 years, all ending in one animal. Of no other breed can such a thing be said and proved.

GRAY & TALLMAN, of West Tecumseh, are the owners of a full blood Suffolk Punch Stallion, it being one of the Three imported from England last fall by ELI GRAY.

STATE OF OHIO, CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss.
LUCAS COUNTY,

FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is the senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of CATARRH that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886. A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

MARVELOUS ENDURANCE.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3 000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swolen aukles, etc. Dr. Franklen Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only relirabler emedy. Sold by Baker & Hall.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

If a price can be placed on pain, "Mother's Friend" is worth its weight in gold as an alleviator. My wife suffered more in ten minutes with either of her other two children than she did all together with her last, having previously used four bottles of "Mother's Friend." It is a blessing to any one expecting to become a mother, says a customer of mine.

Dr. James Corrie, Dentist in Baltimore, writes: "I have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup personally and in my family for two or three years, and I am prepared to say that there is nothing to compare to it as a remedy for cough, cold, etc. 25 cents.

Pains in the back are frequently caused by a sudden wrenching of the spine. A few applications of Salvation Oil will give permanent relief.

DON'T FEEL WELL,

And yet you are not sick enough to consult a doctor, or you refrain from so doing for fear you will alarm yourself and friends,—we will tell you just what you need. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which will lift you out of that uncertain, uncomfortable, dangerous condition, into a state of good health confidence and cheerfulness. You've no idea how potent this peculiar medicine is in cases like yours.

It would be the height of folly to spend hundreds of dollars experimenting with high priced physicians and so-called mineral waters when Dr. Craig's Kidney and Liver Cure is sold by every druggist.

March April May

Are the best months in which to purify your blood, for at no other season does the system so much need the aid of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, as now. During the long, cold winter, the blood becomes thin and impure, the body becomes weak and tired, the appetite may be lost. Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiarly adapted to purify and enrich the blood, to create a good appetite and to overcome that tired feeling.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has a larger sale than any other sarsaparilla or blood purifier, and it increases in popularity every year, for it is the ideal Spring Medicine.

"I have for a long time been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and believe me, I would not be without it. As a spring medicine it is invaluable." E. A. RHODES, 130 Ontario Street, Chicago, Ill. Be sure to get

Hood's Sarsaparilla will cure, when in the power of medicine, scrofula, salt rheum, sores, boils, pimples, all humors, dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, indigestion, general debility, catarrh, rheumatism, kidney and liver complaints, and all diseases or affections arising from impure blood or low condition of the system.

"In the spring I got completely run down. I could not eat or sleep, and all the dreaded

Attention, Comrade.

DO YOU WANT A PENSION?
Do You Want Your Pension Increased.

There is a New Pension Law and nearly every soldier is now entitled to a pension.

DR. J. H. REYNOLDS

Late a member of the Board of Examining Surgeons at Adrian, Mich., and who has examined over two thousand soldiers for pensions, will hereafter devote two hours each day to

PENSION BUSINESS

The Doctor was a soldier and is a pensioner, and with his five years' experience as Examining Surgeon for Pensions, believes he can make it PAY YOU to come and see him.

He knows the RATE on every known disability

Knows what Diseases or Disabilities are the results of any other.

Knows (as every EXAMINING SURGEON will tell you) that many men do not draw what the law allows them, because their claims are not presented in proper shape.

Knows how to put your claim in such shape that you will get pay for ALL results of the disease or wound for which you are pensioned.

Knows all the recent decisions made by Commissioner and how to give you the advantage of them in dollars.

Knows that some recent rulings are of vital importance to many pensioners, if their claims are only properly presented.

Knows whether you are entitled to Rerating, and how to get it.

I charge just the legal fees because I earn them ALWAYS BRING YOUR CERTIFICATE WITH YOU.

If you want the benefit of a Pension while you live go and see Dr. Reynolds.

I can get you from $2 to $6 more per month under the new law than other agents.

To any person examined by the board, at Adrian, before Aug. 1, 1889, I have something of importance to tell you.

Come and let us examine you (no charge) and will tell you all about it. About one-third of all the soldiers examined while I was on the board were rated for disabilities not claimed. You had better come and see me about it.

Correspondence solicited, with stamp for reply
15 East Maumee-st., Adrian, Mich.

ATTENTION, Soldiers & Sailors,

Under the new pension law just passed by Congress all Soldiers and Sailors who served 90 days in the Rebellion, and who are disabled from any cause permanently, (need not have originated in the service,) are entitled to a pension of from $6 to $12. All soldiers' widows, minor children and dependent parents come under this law. Being located at the Capital near the U. S. Pension office, we can give our personal attention to your claim and thus ascertain any defect quickly and supply the same.

Write for blanks. Give full description of service and disabilities.

The Power of Necessity!

IS THE MOTHER OF INVENTION.

There has long been a NECESSITY for a clean and convenient place to keep Flour. By this Combined Bin and Sifter, as shown in this cut, that want is now being supplied. The Flour is taken from the bottom, instead of the top, and by so doing the first flour put in is the first taken out. So you can see at once that there is no flour remaining in the bottom of the bin, to become old and musty, as often is the case in the old way of keeping it. It is made durable and strong, and is NOT like some Sifters that have been placed on the market, bought to-day, used to-morrow, and then are a thing of the past,—but last a family a lifetime. All parts are made removable. You may ask anyone who has seen or used them, what they are. Manufactured and sold by

T. A. FOX, TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN.

MORE ABOUT HARVEY, ILL.

THE READERS OF THE HERALD WHO HAVE BECOME INTERESTED IN THE

New Temperance and Manufacturing Town

—SHOULD KNOW THAT THE—

HARVEY LAND ASSOCIA'N

Is Grading all the streets, putting in the main Sewerage, also the Sidewalks, Water Pipes, and Shade Trees on Every Street where houses are built, and the ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT for the town, WITHOUT EXPENSE to Lot Owners, on account of which there will be No Taxes this year and comparatively very light for a number of years at least. ALL SHOULD ALSO KNOW that ONLY THOSE who locate and make purchases WITHIN the Corporation of Harvey will obtain the Profit and Advantages of these public improvements. Those who have invested outside are disappointed and provoked when learning this fact. All the Property Offered for Sale by WALTER THOMAS MILLS & CO., whom we represent in Michigan, IS WITHIN THIS LIMIT, and upon which these improvements are now being made. We have the exclusive sale of all lots less than $300 remaining unsold within the Harvey tract. OVER FIFTY WERE SOLD last Monday by us. Those who want a lot for $200 should act promptly, as they are going rapidly, and an advance will no doubt be made within the next 30 days. The very best thing to do is to come and see for yourself. The next best thing is to select from plats, freely sent to any asking for them; or Write or Telegraph us to select best lots for you remaining unsold. There is good reason to believe that investments made soon will bring double money within a year. Many have done this in the past six months.

The First Impetus to this "Magic City,"

Is that the traffic in Liquors, Gambling and Virtue WILL NOT BE PERMITTED within its borders. FOR THIS REASON extensive manufactories are already established here and more are coming, which will employ at least Five Thousand Operatives in a few months. One company a few days since ordered every house, and the capacity of every boarding house engaged, as they would be on the ground with from 500 to 800 men in ten days. There is a good demand for skilled machinists and mechanics, and it will take an army of common laborers to complete the public improvements and build the houses, etc., needed to accommodate those who come to stay. Our faith is so great in the future of Harvey that we continue to stand by our former proposition to Pay the Expense of any Michigan people to the amount of two per cent. of their investment who will call at our Chicago office and go with us to Harvey. Expense means railroad fare to and from Chicago and Harvey. The usual business methods would place local agents in the field on commission, but we propose to give this commission to the investors, and have no local agents. Such a plan would be a total failure if Harvey was like most of the boom towns. This rebate will be allowed to Michigan people, and to only those who call at our Chicago or Harvey office. Arrangements have been made for LOW RATES at the Grand Hotel, 280 State street, a TEMPERANCE HOUSE, only a short walk from our city office. An extended description of the town, with plats, and any information, will be sent to anyone writing us. REMEMBER TO ADDRESS,

WARING BROS.,

161 LaSalle Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

BRITTON BUDGET.

Diphtheria is in our village.

People are beginning to talk town meeting.

Ben Snyder has hired to C. D. Loose for a year.

Mrs. E. Henderson is quite sick at the present writing.

Mrs. Exelby is progressing favorably and will soon be convalescent.

Rev. J. Wright has bought the Walter Exelby house in our village.

There is some talk of putting up an elevator in the spring. Don't let it end in talk this time.

A number of our citizens went to Ann Arbor last week to attend the lawsuit, Lee vs. Osborn.

Elder Wright had a sick horse one evening last week. It is now better, and the Elder is $5.00 richer.

Mrs. Gertie Saxton went home last Sunday to help her parents, and Miss Ousterhout has taken her place at the hotel.

Mr. Cox and Miss Hiscock were joined together in holy matrimony by Rev. James Wright, a week ago last Thursday.

Joseph Hunter has taken the contract to build a fine barn for Walter Exelby. He will commence about the middle of April.

Mr. Strong has at last bought a new hat, which will be put on view at the office of the hotel any evening after the wearer has retired to rest.

Rehearsals for the presentation of Millie, the Quadroon, have commenced, and as soon as the stage is finished it will be put on the boards. The play, Beyond Pardon, will also be staged later, and will be the last entertainment for the season.

Mr. C. D. Loose, of Monroe, is talking of buying property here. Mr. L. is a thorough business man, full of energy and push, and if he should come to reside in our village he will probably help to build up Britton in more ways than one.

BRITTON DRAMATIC CLUB.

Wishing to encourage and develop our home talent for amateur theatricals, cultivate a taste for the drama, and also to raise funds for an object of good to our village and the public generally, the citizens agree to form an association; and for its government do hereby adopt the following constitution:

ARTICLE I.—This organization shall be known as The Britton Amateur Dramatic Society.

ARTICLE II.—The object of this association shall be amusement, intellectual improvement, and to contribute funds towards establishing a library and reading room in Britton.

ARTICLE III.—The officers of this association shall consist of a President, a Vice-president, a Manager or Secretary, a Stage Manager, a Treasurer and a Property Man, to be elected annually.

ARTICLE IV.—It shall be the duty of the President to preside at all meetings. The Vice-president shall preside in the absence of the President, and in the absence of both the Stage Manager will act.

ARTICLE V.—The duty of the Secretary shall be to keep a record of the proceedings of each meeting, read at each meeting a report of the work done at the previous one, and to keep such other records of the society as may be necessary.

ARTICLE VI.—The Treasurer shall keep the funds of the society, collect all fees and dues, and pay out the same only when authorized by a majority of all members present at a general meeting, and then upon an order drawn by the Secretary and countersigned by the President, and shall make a financial report at each regular meeting.

ARTICLE VII.—The Stage Manager shall have full control of all dramatic entertainments and rehearsals of the plays, cast of characters, arranging for stage property, music, fixing price of admission, etc., etc. He shall appoint such assistant as he may need from time to time.

ARTICLE VIII.—The Property Man shall be the custodian of all property, (except finance) and shall procure all property necessary to the stage, under the direction of the Stage Manager.

ARTICLE IX.—Any person may become a member of the association by paying an initiation fee of twenty-five cents, and signing the constitution. The number of members shall not be limited. All ladies so wishing will be made honorary members of this organization.

ARTICLE X.—A business meeting of this Society shall be held on the evening of the first Monday in every month, and whenever there is business warranting, the Secretary shall call a special meeting upon the solicitation of at least five members.

ARTICLE XI.—Seven members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. A less number may adjourn from time to time, until a quorum shall be present.

ARTICLE XII.—It is understood and agreed that all monies collected for dues, fees, admission to entertainments, gifts, donations, or in any manner accumulated by the Society, after paying the necessary running expenses, shall be set aside and used for the purpose of establishing a library and reading room in Britton, and for no other purpose.

ARTICLE XIII.—Only members assigned parts in a drama shall be entitled to free admission to the entertainment given, and each individual cast shall receive one complimentary in addition to his or her own admission.

ARTICLE XIV. — This constitution may be altered or amended by a two-thirds vote of all the members present at any regular or special meeting of the Society, provided such amendment has been proposed and entered upon the minutes at a previous meeting.

Dr. R. H. Nelson received a fine upright piano from C. J. Wooley, of Toledo, Monday. It is one of the Kroeger & Son's, N. Y., Standard pianos, and is the finest upright in the village.

Remember the Conwell lecture, fifth on the Tecumseh Entertainment and Musical Course, comes on next Monday evening. Subject, "An Acre of Diamonds." Tickets may be had by calling at the library.

The pupils in district No. 3 are preparing a program for an exhibition, to be given on Friday evening of next week, March 27th, at their school house. An admission of ten cents will be charged, to raise means to purchase an organ for the school. It is hoped that the patrons of the district will lend a helping hand in the undertaking. As the program is somewhat lengthy, the exercises will begin at 7:30.

As there has been inquiry made in regard to the admission at the Ship social, would say that the price given in the announcement will pay for the entire evening's entertainment, from the time of the first bell until the fair port is reached, including supper and free access to all parts of the ship, with the log thrown in.

"PEACE, BE STILL!"

Ship Social will be given by the W. C. T. U. of Ridgeway, on Wednesday evening, March 25th. Ship will be at anchor at the home of Mrs. G. P. Waring, at 7:30 p. m., to receive passengers. Night signals, red and green light forward, and white light aft.

MESS.

Mess will be served between two and four bells in second dog watch, to be furnished by the union; enough for one and all.

WOODSTOCK.

School has closed at District No. 2.

Percy Wareham has been sick for some time but is better.

We are glad to learn that Mrs. Percy Kelley is recovering. She has been very sick.

The young people here are looking forward to a "breaking out." They have been exposed to the measels.

Mrs. Dunn has completed arrangements for the silver medal contest and we learn that it will take place Saturday evening, March 21st, at Kelley's Corners. We wish her success.

A donation was given Rev. C. Brodie at Kelley's Corners on Wednesday evening of last week. Bro. Brodie has done nobly and richly deserves all they tendered him.

There was a discussion on Saturday night of last week in the school house at District No. 4, subject: "What has caused more suffering than intemperance?" T. Joslin and Wm. Taylor were the disputance, ably supported by good speakers.

Mr. Theodore Joslin, our enterprising teacher at Jefferson, received a letter from the officials of the Railway Postal Service at Washington, D. C., informing him he had been appointed to an important position in that service on the N. Y. Central and Lake Shore & Michigan Central Railroad. Mr. Joslin is one of our energetic and rising young men and has the good wishes of all who know him. He stood second in the examination in the county of Lenawee. We are glad he is to have the position. He will receive $800 per year at first.

MACON MUSIC.

Frank Patterson, of Tecumseh, visited at M. V. Sickley's last week.

Mrs. G. Ellis, of Tecumseh, is spending a few days with friends here.

Mrs Sarah King, who has been spending a few weeks with her old friends, started home last Wednesday.

Mrs. Marion Baxter, president of the State White Rose Club, was the guest of Mrs. Isaac Pennington last Tuesday.

The donation held at Lester Coller's last week, for the benefit of Rev. A. W. Stalker, was a success in every respect. He received $55 in cash, for which he was very thankful.

A donation was held at the residence of Lester Coller on Wednesday evening, March 11th, for the benefit of Rev. A. W. Stalker. A very pleasant gathering and a goodly sum of money was the result.

Because of the dreaded disease, diphtheria, that has made its appearance in Britton, Elmer Hendershot has brought his wife and baby to Lester Coller's, where they will remain till all danger is past.

If some good, enterprising citizen of Tecumseh wants to get rich and at the same time merit the blessings of the housewives in this community let him open an "intelligence office." First-class help for general housework is in constant and imperative demand,—with no supply.

The following program will be presented at the Macon Grange hall on Friday evening, March 20th. Entertainment begins at 8:00 o'clock. Admission, fifteen cents. Music, violin solo; picture, sub rosa; song, quartet, pantomime, The Alarm; picture and tableau, Reveries of a Bachelor; music; picture, The Blind Beggar; song; pantomime, Family Jars; pantomime, Family Jam; song, quartet; statuary, Skill, Strength and Patience; music, violin solo; pantomime, Ten Little Injuns; song; tableau, Bed Time. On account of the large number of characters, the names of those taking part are omitted.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Wilbur Gibbs has obtained a permanent position as night operator at Marshall.

Frank Norcross has been quite seriously ill, but is said to be slowly improving.

Everyone, far and near, it seems, who have not had the measles heretofore, is having that siege at present.

Rev. Cooper, of Addison, will lecture at the M. E. church next Wednesday and Thursday evenings, under the auspices of the Epworth League.

Flowers blooming on the river bank in December, frogs frisking about in January, good wheeling in February, with an occasional thunder storm, and excellent sleighing in March, is the way the weather has been reversed this winter. What will April bring forth?

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

The Epworth League held a social at the residence of Dr. Iddings, last Tuesday evening.

Mrs. E. L. Nicholson, of Saline, has been here visiting her relatives and visiting the scenes of her childhood and youth again.

Porter Brower, of Norvell, was on the street last Monday afternoon. He is about to move back on his farm in the western part of town.

The F. B. Church society, at Iron Creek, held a social at W. B. Rushtons' last Friday evening. Many availed themselves of the opportunity to indulge in a sleigh-ride.

Mrs. Sarah C. Thorn, an old resident of this town, who owned a farm on the county line between Norvell and Manchester, died on Friday, March 13th. Her funeral was held at the house on Tuesday March 17th, at 10:30 a. m. She suffered a stroke of paralysis more than a year ago and has been an invalid since.

The Alpha Sigma meeting on Monday night was well attended and the following program carried out. A recitation by Jennie Eckler, Biography of Lady Jane Gray, by Jennie Saley. Debate upon the question: Resolved that capital punishment should be restored in Michigan. Laura Dresselhouse on the affirmative and Frank Sloat on the negative. Decided in the favor of the negative. Discussion by Fred Birtless and Warner Spencer on the subject; Is the brunette preferable to the blonde? Music by the quartet.

RAISIN RACKET.

Miss Mary Osgood, of Ridgeway, visited Mrs. Arthur Green Tuesday.

Mrs. Jane Payne died of pneumonia at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Emerson, Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. William Cornelius is suffering from an attack of catarrhal fever, but at the present writing is on the gain.

The farmers are making use of the little fall of snow by working in the woods, thinking it "better late than never."

Miss Phoebe Osgood closed school in the Sutton district Tuesday, where she has taught the last year. She has taken the school in her home district in Macon the spring term.

T. I. Sutton's son, Bennie, has been suffering from a severe attack of neuralgia of the stomach, but is much improved, and we are glad to say that he is able to enjoy a ride in the open air behind the gentle trot of a young calf, hitched to a hand sled.

The funeral of Sam'l Satterthwaite, at the Friends church in the Valley, was very largely attended. The Seminary closed that the students and teachers might attend, he being one of the former superintendents at that place, and highly respected by all.

ONSTED ODDS.

School closed here for a two-weeks vacation on Saturday last.

Measles have made their appearance in several places in this vicinity.

Mrs. Clark Welch and children have departed for their home in Dakota.

The worst day of the season thus far in this vicinity was Friday of last week.

The Democratic party has advocated fair dealings in everything, but it seems as soon as they get a chance they are not any better than the other fellows.

Louva, the Pauper, will probably not be given to the public as soon as intended, on account of some of the characters being laid up with the prevailing disease.

The new census of Onsted is not correct any longer, as they have a new baby girl at Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sickner's, and Johnnie Kane smiles, and says, "We have a girl, too, you bet!" and then the cigars come out.

Mrs. Wm. Onsted departed this life on Sunday morning, and was buried on Tuesday afternoon. The cause of death was a combination of la grippe and measles. She was sixty odd years of age, and a pioneer of this locality, and we all will greatly miss Aunt Louisa's kindly face among us.

DON'T FEEL WELL,

And yet you are not sick enough to consult a doctor, or you refrain from so doing for fear you will alarm yourself and friends,—we will tell you just what you need. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which will lift you out of that uncertain, uncomfortable, dangerous condition, into a state of good health and confidence and cheerfulness. TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAR. 19.

The legislatures of Ohio, Michigan and Illinois have one paramount duty to perform this winter above all others,—to enact an Australian ballot reform law. Political reform and party expediency both dictate this action.

The Chicago Tribune says: "John M. Palmer has cost the people of Illinois a big, round sum of money." Very true, but they have the satisfaction of knowing that they have received the worth of their money. How awfully they would have been cheated in the event of Streeter's election.

The cabalistic figures "101" will serve as a Democratic mascot hereafter. In the election of John M. Palmer the 101 Democratic members of the Illinois legislature have achieved one of the most notable victories ever gained in the west. It has given the party another winning issue—the election of U. S. Senators by direct vote of the people.

The two great issues which produced the political revolution of 1890 were the Force bill and the McKinley tariff. The Force bill is dead and buried. The tariff issue is still unsettled and upon this issue the Democracy is a unit. Other reforms which the people desire must not be allowed to displace or interfere with the paramount issue of tariff reduction.

The Republicans were disposed to be quite hilarious over Cleveland's silver letter, thinking it would shelve him as a Presidential candidate. Since the publication of the letter, the New York Herald has taken a poll of the Democratic members of 27 legislatures now in session, the result of which is astonishing. For Cleveland, 1550; for Hill, 199; scattering, 276.

The National Democrat hits off the reciprocity scheme in these truthful words: The Democratic party will give the country real reciprocity in commerce, and not a sham; it will give every man a chance, and not give one man a chance at the expense of another. And it will make it possible for American ship owners to do a profitable business, instead of hiring them with public money to do an unprofitable business.

The plan of choosing U. S. Senators by direct vote of the people will receive a fresh impetus since Gen. Palmer's victory in Illinois. It will become the unwritten law of the land at all events. Presidential electors obey the popular choice now, although they have the legal power to vote for any candidate whomsoever. The time is coming when legislators will be compelled to obey the popular will in choosing U. S. Senators.

Political firmness and political principle met their just reward in the election of General John M. Palmer. The people had themselves chosen General Palmer as their Senator, so far as the law would allow them to do it. The legislators, in standing solid for Palmer, were simply obeying the mandates of their constituents. All honor to the gallant 101. Their victory marks the beginning of the end of the caucus auction plan of electing U. S. Senators.

Tom Reed took great pleasure in calling his congress a "business body." And yet the public business was never be[illegible] in such a reckless and slipshod fashion. To illustrate: A bill was passed last session, which threw the State of Texas into Oklahoma territory. The bill had to be recalled from the President by resolution. The McKinley bill repealed a solemn treaty with Hawaii, and this had to be patched up this session by special bill. And to cap the climax, the bill to appoint additional Circuit Judges, as it passed, took away the cases from the Supreme Court and left that body with nothing to do. This had to be repaired after it went to the President.

What shall Michigan do with her share of the direct tax? It cannot be refunded to the men who paid it. The State finds itself in a quandary similar to that of a Methodist minister up north in an early day, upon receiving a donation of $100 made at a masquerade ball. He had never before received so much money at one time, was in great doubt whether to accept it, and consulted the Presiding Elder. The latter allowed that if the parson could receive $100 of Satan's money as a gift and spend it in the service of the Lord, there could be no impropriety in it. The State is under obligations to devote this direct tax fund to some special use. Let $50,000 of the [illegible] be given to Detroit to help then[illegible] their G. A. R. reunion, and le[illegible] balance be given to the State U[illegible]ersity. This is [illegible] motion. Who seconds it?

THE BILLION CONGRESS.

During the two ever-memorable years of the Fifty-first Congress, the management of appropriations in the House was in the hands of a Republican committee, of which JOSEPH G. CANNON of Illinois was chairman. Mr. CANNON is the statesman with the lower part of whose speaking countenance the readers of THE SUN are familiar. He succeeded the late SAMUEL J. RANDALL at his post of honor, difficulty, and enormous responsibility.

In Mr. RANDALL'S time, and, as far as we remember, always previously to the present occasion, the end of a Congress saw the accounts of the appropriation Committee in such shape that the total of the money voted was immediately or very readily deducible. This was especially the case when Mr. RANDALL was responsible. His close watch upon every outlet of expenditures, his comprehensive knowledge of the public business, and his systematic methods, enabled him to present at the adjournment of the Congress an accurate and authoritative statement for purposes of comparison.

CANNON goes out leaving the accounts in a muddle. His mouth is shut tight about the financial results of the session. Under his management in the committee room and on the floor, with speaker REED exercising despotic sway in the chair, with the House doing business under revolutionary rules and often with a mythical quorum, with discredited legislators on the eve of dismissal from public life tumbling over each other in their eagerness to get a last grab at the people's cash, with a Republican Senate ready to swell even the superlative extravagance of the Republican House, and a Republican President wielding a pen red hot for the signature of money bills, no wonder the aggregate of appropriations has reached figures which Republican leaders are loath to tabulate. The Fifty-first Congress, from beginning to end, has proceeded more in the spirit of a Dutch kirmess than like a body of trustees charged with the control of hundreds of millions of dollars not their own. It has been no ordinary season of extravagance and prodigality. It has been a rake-hell orgy of expnediture.

Two Democratic members of the Committee on Appropriations have prepared careful estimates of the aggregate appropriations during the two sessions of the Fifty-first Congress. At the first session, for the fiscal year ending next June, the grand total was $464,442,510. Mr. DOCKERY of Missouri figures the regular and permanent annual appropriations of the second session at $544,827,961, making the aggregate of the Republican Fifty-first Congress $1,009,270,471. Mr. SAYERS of Texas, also a member of the minority's representation on Mr. CANNON'S committee, makes the total $3,000,000 less. The difference of the three millions is in the estimated size of the permanent appropriations required to meet the pensions. With regard to the totals definitely voted in the regular bills the two computations agree. Both are conservative, both leave out of question perhaps $800,000 or $1,000,000 in items of deficiency impossible to procure at the time the tables were made up, and both take no account of the enormous but indefinite burdens imposed on the future in the public works authorized by this Congress, or of the bounties to be incurred under the Act to Promote Commerce.

To appreciate the appalling total achieved by the fifty-first Congress, it is proper to compare the appropriations with those voted by previous Congresses. The table subjoined shows the grand totals of regular annual and permanent annual appropriations including and since the forty-third Congress:

Congress.	Appropriations.
FORTY-THIRD.—Republican House, Republican Senate, Republican Executive	$649,791,991
FORTY-FOURTH.—Democratic House, Republican Senate, Republican Executive	594,613,272
FORTY-FIFTH.—Democratic House, Republican Senate, Republican Executive	703,695,913
FORTY-SIXTH.—Democratic House, Democratic Senate, Republican Executive	727,696,603
FORTY-SEVENTH.—Republican House, Senate a tie Republican Executive	777,685,948
FORTY-EIGHTH.—Democratic House, Republican Senate, Republican Executive	655,269,402
FORTY-NINTH.—Democratic House, Republican Senate, Democratic Executive	746,243,515
FIFTIETH.—Democratic House, Republican Senate, Democratic Executive	811,583,075
FIFTY-FIRST.—Republican House, Republican Senate, Republican Executive	1,006,270,471
Average of eight Congresses	$709,112,460
Fifty-first Congress	1,006,270,471

A billion dollars in two years of unbridled extravagance! Three hundred million dollars more than the average of the eighth preceding Congresses, with the permanent annual appropriations of interest on the public debt and so forth decreasing steadily all the time! About half a million dollars for every week day in the year in excess of the needs of Government as shown by the experience of the past sixteen years! Such is the monumental record of the Congress that went out of existence last Wednesday.

How this monstrous total has been piled up appears from a comparison of the various appropriations at the second session of the Fifty-first Congress with the corresponding appropriations at the second session of a Congress wherein sound Democratic principles of economy and official accountability prevailed; and to institute such a comparison we go back fourteen years to the last year of the Forty-fourth Congress, with SAMUEL JACKSON RANDALL in the Speaker's chair and WILLIAM STEELE HOLMAN at the head of the Committee on Appropriations;

	Forty-fourth.	Fifty-first.

Grand total	$295,806,694 21	$541,827,961 13

The billion-dollar Congress has swept away the surplus in the Treasury and has made a deficiency inevitable at the end of the next fiscal year. It remains only for for the Fifty-second Congress to follow the example of the Forty-fourth, and to avert as far as possible, by rigid economy, the disastrous consequences of the past two years of criminal recklessness and unparalleled folly.—N. Y. Sun.

GEN. PALMER'S ELECTION.

The great Democratic victory deserved and won in Illinois after an unprecedented struggle will be forever memorable in the history of the United States and of popular government.

It is first of all a triumph of the West in the remarkable movement of Western Democracy for the re-establishment of popular supremacy in government. But it is not less a triumph of the people of the whole Union. A crushing blow has been struck at the Plutocratic power in its stronghold in the United States Senate. The people have begun to storm the intrenchments of its citadel, and in the election of John M. Palmer they make a breach through which they will press until they have won back what has been usurped from them.

The victory in Illinois is the victory of men against dollars; of manhood right against money privilege. It means that no party can hold its own before the people hereafter without consulting the people. It means that the caucus auction and the sale of United States Senatorships shall be no more. It means that the possession of a million will not give its possessor power to buy for himself the privilege of voting down and voting away the people's right to self-government.

It is worth more than an accidental victory in a Presidental election. It puts the Domocratic principle of self-government at the front with the masses of the people pressing on behind it. The West has won in its first pitched battle with Plutocracy, and it will continue to win.

And in every cheer over the glorious victory let honor for the name of JOHN M. PALMER blend with the enthusiasm for the principle of American self-government.—St. Louis Republic.

THE MCKINLEY TARIFF DOOMED.

The election of General PALMER to the Senate by the Illinois Legislature, determines the exact political status of the next Senate. There are yet three vacancies to fill, but the political cast of the new Senators is settled. California will send a Republican to succeed HEARST, Democrat, who is dead; Maryland will send a Democrat to succeed WILSON, Democrat, who is dead, and Florida will send a Democrat to succeed CALL, Democrat, whose term has expired. HEARST had two years to serve, and WILSON had just been re-elected for the full term of six years.

The Senate of the late Congress had 51 Republicans and 37 Democrats, giving the Republicans a majority of 14. The new Senate of the Fifty-second Congress will have 46 Republicans, 40 Democrats and 2 Independents. The Independents—KYLE, of South Dakota, and PEFFER, of Kansas—are both positive in their hostility to high tariff taxes and opposed to the policy of the administration generally.

On the vital political issues the Senate stands 46 Republicans to 42 Democrats and opposition, giving the Republicans 4 majority; but on the tariff issue, three of the old Republican Senators who are in the new Congress, voted against the McKinley bill. These added to the 42 Democrats and low tariff Independents, all of whom are pronounced against the McKinley bill, would make 45 anti-McKinley tariff Senators to 43 McKINLEY Republicans.

It is entirely safe to assume that the new House will pass the repeal of the McKINLEY tariff, by more than two-thirds vote; and it is now entirely safe to assume that the new Senate will repeal it by a decided majority. Of the Republican Senators who voted for the McKINLEY bill not less than ten are known to have been opposed to it and voted for it only under severe party pressure. That was before the November elections, and with the cyclonic upheaval against high tariff taxes in the West, there may be others who would vote to repeal the monopoly tariff even over the vote of the President.

It is now obvious to all that the new Congress will repeal the McKINLEY tariff; that the House will pass the repeal by more than a two-third vote, and that the Senate will repeal it by a decided majority with the possibility of a two-thirds vote to pass it over a veto. Such is the popular response to the McKINLEY monopoly tariff; such is the impressive political lesson of 1890.—Philadelphia Times.

THE BOOK TRUST KNOCKED OUT.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

Some six months ago we began the publication of our reprint of the famous Encyclopædia Britannica in 25 Volumes, which we issued at $1.50 per volume. The price of the English edition always has been and still is $8.00 per volume, and the Scribner edition $5.00 per volume in the cheapest binding.

That the public appreciate so great a bargain is shown by the fact that over half a million volumes of this reprint have been sold in less than six months.

This elegant new edition we still offer at the same price, $1.50 per volume. This is the greatest bargain ever known in books.

Better still, we will deliver the set complete on small easy payments, to suit the convenience of customers.

Remember this is not an abridgement, but the great Edinburgh ninth edition, reproduced page for page, with important articles on American subjects rewritten to date by eminent American authors, and new maps, later and better than in any other edition.

We further announce that we have in preparation three volumes of "American Additions and Revisions," thoroughly supplementing the original work. With these supplemental volumes you will have at small cost an Encyclopædia unapproachable in completeness; a thorough "digest of the libraries of the world," and a complete record of current progress and events.

SPECIAL OFFER.—We claim that our reprint compares favorably with the high priced editions in every respect, and in respect to maps, and strength and beauty of bindings is superior to them. In order that this claim may be tested by a personal inspection we make the following proposition: We will furnish volume I. at 60 cts.—a fraction of actual cost—if sent by express. Add 40 cts. postage if wanted by mail. Amount paid for Volume I. will be credited on price of set when ordered.

MARVELOUS ENDURANCE.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time. No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swolen aukles, etc. Dr. Franklen Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only relirabler emedy. Sold by Baker & Hall.

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

If a price can be placed on pain, "Mother's Friend" is worth its weight in gold as an alleviator. My wife suffered more in ten minutes with either of her other two children than she did all together with her last, having previously used four bottles of "Mother's Friend." It is a blessing to any one expecting to become a mother, says a customer of mine.

Does it hurt the Clothes?

We hear that some woman said of Pearline—"it's the greatest thing I ever saw for easy washing and cleaning, in fact it does so much I'm afraid of it." She recalls the old saying, "too good to be true."

How absurd to suppose that the universal popularity of Pearline is due to anything but wonderful merit.

How absurd to suppose that millions of women would use PEARLINE year after year if it hurt the hands or clothing.

How absurd to suppose that any sane man would risk a fortune in advertising an article which would not stand the most severe (and women are critical) tests.

That's just what PEARLINE will stand—test it for easy work—quality of work—for saving time and labor—wear and tear—economy—test it any way you will—but test it. You'll find PEARLINE irresistible.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—they are not, and besides are dangerous. 166 Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

Busy wives who use SAPOLIO never seem to grow old. Try a cake...

A complete wreck of domestic happiness has often resulted from badly washed dishes, from an unclean kitchen, or from trifles which seemed light as air. But by these things a man often judges of his wife's devotion to her family, and charges her with general neglect when he finds her careless in these particulars. Many a home owes a large part of its thrifty neatness and its consequent happiness to SAPOLIO.

Grocers often substitute cheaper goods for SAPOLIO, to make a better profit. Send back such articles, and insist on having just what you ordered.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

FARMERS AND THE SINGLE TAX.

Walter Muir, President of the North Dakota State Farmers' Alliance, Writing to the New York Journal.

A goodly number of single tax men were among the delegates to the recent Farmers' Convention at Ocala, Fla., where I represented North Dakota. A resolution would have been presented at the convention favoring the single tax had we been sure that the members were not in want of thorough information on the subject.

I am a single tax man, and recommended it to our people in this State. I would not do this if I held to the belief that the single tax would increase the burden of the farmer. That is a myth that will be exploded among the farmers in a few more months of educational work.

Then they will see, as the Knights of Labor have long seen, that a single tax levied solely on the value of land, irrespective of improvements, can not burden a worker, be he farmer, mechanic, or professional man.

The adoption of the single tax by the Colored Farmers' Alliance is but an indication of what is coming. When the farmers of the country take up the single tax there will be such an awakening as this country has never seen. It will be greater than the anti-slavery movement because it will not be sectional.

The man who is riding the storm of rural discontent is Henry George.

Once the single tax is "platformed," there will be a fighting issue that will wipe out all past issues of race, section and religion. The farmers of to-day are not the farmers of twenty years ago. This time they are going to the root of our social troubles. They are coming to see that all other reforms are fruitless if monopoly and speculation are permitted in land—the source of all wealth. The eastern farmer needs the single tax just as much as the western. If it were not so the single tax would be but a local and temporary expedient of relief. The farmers are a liberty-loving class, and the single tax, in levying no tax on the products of labor, and in giving to individualism the freest scope, feeds their aspirations for freedom.

Is a Tax On Ground-Rent Paid By the Tenant?

I have sometimes irreverently made fun of those opponents of the single tax who insist that it will be distributed just like a tariff tax, and, therefore that it has no advantage over any indirect taxes. If it were in the least likely that the chief opponents of the tax reform would believe this theory, we would keep silence on the subject, because nine-tenths of all the opposition would be removed, and the single tax would at least be adopted in several States.

But landlords are not so simple-minded as to be deceived by any such plan as this. They know very well that they now charge all the rent for land which they could possibly get, tax or no tax. Not one of them can be persuaded that a tax on ground-rents can ever be shifted upon tenants. So we must meet this idea with facts and figures in order to convince the tenant majority of the Ricardian doctrine that a tax on ground-rents will always be paid by landlords alone.

Suppose the ground-rent of the United States to be $900,000,000. Suppose the single tax, unlimited, to be adopted; and this is the particular form of tax which Mr. Edward Atkinson and the other advocates of this distribution theory are considering. Something over $800,000,000 would then be collected. On Mr. Atkinson's theory, the landlords would add this to their rents, and the tenants would add it to the prices of goods. Very well; then rents would be raised to $1,700,000,000. Instantly the taxes would be raised to about $1,000,000,000. Rents are then put up to $3,300,000,000. But the taxes are just as quickly put up to $3,200,000,000. Rents are again raised to $6,500,000,000. Taxes instantly swallow up $6,400,000,000. Rents are now raised to $13,000,000,000. But taxes as swiftly follow, absorbing $12,900,000,000. The all-powerful landlords once more raise rent to $26,000,000,000. But, as this is more than twice as much as the whole productive power of the whole United States, how are the landlords going to get it? And if they could get, how can they keep it?

There is no use in going any further, although the figures might be carried into infinite numbers. The idea that landlords can add to their ground-rents taxes on ground-rents, so long as the people are determined to take even half the ground-rents in taxes, is transparently absurd. But the idea that they can add any taxes at all to ground-rents, when they are already charging all the rent which they can possibly obtain, is equally absurd, though not perhaps so transparent. The American landlord very properly charges now all the rent for land which he can possibly get. He can get no more, if compelled to pay a quarter or a half of the whole of his rent in taxation, for the plain reason that he gets now all which he possibly can, and no man can get more than he can get.—Thomas G. Shearman, in the Standard.

Australia.

The Legislative Assembly of Queensland has passed a bill for the imposing of a tax of three pence on the pound on capital land values, irrespective of improvements. The upper House, however, threw out the bill on the second reading. This is the first start of the single tax in Queensland, and a good one it is. The landlords of the upper chamber may resist for a little while, but will soon have to give way.

Sir Henry Parks for the Government of New South Wales has introduced a most sweeping elective reform bill, which provides for all that the most thorough Democrats have asked. It gives female suffrage, provides for single electorial districts, abolishes property qualifications and cumulative voting, does away with hustling nominations, provides stringent provisions against fraud, and compels the closing of liquor saloons on election day. The bill also admits the military and police to the franchise. This is the most sweepingly radical measure that has ever yet been proposed, but it is likely that it will go through. The Government have not yet announced specially their financial proposals, but they have hinted at sweeping reductions to the tariff and the imposing of taxes on land values and on property to supply the loss on customs revenue. The single tax men welcome the proposition but will fight the property tax.

The single tax men throughout Australia seem to be in the highest spirits. Although the great strikes have resulted in much loss, they have done a great deal to call the public attention to the social problem. The Government of New South Wales has appointed a Royal Commission to take evidence and report upon the cause of the conflict between labor and capital, and the best means of preventing labor disputes. Several single tax men have been named on this commission, Mr. Frank Cotton being of the number. Rev. Dr. Roseby, of Sydney, Chairman of Congregational Union, the leading man of the Congregational clergy of New South Wales, has delivered an address upon the relations of Christianity to the social question which has attracted much attention. He declares that it is hopeless to attempt to elevate men so long as they are placed in conditions where their integrity is impossible. Hence the most urgent reform is the adjustment of the land laws on the basis of justice to all.

An Amusing Economist.

The Peoria (Ill.) Journal prints, with editorial commendation, a communication from Eli C. Lisk. Mr. Lisk declares that the farmer now pays ninety-two per cent. of the taxes of this country. One reason for this is, that "all his property lies open to the assessor and it all goes on the assessor's books," whereas "the rest of the community, manufacturers and merchants excepted, have their wealth laid aside in their drawers and safes and can not be seen by the assessor, but he has to depend on their word alone for the correctness of their listed property." Mr. Lisk is a little foggy in his English, but his meaning is quite clear, and he sensibly declares that "this mode of assessment is all wrong." What do our readers suppose is the remedy Mr. Lisk proposes? It is to exempt land entirely from taxation and assess improvements and personal property alone. Of course he suggests new and drastic methods for ascertaining the amount of bonds and mortgages, etc., held by each individual, and equally, of course, fails to remember that those concerned have a perfect right to remove themselves and their possessions out of any State adopting such a law. Having started out by showing that personal property can not be equitably taxed, he insists that it alone shall be taxed. The Peoria Journal sapiently remarks that "it will be observed that the writer does not espouse the theories espoused by Henry George, but, on the contrary, takes just the opposite view." Yes, this will be observed.

The Single Tax in Minneapolis, Minn.

C. J. Buell, of Minneapolis, writing to the Standard, says: The single tax is moving right along here. The fact that Mayor P. B. Winston has joined our league has caused considerable comment in the newspapers. Very many of our leading business men here are single taxers; while as to the masses of the people, I have very little doubt that they would give a large majority for the single tax, if the matter could be presented to them on its merits. In the meantime we are trying to so amend the constitution that the people of any country or city, or of the State at large, can vote upon the matter. There are a good many single taxers in the Legislature. The entire Democratic contingent from this county—nineteen in number—with one possible exception, will favor our bill, and one of the two Republicans will also favor us. Mayor Stivers, of Brainard, who is in the House; also John Sheets, of Todd County, Mr. Bull, of Wright County, and John A. Keyes, of Winona, are single taxers. It was Keyes who put through the Australian ballot law two years ago, and he is now at work on a bill to apply the reform to the entire State. I don't know how many other single taxers there may be in the House, but our bill is so framed that any opposition to it has got to deny the Democratic principle of local self-government. We have great hopes of being able to carry the measure through.

The Single Tax Principle.

The single tax idea is steadily commending itself to earnest thinking men. It is a rank injustice that a man should hold property vacant, with nominal taxes, and gain the increment of value produced by the improvements made by his neighbors, who pay taxes upon those improvements. The bed rock of taxation is this: no tax on the products of labor. This principle is world-wide. It applies with equal force to the town, the State, the Nation, the world. By its adoption labor would receive a healthy stimulus, and would create wealth as never before. Throughout the world the burdens of taxation have fallen upon labor, and in all forms of indirect taxation the burden falls with almost equal weight upon all, regardless of their circumstances. But place this burden upon land values only and at once the basis of taxation becomes absolutely equitable, land speculation becomes unprofitable, and the inducements to labor to place improvements upon the land and to advance to its more general ownership are vastly multiplied.—Grand Rapids Building and Realty.

WHEN land increases in value it does not mean that its owner has added to the general wealth. The owner may never have seen the land or done aught to improve it. He may, and often does, live in a distant city or in another country.—Social Problems.

ELISHA'S DEFENDERS.

LESSON XII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 22.

Text of the Lesson, II Kings vi, 8-18. Commit Verses, 15-17—Golden Text, II Kings vi, 16—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

8. "Then the king of Syria warred against Israel, and took counsel with his servants, saying, In such and such a place shall be my camp."

Between the story of Naaman and Gehazi and this lesson the Holy Spirit has written the record of a house building near Jordan by the sons of the prophets, and the miraculous recovery of a lost ax, from which we see the need, humanly speaking, of the money which Naaman offered Elisha; but the prophet prefers to rely wholly and only upon the God of Israel.

9. "And the man of God sent unto the king of Israel, saying, Beware that thou pass not such a place, for thither the Syrians are come down."

How often we are reminded that "All things are naked and opened unto the eyes of Him with whom we have to do," and that "The eyes of the Lord are in every place beholding the evil and the good" (Heb. iv, 13; Prov. xv, 3)! But here is wondrous grace and continued grace to a wicked man. The king of Israel was Jehoran, son of Ahab, and he wrought evil in the sight of the Lord, cleaving unto the sins of Jeroboam, the son of Nebat (chap. iii, 1-3), and yet this is not the first time that God has shown him kindness through Elisha.

10. "And the king of Israel sent to the place which the man of God told him and warned him of, and saved himself there, not once, nor twice."

"God hath spoken once; twice have I heard this, that power belongeth unto God," and this power is continually being put forth on behalf of sinful man to bring back his soul from the pit, but though God speaketh once—yea, twice—yet man perceiveth it not (Ps. lxii, 11; Job xxxiii, 14, 29).

11. "Therefore the heart of the king of Syria was sore troubled for this thing."

It was not his sins that troubled him, but the fact that he could not catch his prey, and that his enemy so successfully eluded him.

12. "Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words that thou speakest in thy bedchamber."

Like the servants of Naaman, these servants seem wiser than their master, for "Great men are not always wise" (Job xxxii, 9).

13. "And he said, Go and spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him."

The Lord so effectually hid Elijah that Ahab and all his searchers could not find him anywhere in all the land (I Kings xviii, 10). He also hid Baruch and Jeremiah so that their enemies could not find them (Jer. xxxvi, 26). Yet this unbeliever thinks to capture one who could say of God, "Thou art my hiding place; Thou shalt preserve me from trouble; Thou shalt compass me about with songs of deliverance" (Ps. xxxii, 7). "The wicked watcheth the righteous and seeketh to slay him, but the Lord will not leave him in his hand" (Ps. xxxvii, 32-33).

"And it was told him saying, Behold, he is in Dothan."

14. "Therefore sent he thither horses and chariots and a great host, and they came by night and compassed the city about."

Surely they had their man now, and escape was impossible. Thus it seemed to human eyes.

15. "And when the servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, an host compassed the city both with horses and chariots."

While Elisha slept the enemy encompassed him about, but Elisha's God neither slumbers nor sleeps, and Elisha rested in Him, and feared no evil. His servant, however, had not the faith of his master, and we may imagine his fears as this sight met his eyes. The host of Syrians was real and formidable, and there was evidently no way of deliverance.

"And his servant said unto him, Alas, my master! how shall we do?"

He probably felt something like Israel when they saw the hosts of Pharaoh pursuing them, the mountains on either side of them and the sea before them (Ex. xiv).

16. "And he answered, Fear not."

From Gen. xv, 1, to Rev. i, 17 how often that precious word "Fear not" has stilled the troubled soul! But before it can give peace it must be spoken by one who has some ground and authority for saying it.

"They that be with us are more than they that be with them."

What is it that Elisha sees that his servant cannot see? Is he giving utterance to a hope or to the assurance of a reality? We shall see that he means just what he says and is fully persuaded of every word of it.

17. "And Elisha prayed and said, Lord, I pray thee, open his eyes that he may see."

What a simple prayer, how short, how comprehensive! No preliminaries and no conclusion, not even an amen; just a single petition, asking as from a familiar friend for just what he wanted. My soul says, "Lord Jesus, ask the Father for me that my eyes may by the Holy Spirit be opened to behold wondrous things out of Thy word." And I expect He will. Thanking Him for what we have seen, let us expect more light every time we open His Word.

"And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man, and he saw; and behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha."

Now we know why Elisha said, Fear not, and why he said to his servant that their helpers were more numerous than the enemy. Let no one dare to explain away these unseen realities of God's love and care and power.

18. "And when they came down to him Elisha prayed unto the Lord and said, Smite this people, I pray thee, with blindness."

Another brief prayer; a single petition. Can this man ask and receive anything he desires? A river divided, a spring healed, oil multiplied, a Son given, life from the dead, food multiplied, a leper healed, a man made leprous, iron to swim, eyes opened to see angels, eyes dimmed to see not at all or to see wrongly? How has he obtained this power? With whom is he in partnership?

"And He smote them with blindness, according to the word of Elisha.

So did the angels to the men of Sodom (Gen. xix, 11). In Him we live and move and have our being. In His hand is our breath and all our ways (Acts xvii, 28; Dan. v, 23). He says: "I am the Lord, and there is none else. I form the light and create darkness. I make peace and create evil. I the Lord do all these things" (Isa. xlv, 6, 7). He changes not. He is no respecter of persons. Every redeemed soul is a member of His body; but where is the power of God that ought to be seen in every believer?

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT
Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.
"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton N. Y."
REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure d The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.
"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years, and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain 9 years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.
There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.
The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.
The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

Sold by J. S. Kinney, Tecumseh.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years.
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

EDUCATIONAL DEMANDS OF TO-DAY.

Paper Read at the Farmers' Institute in Tecumseh by Mrs. F. C. Rector.

Are the educational demands of to-day greater than years ago, when we who are now middle-aged were young and attending the schools of the country? The unanimous answer is, Yes! Why is this? At that time the majority of people received only what at this time would be called a primary education; or, in other words, received their education in the district schools. Perhaps one or two favored ones in a family received a higher education by being "sent away" to school for two or three terms, or possibly to college. These boys and girls grew up to manhood and womanhood, became honest, honored citizens; but, are they satisfied that their children shall receive only similar advantages? No, the great aim of their lives is that their children shall have greater advantages and receive a liberal education, if no other heritage.

This shows that we live in a progressive age, and are filled with the spirit of the times. The masses are becoming more intelligent, and are reaching forward and upward for enlightenment and broader culture.—Among the demands of progress, education stands in the front rank and its demands are many. It demands, first, absolutely free use of its advantages for all classes, irrespective of nationality, sex or age.

There is no excuse for any person of ordinary intelligence to grow up without a fair education, as the public schools are free, and in many places the text books are provided; and if any children do not participate in these advantages it is because of wilful neglect on the part of parent or guardian. It is a wise law that makes education compulsory under the age of fourteen. This is one of the demands of education, and yet, within three miles of the village of Tecumseh this law is openly disobeyed.

A second demand is for thorough, earnest, live, progressive teachers. We want teachers who are determined to make their work successful, in the highest sense. This does not mean that they lead their pupils through the greatest number of text books in a given time, or have crammed the brains with a great number of abstract ideas or the memory with dates in chronological order. We want teachers that teach, not merely hear recitations. There is a vast difference between teaching and hearing recitations. A person may take a book and ask the stated questions, and if the pupil is good at memorizing and recites promptly, he will be marked ten—meaning to the pupil perfect lessons—when in fact he knows very little about the subject. A teacher must be thoroughly prepared and familiar with every point and connection of a subject before coming before the pupils, and must be able to lead the pupils to reason about the subject for themselves. How often do we hear pupils reply to a chance question: "the books said so," showing readily that they have only been memorizing. When a district is unfortunate in securing one of these mechanical "machines" very little time wants to be lost in discharging him or her as the case may be. When a teacher is at her boarding place promptly after school hours and does not look over any books, or do any studying, and does not leave until near the school hour in the morning, it is quite evident the district is paying too much for "value received," and education demands that such persons be stricken from the list of teachers.

If a girl wants or expects to teach she should prepare herself with that purpose steadily in view. Too many girls only want to teach as an easy or highly respectable means of earning money, or to tide over a few years awaiting the "coming man."

To the earnest faithful teacher there is no nobler calling, and the work they are doing cannot be estimated by dollars and cents, but by the influence they are exerting and will continue to exert on the lives with which they come in contact, not knowing now how much it means.

Space and time will permit me to speak of only one more demand: that is co-operation of officers and patrons with the faithful teachers.

The teachers may be willing and conscientiously perform their part but their efficiency will fall short of the ideal result unless assisted in all reasonable ways by those for whom they labor. Tax-payers should be willing that comfortable, well ventilated rooms be provided, in addition all needed or useful apparatus; then it should be the duty of the officers to see that they are procured and the houses kept in good repair.

When this is attended to, don't think your duty is ended and never interest yourselves farther. Get acquainted with the teachers and know what they are doing, and if they want to introduce a new method or measure don't acquiesce too easily or disapprove without investigation.

Know what your teachers are doing and if they are progressive keep pace with them and give them encouragement, work with them for the good of the pupils and ask yourselves seriously: "Are we meeting as we should the educational demands of to-day?"

HOW TO RAISE TOMATOES.

The following letter is clipped from the Adrian Times and we can state that the man who wrote it is justly regarded as an expert in growing vegetables and garden truck.

TECUMSEH, Mich March 16, 1891.—Editor times: As your city is the headquarters for several large canning establishments, perhaps a few hints on growing a crop of Tomatoes, may be of interest to your readers, especially as this is the season of the year to lay the successful foundation for a large crop. Although raising tomatoes as a whole has not been very remunerative to a large number of growers, so far as I have observed, for the past three or four years, nevertheless I have grown a full crop each year, or from three hundred to six six hundred bushels per acre. I grow for the local market, but see no reason why my method could not be adopted for field culture of ten to fifteen acres.

The first essential point is a store of large, stocky, hardy plants, as no full crop can be grown unless the plants are very large and early. The seed should be sown quite thickly, in rows, in a close, warm hot bed, as soon as March 20th, and not later than the 25th. As soon as the plants show the rough leaves they should be "picked out" in a mild hot-bed, in good soil, and not in boxes or flats. I take out every alternate row the first time, and if plants are in danger of getting two "long-legged," they must be "banked up." Do not water plants too much, as they are apt to grow to top. If in danger of getting too large, they must be transplanted a second time to a cold frame and given more room. Plants like those will cost about $15 per acre, but they will pay in the end.

A word as to preparing, manuring and marking the ground. The ground should be plowed early in May, leveled, rolled and top dressed with ten to fifteen loads of fine manure, and twenty-five to forty bushels of ashes. I use a manure spreader. I find the tomato throws out small roots along the stem, and must feed from the surface, and I mark out the rows 4x6 feet, so as to have a small alley or path to walk in when picking.

In planting be sure to wrap each plant with a small piece of paper, say 2x3 inches, to beat out the cut worm. As to time of planting, I have found about May 25th, or as soon as corn was up, to be about right; at all events plant as early as possible after the weather is warm.

ABNER WILSON.

ALMOST A FATAL MISTAKE.

Mr. John Hollister came home from Toledo Saturday night, very ill from morphine poisoning. He had been suffering from a bad cold, and stepped into a drug store last Thursday on the corner of St. Clair and Adams street, in that city, and asked for five grains of quinine. The druggist gave him the medicine, which he swallowed.

"That isn't quinine, is it?" asked Mr. Hollister.

"No sir," said the druggist, "you asked for morphine."

"There is no time for argument," said Mr. Hollister, "phone for a physician."

All haste was made, antidotes and a stomach pump were used, and by Friday morning he was wl out of danger. Although suffering somewhat yet from its effects, Mr. Hollister expects to recover fully in a few days. Mr. H. states that no action will be taken in the matter, as it is a question in law who is right, he or the clerk in the drug store. The firm took excellent care of him, and did everything in their power to make him comfortable.—Adrian Times.

FARMERS' UNION.

The Farmers' Union held the last meeting of the season at the home of Mr. John VanVleet on Friday evening, March 13th. Notwithstanding the stormy day and bad roads, about eighty members were present and after a social, and maple-syrup supper, the meeting was called to order and a short literary program given.

Necessary business was transacted, a vote of thanks given the officers and with hearty good wishes from all, the meeting adjourned. All seemed reluctant to go, as the meetings have been both pleasant and profitable and without doubt, during the past winter the Farmers' Union has done better work than ever before in its history. As they separate for another summer, it is with deeply grateful hearts that, although there have been marriages and removals, not once has death entered our pleasant circle since its organization in February 1887.

NORMAL NOTES.

The Senior and Junior classes have organized and elected officers.

Participants in Senior class day exercises have been appointed by the faculty.

The participants in the Oratorical contest to be held in May have been appointed.

One of the finest musical entertainments that has occurred in Normal Hall this year was given by the Normal choir Wednesday evening, February 25th.

Appropriate exercises were held in Normal hall Monday, Feb. 23rd, in commemoration of Washington's birthday. The Normal choir furnished the music, and members of the faculty and representatives of the societies took part in the exercises.

The next "Public" which occurs April 3rd, will represent a mock trial before a circuit court. The charge against the defendant being "The Larceny of a Kiss." The faculty will act as jury, and lawyers and witnesses are chosen from the different societies.

Rev. Thos. Dowling's lecture was one of the most interesting that has come on the course this year. The speaker proved himself not only an able orator but a genuine wit and humorist. His speech was full of excellent advice to young men and women, and valuable suggestions to parents.

The Normal Athletic Association is making preparations for field-day exercises to which will be admitted participants from the University and other colleges of the State. The N. A. A. has some members which are among the first in the State in running, wrestling, hammer and shot throwing, etc., and those who rob them of their field-day prizes will have to be far above the common class. The association has organized strong base ball and foot ball teams, and the classes in club and dumb-bell swinging are arranging to give an entertainment of a gymnastic character sometime in the future.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The Gen. Eng. Class IV finished their work in Macbeth.

Quite a number of scholars have been on the sick list the past week.

The girls will show what they can do on Friday, March 20th. We all wish them good luck.

The Grecian History Class have now commenced their final review. We express our thanks to Prof. Skinner and the Y. M. B. A. for the aid they gave the Lyceum last Friday.

Last Friday week at 2:30 the people began to assemble in the room to listen to a Lyceum program. At 2:45 the Lyceum was called to order and the program neatly carried out. Everybody thought it was the best of the season and all went home well pleased.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many costomers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, Knightstown Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction." Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

ONE DOLLAR WELL INVESTED.

If you have bad breath, constipation, pain in the small of the back, discolored skin, nervousness, or dizziness your only wise course is to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. Daniel Bangs and wife, of Idaho, and Mrs. James, of Hudson, Mich., are visiting the Bangs family and at M. Smeltzer's this week. Mr. Bangs was a former resident of Tecumseh. He emigrated to California in 1851, and from there to Idaho in 1878. This is his first visit to Michigan in forty years.

"It is of no use to try to report Conwell's lectures. They are unique. Unlike anything or anyone else. Filled with good sense, brilliant with new suggestions and inspiring always to noble life and deeds, they always please with their wit. The reader of his addresses does not know the full power of the man."—Springfield Union.

The new semi-weekly edition of the Free Press is bound to become exceedingly popular. It contains the cream of the daily issues and is sold at the remarkably low price of $1.50 per year. Hundreds of farmers and laborers throughout the State who are unable to take a daily will find this semi-weekly edition to be exactly what they need.

Last Monday morning Mrs. P. S. DePuy received the sad news of the death of her sister, Mrs. J. S. Pittenger, of Wellsville, N. Y. Mrs. Pittenger had many friends here who will regret to learn of her sudden death, but who will recall with pleasure her dignified bearing and many social qualities. For more than thirty-five years she was a member of the First Baptist Church of the city where she lived and was always prominently identified with the society of which she was an active and honored member. Besides a husband, and the sister who is now the only surviving member of her father's family, Mrs. Pittenger left two sons, W. E. Pittenger, cashier of the Bank of Hornellsville, Hornellsville, N. Y., and F. H. Pittenger, conductor on the Kansas City & Santa Fe R. R.

Mr. W. G. Blymyer, of Defiance, O. has taken a position in the HERALD office. He has had over twenty years experience in the business, and has the reputation of being an excellent "all-around" printer. We believe he will prove a valuable acquisition to the HERALD force.

C. F. Patterson's lease of the Lilley House expired Tuesday night, and he stepped out to make room for the new manager, H. S. Lee. Charley has developed a remarkable talent for running a hotel and we regret to have him leave the hotel. The many old friends of Dr. Patterson have noted his success with feelings of pride and will extend to him a hearty God speed wherever his lot may be cast. We trust he may remain in Tecumseh.

A letter from Rev. Peter Sharp, who is now living at San Jose, Cal., says: "I and my son, W. F. Sharp, have sold our lands on the Santa Cruz Mountains, and purchased a house and some lots bounded on the west bank of the Grandalupe River, a stream about as important as the Kidron brook passing between Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives. We have the benefit of free delivery of mails. The city is well provided with schools, having six or seven large buildings well located and furnished. A State Normal School and the M. E. Pacific University are located in the northern part of the city. A most massive Cathedral and other churches are owned by the Catholics. The M. E. Church wields a decided influence. The M. E. Church South have a stately church, so have the Presbyterians and Baptists magnificent churches. The Christian and Free Methodist churches are well represented here. The Salvation Army have Barracks and hold the fort in San Jose City."

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Death has again taken from our number a loved and honored member, Mrs. A. D. Hall, whose death occurred February 8th, 1891

We as an organization feel the loss of this friend as she had become endeared to us by long acquaintance and association, and we wish to testify to her worth as a member of our club, and to her high character as a christian woman.

While we mourn her loss in our organization, we would not be unmindful of the greater bereavement to the afflicted family. Therefore,

Resolved, That we cherish the memory of the departed one, and extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband and children.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, and be spread at length upon the records of the club.

UNPARALLELED OFFER TO ALL NEW SUBSCRIBERS TO

THE ARENA,

THE BRILLIANT BOSTON REVIEW.

The Publishers of THE ARENA take pleasure in announcing that they have just perfected arrangements by which they can send free, as a premium to every new subscriber of THE ARENA, the COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE for the ensuing year (old subscribers of the Cosmopolitan must remit fifty cents extra.) This is not only the most liberal offer ever made by a leading review, but

THE COMBINATION IS UNSURPASSED.

THE ARENA, being conceded one of the few really great reviews, is without question the most liberal and progressive leading magazine published; while the Cosmopolitan is a richly illustrated popular family magazine.

The subscription price of THE ARENA is $5.00; that of the Cosmopolitan is $2.40. But for $5.00 we will send The Arena and the Cosmopolitan, postpaid, for one year to new subscribers.

How THE ARENA is regarded by Leading Thinkers.

ALFRED RUSSELL WALLACE, LL. D., F. L. S., Author of "Darwinism," "Malay Archipelago," etc. The Eminent Scientist and Author writes:—

"I think you have succeeded in the very difficult task of improving on all existing literary periodicals. The articles deal with questions of vital interest to every thoughtful person."

Rev. CYRUS A. BARTOL, D. D, the Distinguished New England Clergyman:

"The place that was waiting for a periodical, not only free and able, but catholic and comprehensive,—fair to every thinker and just to all thought, while open to any subject, in which our common humanity was concerned,—in my judgment you fill."

OPINIONS OF CRITICAL JOURNALS.

"Full of mental stimulus, of breadth and vitality."—Boston Traveler.
"The Arena is a fine magazine of the best writings."—N. O. Picayune.

"At the head of magazine literature of a superior sort, and is more particularly designed for educated minds."—New York Times.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—This great offer—The Arena and the Cosmopolitan Magazine combined is only made to new subscribers of both magazines. Old subscribers must remit $3.50 when sending their order. Address THE ARENA PUBLISHING COMPANY, Copley Square, Boston, Mass.

JUDGE LYNCH

People Take Outraged Justice in Hand

And Breaking Into the Parish Prison,

Take the Trembling Men From Jail,

Stringing Them to Lamp Posts and Trees.

They Then go After the Private Detective

Who is Charged With Bribing the Jury,

A MEMBER OF THE POLICE FORCE IN THE MOB.

Chief Hennessey's Foul Assassination Avenged—Gun Stores Sacked to Arm the People, Who Make a Complete Job of It Without Even Wearing Masks.

NEW ORLEANS, March 14.—The outraged citizens have appealed the case of the accused Italian murderers of Chief of Police Hennessey to Judge Lynch, and the latest reports are that he has passed a summary sentence. At 10:30, it is reported, a crowd moved on a double quick to the parish prison where the prisoners were held on a further charge of conspiracy and that at eleven o'clock entrance to the prison was effected and the accused summarily shot to death.

11:20.—After forcing entrance to the prison the mob made their way to the cells of the accused and shot Scaffedi, Macheka, Matranga, Politz, Bugnetto, Monnestery and Marchisi. Scaffedi and Politz were afterwards hanged at the corner of St. Anne and Liberty streets, and Bagnetti was strung up on Orleans street near Liberty. The mob is still stringing bodies up. Hundreds have gone in search of D. C. Omally, the head of the private detective agency, accused of fixing the jury. Sergeant Heveron of the police dressed as a citizen and assisting the lynchers, received a dangerous stray shot in the neck. The mob first approached the front door of the prison but found it held by the sheriff. It then repaired to the back entrance and little resistance was offered by the police to its further progress. The mob was quiet but determined, and no masks were used. The city is in a foment.

After completing its work of vengence on the Italians, the mob marched to Canal street and disbanded. Another mass meeting will be held at Clay Circle at four o'clock to decide what shall be done with Omally, the private detective who is accused of bribing the jury.

The Latest Details.

NEW ORLEANS, March 15.—Never was this city in such a spasm of excitement as it has been since 10 o'clock Saturday morning. At that hour a mass meeting was held, by published notices at the Clay statue. Fully five thousand people were gathered there and the streets for many blocks in the vicinity were filled with a mass of people so dense that the street cars could not get through them.

W. S. Parkerson and John C. Wickliffe well known citizens were plainly leading spirits, but little was said or done except in a riotous and boisterous way. Finally calls for speeches from Parkerson and Wickliff were made and they spoke of the acquittal of the Italians, in a conservation way. At the conclusion of the speeches however the crowd made a rush for the jail. The sheriff was expecting them and had the front gate barricaded. They passed ronnd to the rear door and here found little resistance. On entering the jail they made their way to the cells of the Italians and hanged them.

THE CORONER INVESTIGATES.

Coroner Lemonnier reached at the prison at half past twelve. He first viewed the bodies of those lying in the yard. W. E. Stansbury, W. J. Leppert, John Hurter, W. J. Gahan and Will Porter were empannelled as his jury.

Rocco Geracci was first viewed. But one wound was found. This was in the chest and caused hemorrhage which resulted in death. Next came Peter Monasterio. He was found to have a gunshot wound in the back of the head and a bruise on the neck. Charles Terahia was found to have received ten gunshot wounds in the chest, one gunshot wound on the left side of the face and gunshot wounds on back of left shoulder and in the back. Jim Caruso had numerous wounds on the anterior portion of body, one wound in the face, one in the neck, nine in the chest, twelve in the abdomen, five in right thigh, four in the left thigh.

Frank Romero, gunshot wound on head above the forehead. All shot lodged in the head, and the skull inside is completely shattered. This completed the inquest in the yard.

The bodies inside the prison was then examined. Antonio Scoffedi had a gunshot wound in the brain. Joseph P. Macheca had not a single bullet wound in him. His face was swollen, and his flesh had a bluish tint. He had evidently been clubbed to death with the butt-ends of pistols and rifles. The coroner did not finish his examination of Macheca's body. He will hold an autopsy on it later. Machesi was found to be still alive. He was just as good as dead though, as evidenced by a hole as large as a silver quarter in the head. The coroner said he could live but a short time. The jury will render a verdict when the coroner has completed his examination of Macheca's remains.

Antonio Bagnetto was left hanging about an hour and a half and then taken down by the police. The coroner found that death had been caused by strangulation. Manuel Politz was also cut down by the police. He had been hanged to a lamp-post and his body riddled with bullets. The verdict in his case was death from gun-shot wounds in the head and chest; there were also marks of strangulation around his neck.

Fled the Town.

NEW ORLEANS, March 15.—The members of the jury and Derective Omalley could not be found by the crowd while in its ugly humor, or it would have fared badly with them. Though large crowds were on the streets last night, the troubled seemed to be all over.

The Italian consul refuses to divulge what action, if any, he will take. The prison was surrounded all day by curious crowds, but the police maintained order. Some of the bodies were recovered by friends this evening. Caruso and Comitez leave wives, but no children, while Romero and Macheca leave families. At the meeting of the stock exchange members, held Saturday afternoon, the action of foreman Seligman of the jury, who is a member of the exchange, was discussed. As a result, resolutions expelling him were unanimously adopted.

Italy Talks of War.

ROME, March 16.—The Populo Romano says, editorially, it is astonished at the New Orleans lynchings, and declares the authorities of that city are lacking in foresight. It also recalls the fact that Italy, out of regard for the friendly power, has already refrained from sending an iron clad to the mouth of the Mississippi.

There Was Bribery.

NEW ORLEANS, March 16.—One of the chief causes of public indignation in connection with the Mafia trial has been the belief that the society depended on bribery to secure the release of the accused. It has been asserted that $75,000 or $100,000 was contributed by Italians all over the country to be used as a corruption fund. Thousands of dollars, it was said, came from Chicago, New York and other cities where the Italians are congregated in large numbers. It is certain that the poor Italian laborers in this vicinity were taxed $2 a piece as a contribution to the defense fund, and that there was no lack of money in the treasury of the society.

Viewed From New York.

NEW YORK, March 16.—General Riva, Italian consul in this city, declines to be interviewed concerning the trouble at New Orleans. He, however, announced through the vice consul, that as a representative of the Italian government, he greatly regretted the unfortunate occurrence. A big Italian indignation meeting will probably be held Wednesday evening at Tammany hall. In the meantime all festivities will be suspended. Tonight a meeting of the Victor Emanuel society will be held when the speakers for the mass meeting will be appointed. Many prominent members of the Italian colony will be present.

The Post editorially says: "The New Orleans affair is a disgrace to the rest of country. The assassination of the chief of police last October was undoubtedly the result of the same social conditions which caused the failure of the jury trial and the massacre of the acquitted prisoners in the jail. In such social conditions men's reliance on law for protection is necessarily small."

The Commercial Advertiser says: "The leaders of the mob were not representative citizens. Far from it. Cotton is the business that engages the leading merchants of this city; but no prominent cotton broker, nor any officer of the cotton exchange, is concerned in the massacre. Sugar is the staple next in importance; but if any sugar merchant's name appears it is not recognizable at this distance."

LITTLE SICILY

Talks About Vengeance and Marquis Di Rundini.

NEW YORK, March 16.—A prominent Italian interviewed here today, said: "The men who were murdered by the mob in New Orleans were Sicilians. It will be uncomfortable for the leaders of the mob to know that the Marquis Di Rundini, the new prime minister of Italy, is a Sicilian, and Sicilian vengeance is the common bond of every man born on the island of Sicily. The killing of the men who had been declared innocent by a jury will not be passed over lightly by the Italian government if they were yet Italian citizens and their friends make complaint to the Italian authorities."

VERY WELL SAID.

An English Newspaper Utters Some Wholesome Truths.

LONDON, March 16.—The St. James Gazette, commenting on the New Orleans lynchings, says; "No reasonable man can doubt that the Italians acquitted of Hennessey's death had guilty knowledge of it, or that the verdict was an infamous one, whether it was bought by a price, as the lynchers declare, or was brought about by the personal cowardice of the jurors, who feared the revenge of the Mafia. The New Orleans lynchings discredit the people of the United States, who pride themselves on being shrewd business like people, yet sit quietly by while the judge and jury carry on a traffic in the sales of acquittals, as if they were bales of cotton."

The Situation Today.

NEW ORLEANS, March 16.—The usual quiet prevails throughout the city this morning, but it was of a kind that is ominous of danger. On one side is ranged the outraged community which, having tasted blood, is now ready for a like action if rendered necessary by any action of the friends of the Mafia. It is true, Saturday's work of vengeance was directed by reputable citizens whose lives heretofore have been unstained by any violation of law, but the city is now in such a state of excitement that any unscrupulous adventurer can, in the name of the outraged populace, lead a howling mob of thousands to further deeds of bloodshed. The Crescent City is as if convulsed by an earthquake and not even the most sanguine dare hope the end has come. From all over United States, Italians have received rousing messages from their fellow countrymen, tending further to inflame their racial hatred, and an uprising on their part is freely predicted. The police force is inadequate, but to make matters worse, most of its members are in active sympathy with the work of Judge Lynch, many, in fact, having been participants therein.

Lying in Ashes.

The Stricken City of Syracuse as It Is.

A Raging Fire is Urged on by Raging Wind

Until the Fire Department is Quite Helpless.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS OF PROPERTY CONSUMED.

Is Already Reduced to Worthless Ashes—Aid is Sent to the Suffering City From All Around.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 14.—Two great fires are raging in different places in the business part of the city, the loss from which will be hundreds of thousands of dollars. There is a strong wind blowing and the fire department is practically powerless to control the flames. Departments at Oswego, Auburn and Utica have been telegraphed for. Three entire business blocks are threatened with destruction. The office and building of the Syracuse Journal is in ruins. The Hogan block, West Fayette street, is burned to the ground. The Montgomery flats, the largest apartment house in the city, is at this hour (9 o'clock) a raging furnace. The Vanderbilt and Candee hotels, both of which are contiguous to the ruined Journal building are in great danger of destruction. The first fire started at 6 o'clock in the wholesale district of the city. Besides the Hogan block, the new Fay building and the Loomis block are destroyed. Second fire broke out at 7:30 in Roscoe's wholesale fruit warehouse. The loss is estimated at $600,000.

11:30—The cupola of the Montgomery flats has fallen in. The Candee hotel is still burning. St. Paul's cathedral and the Grand opera house are threatened. There is a great lack of water. The high winds still prevail. Several fire engines from neighboring cities have arrived.

List of the Individual Losses.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 15.—The principal losses by the great fire are as follows: The Hogan block, a six story building, was first burned. The centre store was occupied by Hier & Lighton, cigar manufacturers, and the next by Maurice P. Walshe, hardware. The Hogans loss on the block is $40,000; insurance $25,000. Heir & Lighton, loss $18,000, insurance $12,000. Maurice P. Walshe, loss $15 000, insurance $10,000. The four story building next east was the next burned. It was also owned by Hogan, and was valued at $9,000, and the insurance is $6,000. Cahill Bros., bakers, lose $2,500, with $1,400 insurance. The Alsopp furnace company, loss $10,- nearly covered by insurance. Chryst & Sehl have $20,000 insurance, and claim that their loss will exceed that. Justin Seuberts cigar factory was damaged by water. His stock was valued at $100,000, with $75,000 insurance. The United States hotel, owned by Daniel O'Keefe, loss $10,000. The Van Rensselaer block, owned by William Ayres, and the Seneca house, loss on buildings $60,000, insurance $22,000. Several tenants lost small amounts each. David Davis owned the next building east, and the loss is put at $20,000. John F. Kaufman owned the three-story brick building next. His loss is $15,000. I. J. Davis, broker, loss $6,000, insurance $1,500. W. C. Tucker, furniture, loss $10,000. The brownstone Fay block, loss $20,000 partly insured. The Syracuse Supply company, loss $35,000, insured for $35,000. The branch of Park Brothers, of Pittsburg, had a stock of $12,000, insurance $4,000. Other losses here amount to $50,000. In the Montgomery street fire the blocks burned were the Journal, the Roscoe, the Yates and Montgomery flats, and a part of the Candee house. Occupants of these buildings lost about $15,000, partially insured. Kinney and Doolittle, liquors, lose $20,000, insurance $10,000. The heaviest loss in the East Washington street fire is on the Montgomery. The buildings were owned by the Yates estate, and the loss is put at $300,000, with insurance of $100,000. The hundred tenants lose $50,000, partly insured. The Journal company estimates its loss at $60,000, with $45,000 insurance. The Christian Cook block was valued at $25,000, and the insurance is $8,0000. B. W. Roscoe, owner of the Roscoe block puts his loss at $55,000, with $47,000 insurance. Mr. Roscoe is the city treasurer. George S. Friend, house furnishhing goods, loses $60,000, with $40,000 insurance. Other losses by this fire are about $50,000.

A BATTLE IN CHILI.

Colonel Robles Killed—Several Hundred Wounded.

BUENOS AYRES, March 16.—Details received here of the recent battle at Chili say: Colonel Robles, who commanded the government troops, on the 6th instant, being short of provisions, rashly abandoned the strong position on Mount Sebastopol, and with 1,200 infantry, twenty-five cavalry and a few guns attacked a few of 2,500 rebels. The enemy, by a decoy truce for parley, opened a fearful fire at close quarters, killing or wounding two-thirds of the government troops. Colonel Robles was shot in the foot early in the battle. After the bullet had been extracted he was taken inside and placed in an ambulance. The rebels captured the ambulance and the colonel was fired at by the rebels, being riddled with eleven balls, besides being hacked with bayonets and indescribably mutilated. A general massacre of wounded officers ensued. Of the wounded men 264 were allowed to proceed to Valparaiso, but permission was refused to send the body of Colonel Robley here. The loss of the insurgents is estimated 300 killed and 400 wounded.

President Balmaceda admits the gravity of the disaster, which places Tarapaca in the hands of the insurgents. The president says, however, the government has 30,000 troops and an ample supply of funds. The future scene of operations probably will be nearer Valparaiso.

Death of a New York Judge.

NEW YORK, March 16.—Judge John R. Brady, of the Supreme Court, died suddenly this morning from the bursting of a blood vessel in the brain.

SPECIMEN CASES.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism, his Stomach was disordered, his Liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large Fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by J. J. Orr.

THE FARMERS PAGE.

WHAT HAS THE ALLIANCE DONE?

It is always wise to stop for a time and look back over any work or movement and get a full and accurate view of what has been done or passed. In this way we become able to understand what remains to be done or passed. It is well for Alliancemen to review the progress already made in order that they may accurately measure the distance that lies betwixt them and the goal for which they started. We intend to point out in this article some of the things that have already been accomplished.

The Alliance movement has organized the farmers of thirty-three States into a compact mass of virtue and integrity, to be wielded against every species of political and social abuse which threatens the perpetuity of our institutions of freedom, or the happiness of the people. No man to-day dares to deny that the farmers of this country are united to a man upon the principles and plans of governmental and social reform which the age and civilization to which we belong demands. No one who knows anything about it will dispute the statement that the Alliance has united as grand a yeomanry ar ever blessed the world with its toil for the defense of the essential doctrines of Christianity. These millions of farmers are united to make it known, now and evermore, that man, simple, unadorned man is, and was intended by the Almighty God to be, the primal thing, the highest value, in this present scheme of things.

The Alliance movement has shown the farmers how to sell their produce in the highest markets, and how to buy the commodities they need in the cheapest market. With their purchasing agencies, their warehouses, their manufactories and their combinations and co-operative concerns, they have cheapened almost everything they buy.

And this cheapening of commodities has not inured to the good of the farmers alone; but it has brought blessings and the light of hope into thousands upon thousands of the homes of those who are not farmers. All classes are learning through this organization of the farmers that they are not the natural property of the merchants and factors and middlemen and speculators; but men, with the instincts and aspirations of men.

The Alliance movement has put in motion the highest educational forces that ever started in the same length of time in the history of the world. The poor words we are now writing will be read and pondered by more than sixty thousand free men and women before the coming of another Sabbath day. And the readers of this paper are but a handful in comparison with the vast multitudes who have been set to reading and studying all sorts of political, social, economic and religious questions. Surely we have started, and we are pressing on, the most wonderful educational movement the world has ever seen.

The Alliance movement has done more to destroy sectionalism and to reunite an unhappily divided country, within the last two years, than has been done by all the philanthropists of the country in the last quarter of a century. What may we not expect in the way of future healing, when Kansas and South Carolina drench out the fires of political hate in the tears of mutual forgiveness, and lock their hands together and move onward for the accomplishment of a common purpose; when Ingalls and Hampton, the representatives of the opposing forces of spite and revenge, are forced to sit down in the ashes of their own political ruin and scrape themselves with potsherds!

Finally, the Alliance movement has elected several State legislatures, has sent quite a number of able men into both branches of the National Congress, and has scared some hundreds of thousands of politicians to within an inch of their lives.

These are some of the things already done. We may innocently congratulate ourselves upon our success. But much remains to be done. The territory we have won must be guarded; and the doctrine of "equal rights for all and special privileges for none"—the doctrine of the universal brotherhood of man, with its corollary, the universal Fatherhood of God—must be preached in the regions beyond and all men must be made to feel that they "are, and of right ought to be, free and equal." To help this work on in all possible ways has been, and will continue to be, the delightful work of THE PROGRESSIVE FARMER.

The above article from the Progressive Farmer, the leading organ of the Alliance in the South, is good reading for the farmer of this latitude.

A DELUSION.

People Who Believe That the Tariff Raises Wages May Find Out Their Mistake.

People who still believe that the tariff raises wages ought to keep their eyes open now; for these are very interesting days in which to learn lessons in tariffs and wages. The papers are full of reports of cases where wages have been reduced in protected industries which got a fresh dose of protection from Dr. McKinley.

An interesting case is that of the reduction of wages and the consequent strike in the potteries of Trenton, N. J. Additional interest is given to this case from the fact that the increased protection given to this industry in 1883 was followed in two years by a reduction of wages. The recent laying on of a higher duty and a reduction of wages following soon after reads like a twice told tale.

The first telling of this story took place before the McKinley committee last winter. Mr. Moses, one of those pottery manufacturers of Trenton, N. J., was the man who told the story. The following extracts from his testimony will show how Mr. Carlisle drew the truth from the reluctant Moses:

Mr. Carlisle—In answer to a question by Governor Gear, you said that if the Mills bill had passed, in your opinion you would have been compelled either to close up your establishment or to reduce wages. Is it not a fact that shortly after the passage of the act of 1883, which increased the duties, you reduced wages at Trenton?

Mr. Moses—No, sir.

Mr. Carlisle—They have never been reduced since 1883?

Mr. Moses—In 1885 there was a reduction submitted to by the men themselves, owing to the reduction made in the price of goods. From 1879 to 1885 there was no reduction of any kind, although the price of goods had been gradually going down. In 1885, about the first of January, we called our men together and held a consultation, and we showed that there was a necessity for a reduction of wages.

Mr. Carlisle—That was less than two years after the act of 1883 took effect. In about two years after that you found you were not able to pay the same wages as you did before that act was passed.

Mr. Moses—Yes, sir, that is true, because the foreign goods of all classes were thrown into our market. Prices of goods fell in the foreign market.

And now for the second telling of the story. This shall also be from a protectionist authority. Here is the story as made up of two paragraphs from the same column of that highest of high tariff organs, the Boston Commercial Bulletin:

The pottery manufacturers of Trenton, N. J., have submitted a schedule of wages to the sanitary ware pressers which means a reduction of 33⅓ per cent.

Nearly 400 potters are on strike in Trenton, N. J., because of the decision to reject the reduction of wages proposed by the manufacturers. The men were willing to continue work at the old scale pending further investigation, but the bosses insisted that the new list was to go into effect, and the men quit work.

Now where is the man who says the tariff raises wages? Let him wake up the tariff and tell it to do its work.

SQUANDERED MILLIONS.

Senator Carlisle Discusses "the Vanishing Surplus"—He Shows a Deficit of $84,000,000 For Next Year—A Tale of Republican Extravagance and High Tariff Taxation.

Everybody has known that the Republican majority in Congress has about succeeded in squandering the great surplus in the Treasury. Everybody has heard intimation, too, that a deficit is likely to take the place of the surplus in the near future. Republican Senators themselves have made public statements which showed that the possibility of a deficit was looming up to disturb the peace of the Republican lawmakers. The quiet haste with which Speaker Reed and the small cabal now running the House of Representatives let the direct tax refunding bill drop was another indication that the bottom of the Treasury would soon be reached.

The exact state of the Treasury and its future condition have thus come to be subjects of speculation and prophecy; but there was no trustworthy information which took account of the future demands upon the Treasury together with its resources for meeting them.

Such a statement has now been made by the most competent authority in public life, Senator Carlisle, of Kentucky. He does this in a striking article in the Forum Magazine for February, entitled "The Vanishing Surplus."

Senator Carlisle finds that the condition of the Treasury at the close of the present fiscal year, June 30, 1891, will be approximately as follows:

ASSETS.

Available cash on hand July 1, 1890, including redemption fund	$111,029,107
Receipts	387,000,000
Total	$498,029,107

LIABILITIES.

Ordinary expenditures	$379,000,000
Redemption of Nation bank notes	22,000,000
Rebate on tobacco and snuff	7,000,000
Purchases of bonds for the sinking fund, and other redemptions of debt, with premiums, as per Secretary's report	110,000,000
Total	$512,000,000

This shows a deficit of $14,000,000 for the year. The account for 1892 will show a much larger deficit. Here is Mr. Carlisle's forecast of the condition of the Treasury at the end of next year:

ASSETS.

Revenues from all sources	$373,000,000

LIABILITIES.

Deficit for year 1891	$ 14,000,000
Estimated ordinary expenditures, according to the Secretary's report	357,852,209
Pension deficiency	25,000,000
Rivers and harbors	10,967,200
Sinking fund	49,224,928
Total	$457,044,387

"This shows a deficit of $84,044,387 on July 1, 1892, if the requirements of the sinking fund law are to be complied, with, or a deficit of $34,819,459 if nothing whatever is to be paid on that account."

While Senator Carlisle does not claim absolute accuracy for these estimates, he gives good reasons for believing that the deficiency will in each case be above rather than below the amounts stated.

Some interesting comparisons are made by Mr. Carlisle to show how rapidly the expenditures of the Government have outstripped the rate at which population has grown. "While our population," he says, "in 1890 was only sixteen times as great as in 1790, our expenditures, excluding all payments upon the interest and principal of the public debt, were more than 130 times as great. In other words, the population increased from 3,929,214 in 1790 to 62,480,540 in 1890, while the ordinary annual expenditures, excluding payments on the principal and interest of the public debt, rose from $1,919,592 to $261,637,303."

Another interesting comparison is the following: "From 1830 to 1840, including the period of the Seminole war, the population increased 32.67 per cent. and the expenditure increased 80 per cent.; from 1840 to 1850, during which time the war with Mexico was commenced and prosecuted to a successful turmination, the population increased 35.87 per cent. and the expenditures increased 53 per cent.; but from 1880 to 1890, a period of profound peace, population increased 24.07 per cent. and expenditures increased 35 per cent. The ordinary expenditures for the current fiscal year, 1891, will be at least 12 per cent. greater than in 1890, although the population, as shown by the recent census, is increasing at a rate of less than 2¼ per cent. per annum."

The record of the Republican party in increasing the expenditures of the Government will be seen from the following figures, which do not include payments on the interest and principal of the public debt:

	Expenditures per capita.
1860	$ 1.90
1880	3.37
1890	4.19

In view of this increased expenditure and the increased tariff taxation which it indicates, Senator Carlisle concludes: "The public peace may be preserved, the rights of person may be scrupulously respected, and ample remedies may be afforded for all injuries inflicted upon the citizen by private individuals, but all this will not make the people prosperous, or permit them to be so, if the Government itself robs one part of them for the purpose of distributing the spoils to another part. Generosity is a commendable virtue, but justice a greater one. It is the confirmed and incurable habit of the party now in power to dispose of the public money in a wasteful and extravagant manner, and there is no reason to suppose that it will cease to pursue this course until the Treasury is exhausted. What was two years ago the richest public treasury in the world, will be substantially bankrupt long before the term of the present Administration shall expire, and then, perhaps, even the executive officers of the Government, who now delight in creating deficiencies to be supplied by additional appropriations, will be willing to assist in devising some plan by which expenditures can be curtailed."

A Protected "Infant."

About five years ago a company with a capital of $75,000 was organized in an American city to manufacture lamp chimneys, lampware and candy jars. This company operates its factories only eleven months in the year, yet it has declared dividends of 20 per cent. every year, besides laying up in five years a surplus fund of $175,000.

That is what protection has done! But the people meanwhile pay for it! The duty on lamp globes, shades and chimneys of glass in the old tariff was 40 to 45 per cent. McKinley raises these duties to 60 per cent. These articles are a part of the manufactures of the great flint glass industry, of which there are some thirty or forty factories in the country.

There is another chapter to this story. A recent dispatch from Pittsburgh, Pa., reports that the flint glass manufacturers of that city as saying that over 50 per cent. of all the producing capacity of the country has been bought up by a flint glass syndicate.

It is the same old tariff story over again. A highly prosperous industry goes to Washington and talks about foreign competition, cheap pauper labor and similar rot; it asks for higher duties and gets them; then comes the final act to the comedy—a trust is formed to gobble up the spoils of McKinleyism.

Getting Ready for Cheap Sugar.

Fully 20,000 tons of bonded Java sugar lie in the warehouses on Mission Rock on the San Francisco Bay. It is the property of Claus Spreckles and will be held there till April 1, when, under the provisions of the McKinley bill, it will be admitted into the country duty free, and when the consumption of sugar in this country will so greatly increase as to make Mr. Spreckels' anticipatory "corner" immensely profitable.

In other words, the sugar tariff is a tax, the removal of which will result in cheaper sugar to the people and in a great saving of expenses to them every year. Spreckels knows the tariff is a tax, and he finds it to his advantage to have a vast quantity of sugar in the Government warehouses ready for his refineries on the first day that the tax is removed.

Sugar has already begun to decline in price; and when all the people of the country buy their sugar at least two cents below the price under the new tariff, will there remain one man in all this broad land so stupid as to ask still whether the tariff is a tax?

A Philadelphia paper states that whereas granulated sugar is now selling at 6¼ cents a pound, contracts have already been made in that city for sugar to be delivered in April at 4⅛ cents. "In two days one wholesale house received orders for 1,600 barrels, and the Philadelpia refineries have now so many orders for April delivery that they refused to take any more."

Granulated sugar at 4⅛ cents a pound wholesale will retail at five cents a pound. With fine white sugar at twenty pounds to the dollar the people will have no difficulty in deciding what the effect of a tariff is, and whether they like untaxed sugar at five cents a pound than high tariff sugar at seven or eight.

This Interests Farmers.

If every man in Kansas who raises corn or wheat, or cattle or mules, and every merchant who is indirectly benefited by the prosperity of the Kansas farmer, is not interested in having Mexican flux ores put on the free list, as a step toward inducing Mexico to admit our farm products into that country free of duty, then the Champion is simply mistaken. The admission of these ores free of duty simply means the opening up to Kansas farmers of the best market within easy access, and the refusal to do so, means our exclusion from that market. That is all there is of it.—Atchison (Kan.) Champion.

NOW TRY THIS.

It will cost you nothing and will surely do you good, if you have a Cough, Cold or any trouble with Throat, Chest or Lungs. A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many customers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, Knightstown Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction." Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

ONE DOLLAR WELL INVESTED.

If you have bad breath, constipation, pain in the small of the back, discolored skin, nervousness, or dizziness your only wise course is to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. BRONCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the consoler of the afflicted.'"—Jaime Rufus Vidal, San Cristobel, San Domingo.

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

Daniel O'Reilly received official information Monday of his appointment as clerk to the Secretary of State and was requested to report for duty before April 1st. We congratulate Dan on his appointment and the Democrats of Clinton a also ready to receive congratulations as this is the first favor of the kind that has ever been shown them. We are sorry to lose Mr. O'Reilly as a citizen, but are glad that so capable a man has been chosen to fill the position. He leaves for Lansing, Monday the 23d.

St. Patrick's celebration so long talked of was a complete success from beginning to end. The supper held from 5 to 7:30 was one of the best that has been in the Hall for many a year. Cold meats, pork and beans, biscuits, salads, jellies, cakes and everything that the craving of the inner man could suggest was on the tables and plenty of pretty girls as waiters, which was no small feature of the occasion. The supper being ended, and the tables cleared it was announced that the votes for the gold watch were to be counted. Everyone was all attention when the four young ladies made their appearance on the stage, with their lists of the voters and rolls of bills. Many were the conjectures among the audience as to the amount subscribed and great was the surprise of everyone when they were informed that the whole amount presented was $254.08. Miss Mamie Wilson having secured votes to the amount of $96,60 This taking the first prize, a beautiful watch. Miss Della Lane brought a purse of $85,59. Miss Kitty VanTuyle $47,79 Miss Louise VanDeMark $24,10. The last three young ladies each received an elegant ring. Misses Minnie Humphrey and Augusta Kirchgesner each received a very large framed portrait of Rev. Fr. Ternes, for selling tickets for the supper and entertainment. Photographs of Fr. Ternes, Bishop Foley and the Catholic Churches of Clinton, Cambridge, Manchester, and Freedom were on sale during the afternoon. At 8 o'clock the entertainment commenced and though lengthy it was by no means tiresome as their program was varied. The farce, "Don't Judge by appearance," was a good one and the parts were well taken, though every selection on the programe was well rendered. "The wearing of the green" sung by Miss Louise VanDeMark, "Dear Little Shamrock" by Miss Minnie Humphrey and a recitation by Chas H. Mahar of Cambridge deserve special mention, as being so appropriate to the occasion and extremely well rendered. The proceeds for the whole affair were just $400,00. The profits being about $325

PREFERRED A SHROUD

To the Bridal Dress—Suicide of a Pittsburg Bride.

PITTSBURG, March 13.—Miss Tillie Lang, 20 years old, committed suicide last night by taking poison. She was to have been married today to Jacob Schneider, a young jeweler, and seems to have preferred a shroud to bridal robes. It appears the wedding had originally been arranged for several months ago, but for some reason was postponed. Recently Miss Lang had been suffering from epilepsy, and as her wedding day approached she became apprehensive that she had better not marry, and it is supposed that rather than run the risk of being unhappy, she decided to die.

AN AUSTRALIAN REPUBLIC

Seems to be the Next Thing New Under the Sun.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., March 14.—A speech by Mr. Dibbs before the Australian federation convention in this city in which he declared the ultimate destiny of Australia to be a republic allied to Great Britain has caused wide comment and much excitement. The strongest evidence of this is found in the fact that his declaration has already inspired the formation of Republican clubs.

Saturday night blood began to flow from his eyes and ears, and suddenly he came to his senses. He remembers nothing since he went into the sound sleep, but can recall everything previous to that time. McConkey is a married man, and has lately applied for a pension for service in the war of 1812. Today the judge was to have decided the case, but the unlooked for awakening late Saturday night of McConkey has caused a suspension of the proceedings for a week.

A. J. Hunt and William Bowerman, of Detroit, have made an agreement for a sleep fasting contest. In brief, the conditions are as follows: Each contestant shall be on the stage at a local museum at midnight March 30 to begin a sleep-fasting contest, which shall end at the expiration of the 168th hour from its start, or when one gives up. Neither contestant shall be allowed a second to keep him awake, and shall at all times respond to the question of the referee to determine his condition. Either contestant shall order the referee to ask his opponent a question at any time he may desire. Neither man shall use any artificial means to keep sleep away. He shall not be restricted as to what he shall eat or drink, but shall not be allowed to leave the hall for any purpose or escape the eye of one of the referees.

THE TOWN WIPED OUT.

Fowlerville, Michigan, is Entirely Consumed by Flames.

DETROIT, MICH., March 16.—Later reports from last night's fire at Fowlerville are to the effect the town has been completely wiped out of existence, the loss being estimated at fully five hundred thousand dollars. A high wind, coupled with inadequate facilities of fighting flames, aided the work of destruction.

CARELESS ABOUT THEIR GUESTS.

Shocking Discovery at a New York Hotel.

ALBANY, N Y., March 15.—A horrible discovery has just been made at the Dunlap house, a man being found dead after having laid for some days. On February 26 a man called at the hotel and registering himself as Robert W. Davis, of Karners, paid for a room and was assigned to one on the third floor. He went to his room and from that time on the hotel people seem to have lost all interest in his movements. He was not seen again, nor does it appear that there was any inquiry as to whether his room was tenanted or not until today, when a horrible stench penetrating through the hallway attracted attention and indicated something was wrong in the room. The door was found to be locked, and on its being bust open, Davis's body was discovered upon the bed badly decomposed. He had evidently been dead from the night he hook the room and retired two weeks ago. The deceased was apparently 50 years old and from letters found in his pocket it was inferred that he came down from Karns to meet a daughtor who lives in Oneida county. It is probable that he blew out the gas and was asphyxiated.

ESTATE OF NELSON H. KIMBALL.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Saturday, the 14th day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Nelson H. Kimball, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Abbie J Kimball, widow of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this court purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased and that administration of said estate, with the will annexed, may be granted to petitioner or some other suitable person.

March April May

Are the best months in which to purify your blood, for at no other season does the system so much need the aid of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, as now. During the long, cold winter, the blood becomes thin and impure, the body becomes weak and tired, the appetite may be lost. Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiarly adapted to purify and enrich the blood, to create a good appetite and to overcome that tired feeling.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has a larger sale than any other sarsaparilla or blood purifier, and it increases in popularity every year, for it is the ideal Spring Medicine.

"I have for a long time been using Hood's Sarsaparilla, and believe me, I would not be without it. As a spring medicine it is invaluable." E. A. RHODES, 130 Ontario Street, Chicago, Ill. Be sure to get diseases of life seemed to have a mortgage on my system. I have now taken two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and have gained 25 pounds. Can eat anything without it hurting me; my dyspepsia and biliousness have gone. I never felt better in my life. Those two bottles were worth $100 to me." W. V. EULOWS, LINCOLN, Ill.

DO YOU WANT A PENSION?
Do You Want Your Pension Increased.

There is a New Pension Law and nearly every soldier is now entitled to a pension.

DR. J. H. REYNOLDS

Late a member of the Board of Examining Surgeons at Adrian, Mich., and who has examined over two thousand soldiers for pensions, will hereafter devote two hours each day to

PENSION BUSINESS

The Doctor was a soldier and is a pensioner, and with his five years' experience as Examining Surgeon for Pensions, believes he can make it PAY YOU to come and see him.

He knows the RATE on every known disability

Knows what Diseases or Disabilities are the results of any other.

Knows (as every EXAMINING SURGEON will tell you) that many men do not draw what the law allows them, because their claims are not presented in proper shape.

Knows how to put your claim in such shape that you will get pay for ALL results of the disease or wound for which you are pensioned.

Knows all the recent decisions made by Commissioner and how to give you the advantage of them in dollars.

Knows that some recent rulings are of vital importance to many pensioners, if their claims are only properly presented.

Knows whether you are entitled to Rerating, and how to get it.

I charge just the legal fees because I earn them

ALWAYS BRING YOUR CERTIFICATE WITH YOU.

If you want the benefit of a Pension while you live go and see Dr. Reynolds.

I can get you from $2 to $6 more per month under the new law than other agents

To any person examined by the board, at Adrian, before Aug. 1, 1889, I have something of importance to tell you.

Come and let us examine you (no charge) and will tell you all about it. About one-third of all the soldiers examined while I was on the board were rated for disabilities not claimed. You had better come and see me about it.

Correspondence solicited, with stamp for reply
15 East Maumee-st., Adrian, Mich.

ATTENTION, Soldiers & Sailors,

Under the new pension law just passed by Congress all Soldiers and Sailors who served 90 days in the Rebellion, and who are disabled from any cause permanently, (need not have originated in the service,) are entitled to a pension of from $6 to $12. All soldiers' widows, minor children and dependent parents come under this law. Being located at the Capital near the U. S. Pension office, we can give our personal attention to your claim and thus ascertain any defect quickly and supply the same.

Write for blanks. Give full description of service and disabilities.

The New Manufacturing AND Temperance Town

TWO MILES SOUTH OF CHICAGO.

Your Expenses Paid if You Want to Come and See it Before Investment.—[See Herald of March 19th.]

Within 20 Minutes Ride of the Location of the World's Fair.

Many questions are being asked about HARVEY, the new temperance and manufacturing suburb of Chicago. In an effort to answer some of these it can be stated that the manufactories and shops already located there are: The Automatic Mower Works, the Harvey Printing Company, the Grennell Wagon and Steel Header Works, (recently removed from Grennell, Iowa.) The Buda Foundry Manufacturing Company, building seven fine shops was ready for business in February. The Harvey Steel Car Company, to Manufacture railway cars out of steel instead of wood, will use thirty-nine acres of land for its shops. One building just completed being 100x300 feet with self-supporting roof.

The Connor Core Drilling Company, made to operate core drills for milling purposes, and the Hardware Specialties Manufacturing Company will occupy three acres of land and will be built soon.

Other establishments besides the seven above mentioned, five of which are now on the ground, are to be located on the east side of the Illinois Central railroad and will employ many thousand operatives. Stores of all kinds, boarding houses and hotels and hundreds of residences must be built in the next few months to accommodate this army of laborers.

HARVEY is located at the junction of the Grand Trunk, Illinois Central and Big Four railroad. Thirty-eight trains daily—very soon to be more. A street car line to Chicago is an assured acquisition.

Last August it had less than a half dozen buildings, to-day more than three hundred can be counted. Our faith has become so great in the town that we want all our friends to see it.

It is a great place for a young man to go who is just beginning a business career. It offers a fine prospect for the laboring man who has small means, if full of days' work. It has already become a great harvest for carpenters and masons, which will greatly increase with the opening of spring, with high wages and good pay. But the best of all is that the saloon, the gambling den and the house of prostitution cannot enter the borders of Harvey. With good schools, good churches, good water, good drainage in a good high and dry location, Harvey is soon to become an enviable place for a good home for industrious Christians and temperance people. A full history and description, with plats of the town, can be had by addressing us, also any information relative to work or investments. Lots have been selling rapidly, but good selections can be made now for first prices, in which case good profits will surely be realized within a year. Many lots purchased just before the holidays are now selling from FIFTY TO ONE HUNDRED PER CENT. IN ADVANCE of purchase price. Lots can still be had from $200 up in choice locations. Do not delay writing or coming to see Harvey. Now is the time to locate or invest as prices will advance soon.

JAMES LANE, of Holloway, who has been to Chicago and made an investment, will be in TECUMSEH, at H. L. JONES' Restaurant, every Wednesday and Saturday, to answer any inquiries in regard to our interest at Harvey or Oak Park.

P. S.—Excursion rates will be made again from Adrian, Tuesday, March 31st, at 3 P. M. Fare will be $4.25 going; same returning, if 10 come on same train.

Address all inquiries or notices of your coming to Chicago to

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The condition of the roads is horible.

Town meeting one week from next Monday.

Wm. H. Arner's condition is somewhat better.

H. J. Williams made a business trip to Toledo Tuesday.

J. A. Santus was at the county seat Monday on a business turn.

Miss Viola Zeluff, of Tecumseh, spent Saturday with friends.

Mrs. Wm. Ransom and Mrs. Daniel Allen are on the sick roll, this week.

Mrs. G. P. Waring is under the doctor's care, with la grippe, at present.

Mrs. Catharine Cox is numbered with those under la grippe protection.

Mrs. James Pocklington is very sick at present writing with rheumatism of the hoart.

D. W. Smith closed the winter term of school in District No. 3 on Friday afternoon.

Mr. Wakefield, traveling agent for the Evening News, Toledo, was in the village Tuesday.

Dr. R. H. Nelson was called to Dundee Tuesday afternoon to consult with Dr. Balcom in the case of Mrs. Hod Pulver.

Geo. Dibble, wife and daughter, Ada, of North Adrian, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Gove, Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Lulu Rappleye is able to ride out and expects to resume her school work in District No. 3, at the beginning of the spring term.

F. E. Pocklingtou, who has been at Harvey, Ill., for the past two months, spent the latter part of last week with his family here, returning Sunday night.

Easter services will be observed on Sunday by an appropriate discourse in the morning by the pastor. In the evening the Sabbath school have a concert service prepared for the occasion.

C. O. Miller, of Detroit, manager of the Lenawee County Butter Co., of Detroit, spent Sunday and Monday here. Those having first-class butter to sell will find it to their advantage to consult with him.

Those holding tickets to the Ariel concert, the last entertainment of the Tecumseh Lecture and Musical Course will bear in mind the fact that the date has been changed from April 9th to the 10th, one day later.

There were but few from here who attended the Russell Conwell lecture Monday night given at Tecumseh, but those who did report it one of finest and most instructive lectures ever given from the rostrum of the Opera House.

The exhibition that was announced in last week's issue of the HERALD, to be given this week Friday evening, has been postponed for two or three weeks, on account of sickness in the school. When the date has been fixed notice will be given in the HERALD.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Lowe entertained relatives and friends at their pleasant home, (to the number of thirty-two,) on Monday afternoon. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by all. Refreshments were served by the host and hostess, consisting of warm sugar, etc.

The ship social announced in last week's issue of the HERALD to take place on Wednesday evening of the present week, has been postponed for a fortnight, owing to the sickness of Mrs. Waring and some of those who were to take part in the social. Every effort will be made to make the entertainment a grand success. When the date is fixed we will announce the same in due season.

MACON GRANGE.

The entertainment at Macon Grange Hall, on Friday evening, was well attended although the roads and weather were very unfavorable. The program under the care of Harry Bailey was carried out without a break, lasting two hours and a half. It was something entirely new and different from anything ever given here. The short time in which Mr. Bailey had to train the juveniles proves what imitators children are. Receipts nearly $9 00.

The next regular meeting will be on Friday, April 3rd, at 1:30 P. M. It is hoped that there will be a good turn out of the members as there is important business that should not be delayed. A good program will be given at the close of the business session.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Orange Blossoms this week.

John B. Smith, of Tecumseh, is staying at the Exelby House.

Carpenters are busy putting up a new stage in the Exelby Hall.

We hear that F. Brown and Son have bought Irve Osborn's store.

Joseph Daykin has his store to rent and we hear he has also some corn for sale.

We hear that Mr. Loose of Monroe, will soon be putting up another sawmill here.

The new store for Osgood Bros, is now ready and they will be moving ing shortly.

Mr. Cooley, our drug clerk, will be leaving Britton this week. We regret loosing him.

Mrs. Maggie Hughes, of Tecumseh, was visiting friends in this village last Monday.

Mr. Henry Miller visited friends in Dundee last Sunday and returned Monday noon.

We are glad to say that so far no fresh cases of diphtheria have broken out in our village.

John Exelby, of Detroit, has rented the Sol Smith House one-half mile South of Britton and will move there from Detroit shortly.

Irve Osborn, in addition to selling his store to F. Brown & Co., has also sold a house to Mr. William Hause and another to Oliver Henderson.

William Taylor is home from Detroit visiting his parents. He has secured a position in a hotel at Detroit, and will commence his duties about the 1st of April.

The person who sent us the item to insert in our news, but forgot to sign his name, must indeed be an ignoramus to suppose we would publish such trash as the item contained.

A certain lady living near our village is so careful of her chickens that the other Sunday one was found in her buggy where it had been put for safe keeping; going to Church no doubt did the chicken good.

The article in the Ridgeway news last week in regard to the ship social was slightly wrong and we would like to correct it. It would indeed puzzle a cook on board ship, to have mess ready at two bells in the second dog watch. The first dog watch at sea commences at 4 o'clock p. m. or eight bells and ends at 6 o'clock or 4 bells,; the second dog watch commences at 6 o'clock or 4 bells and ends at 8 o'clock or 8 bells. So that it would have been correct to say that mess would be ready in the second dog watch, between 4 and 6 bells. Bells are struck every half-hour at sea in first class merchant vessels as well as naval.

MACON MUSIC.

Mrs. Julia Hendershot is quite sick at present writing.

John Jackson returned from his visit at Leslie and Barryville last Saturday.

There was a good attendance at the exhibition last week. Receipts, about fifteen dollars.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Burdette, Friday morning, March 20th, a nine-pound boy.

There will be a Conundrum Social at the home of Gamble Kuder, on Wednesday evening, April 1st.

There will be no preaching at the M. E. Church next Sunday, on account of the Quarterly meeting at Clinton.

Township election is near. It is now time to turn our attention to the men that we want to do the business of the township this year.

Lucius Hough is moving on his place in Brownville. We are sorry to part with them, as Mrs. Hough has always lived in this vicinity. Our best wishes go with them.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Manson Stout is home from Grand Rapids.

Maple sugar and syrup makers have struck a boom.

Measles still prevail and in some cases are pretty severe.

Mrs. Geo. Poucher was called to Bridgewater to care for her mother, who is very ill.

Frank Pitcher, of Buffalo, is home on a visit. Mrs. Pitcher, having sold her place here, will make her future home with Frank.

If measles and bad roads do not prevent, the M. E. Sunday School will give an Easter concert Sunday evening, March 29th. All are invited to attend.

EAST FRANKLIN.

Uncle Robert Smith was very sick last week.

Frank Pitcher is out from Buffalo, spending a few days among old friends.

Ezra Simmons' sugar bush yielded sixty-four barrels of sap in one day recently.

Miss Mabel Wilson was given a surprise one evening last week. Tina and Devillo VanValkenburgh were also remembered.

Measles continue to spread in Franklin, though it seems as if not much material could be left to work upon. Nearly all have the disease in a light form.

We understand that Mrs. Wheaton has bought the hotel property at Tipton, so long owned by Mrs. Pitcher. Mrs. P. expects to go to Buffalo and keep house for her son.

Eugene Norcross lost a cow recently, under circumstances of more than usual interest. The animal had been sick for several weeks, sometimes appearing all right, and again seeming to suffer the most intense pain. Local cow doctors were baffled by the case and Dr. Waldron, who was called, frankly admitted that he could not understand it, but requested, if the cow died, that he might be notified. Accordingly, he came up, after the animal's death, and found a pointed headless nail sticking in the heart, and the heart enlarged to twice its natural size. Smith Munger also lost a cow last week. It died suddenly in the night, without having shown the least indications of disease.

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

Louis Y. Freeman, of Chelsea, spent Sunday in town.

Wm. F. Jones is drawing lumber to build a new house upon the site of the one that was burned, on the Hall place.

A new broom sweeps clean. Witness the way the cross-walks are kept since the new street commissioner was elected.

Mrs. B. G. English, of this township, and Mrs. N. G. Nicholson, of Saline, spent Sunday of last week at R. K. Fellows', in Sharon.

Debate upon the subject: Resolved—That farmers are as competent to be legislators as are people engaged in other business. Affirmative, Amariah Hitchcock; negative, Albert D. English.

The last Alpha Sigma social for the present school year was held at the Presbyterian church parlors on Monday evening. Election of officers for the ensuing year occurred on the same evening.

The next S. W. Farmers' Club is to be at the residence of J. B. Lapham on Friday, April 3rd. The following program has been prepared:

Select Reading—Mrs. G. M. Sutton.
Essay—Mrs. John F. Spafard.

TECUMSEH & FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB.

This Club will meet at the residence of William J. Osborne on the evening of April first, with the following program:

Song—Hettie Waldron.
Select Reading—Lucretia Cummins.
Dec.—Halleck Wilson.
Rec.—Jennie Osborn.
Inst. music—Nellie Smith.
Rec.—Lora Cairns.
Dec.—Clark Payne.
Song—Mrs. Waldron and Welch, A. VanValkenburg and Rezin Welch.
Inst. music—Nellie Smith.
Select Reading—Will Osborne.
Question—Has the selling of cream been found satisfactory? Opened by A. VanValkenburg.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

We understand that a new syndicate has recently been formed in the townships of Raisin and Ridgeway, on quite an extensive scale, to further the interests of agricultural pursuits. The property combined under this arrangement consists of three large farms—two in Raisin and one in Ridgeway—a mill property in Raisin and a large block of stores at Holloway Station, on the Wabash R. R. It is expected that other farms will be absorbed by this syndicate, and probably it will not be long before the entire farming interest of this section will be conducted on the combination plan.

For the cure of colds, coughs, and all derangements of the respiratory organs, no other medicine is so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It relieves the asthmatic and consumptive, even in advanced stages of disease, and has saved innumerable lives

MACON GRANGE.

At a regular meeting in the Grange Hall at Macon, a new society for the dissemination of political science was formed and the following platform adopted:

1. The abolition of national banks and all chartered banks of issue, and no more issuing of national bonds.

2. A legal tender paper currency to be issued direct from the United States treasury in payment of government expenses; to the amount of $50-00 per capita; the same to be replenished from time to time, to meet wear and tear and the increase in business and population.

3. As an immediate relief from the oppressed conditions, we favor government loans on real estate, or other good security at two per cent. interest, in sums not exceeding $1,000, to any individual, provided the whole amount of such loans does not exceed $20 per capita.

4. To facilitate foreign trade or exchange, the holders of gold and silver bullion may deposit the same in the treasury vaults at the foreign mark t price for bullion, in exchan rency; the same to be inte at the option of the holders ded the amount of bullion on deposit shall not exceed $10 per capita. at any one time.

5. To facilitate general exchange, the coinage of pennies and nickles the same as now in use, and twenty-five and fifty cent paper bills, and the establishment of postal savings banks.

6. In paying the present bonded debt according to contract, the government may coin from bullion in treasury vaults, provided bondholders prefer coin to bullion or currency.

7. The present mode of communication and transportation, through excessive charges is becoming oppressive, and unless congress can adjust these abuses, we favor the government ownership of the means of communication and transportation.

8. Government expenses and salaries of officers should be reduced on a par with expenses and salaries in other industries. It is not right or expedient to tax one industry to build up another. Therefore, we favor entire free trade the world over.

9. Government expenses that cannot be met from the United States treasury in keeping up the per capita. circulation, should be provided for by a tax on incomes, or in case government assumes control of the means of communication and transportation, to fix rates so as to provide a dividend to meet the residue of government expenses.

10. Congress should pass laws preventing boards of trade from gambling in agricultural productions, against syndicates, alien ownership of lands, and reclaim all forfeited land grants.

11. We favor the election of President and vice-president, and United States Senators by direct vote of the people; and the reduction of senatorial terms to four years.

12. All property should be assessed at its true value, less any bona-fide indebtedness, and all mortgages, promissory notes or other evidence of indebtedness, should become void against debtors after the first Monday in April in each year, unless the same bears the assessor's stamp as being listed for taxation.

13. We favor a uniform system of school books furnished by the state at cost.

14. We favor a service per diem. pension to all honorably discharged union soldiers.

15. Men and women, being equally liable and responsible under the law, should have equal privileges and obligations in originating law. Therefore, we favor woman suffrage.

16. We deplore the terrible ravages and aggressions of the liquor traffic. The despoiler of health, happiness and prosperity. The leading factor in politcs, morals, crime and taxation, wherein farmers bear the main burthens, in prosecuting offences, maintaining jails, prisons, poorhouses and asylums. And from recent decisions from the United States supreme court, declaring that states cannot prevent the sale in original packages, because of the United States Constitution vesting in congress alone the power to regulate inter-state commerce. Therefore, we favor a general government law suppressing the liquor traffic.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, MAR. 26.

Henry George passed through Washington last week, having just returned from the Bermudas, where he spent the winter in search of health. He said that his physician would not allow him to work and that he was not prepared to talk on current events further than to express his belief that from this time on political battles will be fought solely upon economic issues.

Nine-tenths of the Western Democrats and one-half of all other voters in the west believe in free coinage and also in tariff reform. But the friends of tariff reform should not suffer that issue to be side-tracked in their zeal for free coinage. One reform in the hand is better than two in the bush. In the battle for lower taxes we have captured the enemies outposts and at the next election we can successfully storm the McKinley camp. Hold the lines solid and crowd this issue.

We call attention to an article elsewhere from the St. Louis Republic on good money and bad taxes. It states the situation concisely and exactly. No paper in the west has done more valiant service for the cause of free silver coinage than the Republic. The friends of free coinage in the west are not fanatics, but practical men, who would accomplish their end by a safe, conservative process. The evil that overshadows all others at present is the war tariff. Correct that first and tackle the money question afterward.

The taxation of mortgages is a farce. Under our present law the owner of mortgaged property is taxed to its full value, without deducting the incumbrance, and the mortgagee is taxed to the full amount of the mortgage. When honestly returned, such property pays double taxes. When not honestly returned, the mortgagee escapes his tax altogether. The best method is to exempt mortgages entirely. Borrowers could then obtain their loans at a less rate of interest and taxation would be far more equitable than now.

The Supreme Court of South Dakota has rendered a decision upholding the constitutionality of the law requiring commercial agencies to deposit $50,000 in the State treasury as a guarantee fund for any judgment obtained for misrepresenting a firm's credit. This is a step in the right direction. The evil has grown to large proportions, and it should be stamped out by the strong arm of the law. If the commercial agencies were mulcted in heavy damages a few times, they would adopt some method of procuring honest and reliable reports.

Why should personal property be taxed at all? It is easily concealed and is fluctuating in value. It is impossible to levy and collect taxes upon personal property with equity. The plan of taxing all kinds of property indiscriminately is a beautiful theory, but centuries of experience have proven it to be utterly impracticable. Men who have made taxation a special study are rapidly coming to the conclusion that all taxes should be laid upon land and land values, and corporations holding realty. The general drift of legislation at present is in this direction.

A constitutional amendment will be submitted to the people at the spring election to increase the salary of the Attorney General from $800 to $2,500 per year. This amendment should be adopted, by all means. The present salary is utterly inadequate. It is impossible to secure a competent man to accept the office at that figure, and under the present system the State has to pay four prices to outside attorneys for much of their legal counsel. Give the Attorney General an adequate salary and compel him to do all the work of the office himself and it would be a measure of economy to the tax-payers.

The death of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, which occurred at Washington last Saturday, removes from earth the most prominent Confederate General in the Civil War, excepting Robert E. Lee. He was 84 years old last month. His position in the Confederate army was similar to that of Gen. Sherman on the Union side. He was a devoted friend of Sherman's, and the latter entertained for Johnston an almost boyish affection. At Sherman's request the Confederate Chief has been retained as Railroad Commissioner under the present administration, although appointed by Cleveland, and Johnston's last appearance in public was when he attended Sherman's funeral.

GOOD MONEY AND BAD TAXES.

The issue of supreme importance for the agricultural States is the reduction of tariff taxes to a revenue-only basis. The people should be willing to give from their earnings, no matter how poor they are or how heavily in debt, enough for the necessary expenses of government. But every dollar taken from them in excess of that amount renders their proverty more lasting and lessens the possibilities of escaping debt and reaching a basis of individual independence. One dollar in every three of the money in circulation in the United States now goes every year to the Federal government. And nearly half of the enormous sums so taken are taken with the confessed purpose of increasing the prices of the necessaries of life, which must be bought out of the two-thirds of the total cash remaining after the government has taken its one-third. As a result, all the money of the country is drawn with an irresistible force into the hands of the government and of those whom it specially "protects" against the natural laws of equity governing the rest.

The tariff system draws the money of the country from its legitimate channels to three great reservoirs—the Federal Treasury, the manufacturing Northeast, and the prineipal ports of entry, which are also located in the Northeast. As the tariff taxes must be paid at the ports of entry, the higher these taxes are the greater the amount of cash that must be drawn to them from the rest of the country before business can be carried on; and, by the incidental but inevitable workings of the same rule, the greater the amounts of cash drawn into the Northeastern manufacturing States, to which the high tariff gives the privilege of increasing prices up to the amount of the tax on imports.

This drain on the country leaves it without money except such as is sent out to "move crops." When the corn crop is to be moved, the great dearth of cash in the field of its greatest production holds down its money value. When money is obtained to move it, the purchaser pays it to the farmer, who uses it to settle his accounts with his merchants, who immediately start it back to the Northeast. This is what continually happens in the West. And it is exactly the same with the Southern cotton crop. The money that comes in to "move" it goes out at once. The excessive rate of Federal taxation, taking one-third of the total cash for the Federal government and giving the manufacturing monopolies the privilege of levying private taxes on internal trade up to 54 per cent; on the average for all manufactured goods, has produced a situation under which all the cash not taken by the Federal government is by its action put under the absolute control of its Plutocratic favorites.

In such a situation it is no time to stop to discuss the relations of money to supply in the abstract: no time to assert that we could better pay these crushing public and private taxes if the amount of money were increased: for if it were increased under this system it would flow in exactly the same channels and into the same reservoirs as now.

Before the Democratic party turns to any other issue it must strike down Plutocracy in government and monopoly in business. It has hoisted its banners for that battle, filled its quiver and gone out with its bow on its back; and it will not invite the curse visited on the Sons of Benjamin, who turned back to other issues from the issue of the conflict for which they had armed themselves.

What this country needs is less taxes and more money. What it deeds worst is not more good money to pay bad taxes, but less bad taxes to take good money from the hands of the people. —St. Louis Republic.

GOVERNOR HILL'S ONE GOOD ACT.

WHETHER Governor Hill resigns or retains the Governorship, there is one act of his administration which will be regarded with favor by good citizens of all parties. It is his interest in road making, and his urgent recommendation that the State of New York take action to secure roads worthy of her greatness and prosperity. No public works enhance the reputation, and consequently the prosperity, of a neighborhood so promptly and so largely as good roads. They are the first necessity of civilization, and the surest signs of its advance. Good roads, good schools, and good government are closely related, and the proof of saving public spirit in any community is its willingness to make its local communication as convenient and easy as possible. There is no surer sign of intelligence in such a community than the resolution that its local taxes, which are largely devoted to road-making, shall be spent only by men who understand that good roads are not made by ignorance and carelessness, but by intelligence and experience. —Harpers Weekly.

M'KINLEY PRICES AGAIN.

Testimony of Two Protection Trade Papers—The McKinley Law Has Raised Prices and Has Degraded the Quality of Goods.

Protectionist papers deny with much ill temper and with a liberal use of harsh epithets, the fact that the McKinley law has increased the price of goods. Anybody who has the hardihood to assert that prices have been advanced by McKinley is at once pounced upon and berated as an enemy to American industries and as a free trade liar.

But the fact that many prices have been mysteriously advanced is one that anybody can verify for himself. It is seen from the market reports of almost any trade journal; and most of these journals, too, are in favor of protection.

Such a journal is "Wade's Fiber and Fabric," which is published at Boston, Mass. In a recent number of this paper its Philadelphia correspondent points out what seems to him the satisfactory effect of the McKinley law. "Worsted manufacturers have profited most thus far," says the correspondent, "owing to a readjustment of duties in their favor, which has caused an advance in prices of worsted yarns varying from five to twenty-five cents per pound, according to numbers."

The correspondent thinks that this readjustment of price ought to have taken place several years ago, and fewer failures would have been the result. "This assertion," he goes on, "can not receive any better indorsement than that daily received from the worsted manufacturing centers of England, through cable dispatches to our daily papers, reporting the closing down of large factories owing to loss of trade in the United States, caused by the imposition of higher duties on yarn, cloth, etc."

In other words, the measure of harm which we do to England in closing up the factories is the measure of good we do to ourselves in raising prices to the consumer.

But there is another very significant side to this matter of raising prices. Some prices which were at first raised by the McKinley law have since dropped again to the former level. How does this come about? Is it verification of the wisdom of the McKinley measure and the promises so profusely made that it would develop competition and so reduce prices?

This question can be answered by quoting a few sentences from the N. Y. Dry Goods Economist, which is another protectionist trade paper. In its latest number this journal says: "The effect of the new tariff has been to bring into the market several novelties which give the effect of value without cost in the manufacture. So in imported hosiery we still have what is known in the trade as the '25-cent stocking,' but in quality and workmanship it is slightly inferior. It has been adroitly cheapened. The customer gets the article at the old price, but it is not as good, and no advertising lies can make it as good."

The Economist says it predicted some months ago that manufacturers would skilfully cheapen their goods so as seemingly not to increase prices; and this, it claims, has been done in vary many cases. And it says: "We also have maintained that on very many articles the prices would necessarily be increased by the tariff. This also has occurred, and it is utter nonsense for the partisan press to deny it."

But the partisan press does deny it and is quick to cover with abuse any paper which prints the facts about higher prices. The question for the high tariff organs to answer is, what was the purpose of the McKinley law if it has not raised prices? Was it just passed for fun; fired off like a blank cartridge?

REDUCING WAGES.

Protection Promises High Wages and Gives Lower—Great Numbers of Reductions of Wages and Strikes—The Mammoth Coke Workers' Strike.

Speaker Reed made a speech at Buffalo last October in which he said:

They ask me, whether I consider the McKinley bill just to the poor. Well, I should say so. A bill which has for its object the aiding of the poor by raising their wages, it seems to me is a just one.

Considering the frequent reductions of wages and the numerous strikes on that account which are now reported every week, this declaration of the czar sounds "like a tale of little meaning, though the words are strong." The standing promise of protection to raise wages is growing extremely absurd in view of what is now going on in our protected industries. The following is a printed list of reductions of wages recently reported—nearly all of them since January 1:

Brooke Iron Co., Birdsborough, Pa., closed February 2, and 450 men thrown out of work because they refused to accept a reduction of about 7 per cent.

Ellis & Lessing Steel & Iron Co., Pottstown, Pa., closed February 2; 100 men out of work because a reduction of 12½ per cent. was rejected.

Hopedale fabric mill, Hopedale, Mass.; wages of weavers reduced 2½ cents a yard last week.

Silk mill at Warehouse Point, Conn.; wages of winders and doublers reduced from $1.37 to $1 per day.

Sturtevant Blower Works, Jamaica Plain, Mass.; reduction of from 10 to 30 per cent.

Pottstown Iron Co., Pottstown, Pa.; reduction of about 7 per cent.

Bethlehem Iron Co., Bethlehem, Pa.; reduction of 10 per cent. February 2.

Pennsylvania Steel Co., Steelton, Pa.; reduction of from 8 to 10 per cent. February 1.

Homestead Steel Works, Carnegie, Phipps & Co.; 10 per cent., by agreement.

Pullman Palace Car Co.'s works; new scale making a reduction of about 10 per cent., brought forward January 1.

Otis Iron and Steel Co., Cleveland, Ohio; reduction of 30 per cent.

Coal mines, Duquoin, Ill.; reduction from 69 to 60 cents per ton.

Ribbon weavers in Paterson, N. J.; reduction of 15 per cent.

Coal mines near Leavenworth, Kan.; reduction of 11 per cent.

Manufacturers of pottery, Trenton, N. J.; wages of sanitary ware pressers reduced 22 per cent.

Cocheco Manufacturing Co.; wages of weavers reduced 4 per cent.

Merrimac Mills, Lowell, Mass.; wages of mule spinners reduced 8 cents per hundred.

Buckeye mower and reaper works, Akron, O.; reduction of from 30 to 60 per cent. reported on February 3.

Saxony knitting mill, Little Falls, N. Y.; reduction of about 20 per cent.

The ribbon weavers of the Adelaide silk mill, of Allentown, Pa., have been informed of a reduction. Heretofore the men have been paid $3 for twisting new warps, but in the future the company refuses to compensate them for this work.

The operatives in the beaming department of the Bates mills, Lewiston, Me., struck against a reduction of 8 per cent. in wages to take effect February 9.

Emma blast furnace, Cleveland, O.; reduction of 10 per cent.

Tenny's hat factory, Methuen, Mass.; reduction of 25 per cent.

Southern Steel Co., at Chattanooga, Tenn., cut wages 10 per cent., February 5.

Coke workers of Union, Clearfield, Monongahela, Alleghaney, Huntington, and Erie counties, Pa.; wages reduced 10 per cent., and 15,000 coke workers go on a strike.

Over against these reductions and strikes one or two cases have been reported where wages have been increased, the manufacturers saying that it was the result of the McKinley law.

The partial list given above contains food for fruitful reflections on the power of protection to raise wages. The mistaken notions that protection has this effect is rapidly losing its hold upon working people, as is shown by the democratic gains in manufacturing centers in the last presidential election, and still more in the elections last fall.

THE STARCH TRUST.

An Organization Which Controls the Corn Starch Production of the Country—A High Tariff to Help It.

The National Starch Co., which is the legal title of the starch trust, was organized last April. It has recently held its first annual meeting and was able to declare dividends on three kinds of stock. Since the trust was organized it has managed to put up the price of starch about one cent a pound. The wholesale price of starch at the factories last April was 2½ cents a pound, it is now from 3¼ to 3½ cents.

When the trust was organized last April one manufacturer who went into it was asked whether the price of starch would be raised. Here is his answer:

No, I don't think so; not unless the price of corn goes up, at any rate. Corn has already gone up three cents since the new organization was effected. If the price of starch should be increased by the manufacturers, however, it would probably not affect the consumer, but only the storekeeper or retailer. While starch has been sold to him at continually lower rates he still gets the same price that he has been getting for many years, and we have been losing money.

This manufacturer declared that one purpose of the organization was to prevent over-production, although he did not think prices would be raised. The trust has for months held the price up to a point higher by amost half than the price last spring.

The McKinley duty on corn starch is two cents a pound, being the same as under the old law. The figures used during the tariff debate by the United States senate, which were prepared by a treasury expert, show that this duty was equal to 91½ per cent. ad valorem on the small quantities of corn starch which the high duty let in. Nobody appeared before McKinley, so far as the published reports show, to ask for the retention of this duty; but the duty was kept at the present enormous figure notwithstanding the fact that the starch trust was formed at the very time when the McKinley bill was taking shape.

With one exception the trust controls every one of the corn starch factories, about twenty-one, in this country. As it has held the price of starch up to an unreasonable figure, and has crushed out competition, it is making a tempting opportunity for outsiders to establish independent factories. This has already given rise to rumors that such enterprises would be undertaken. Then will come probably a temporary war of prices, till finally the trust will gobble up the independent concerns, and then there will be "harmony" again and "McKinley prices."

A Tax on Human Kindness.

The barbarity of our tariff laws is being illustrated by many fresh discoveries nowadays. The British iron and steel institute met in New York last October. After visiting the great iron mining and manufacturing centers of the country and receiving many courtesies from various American citizens, the English delegates returned to their homes.

They were so interested in what they saw here and so impressed with the kindness of several of our great iron men that they wanted to send some fitting testimonial to them as a token of appreciation. They first decided upon the articles they would send and then applied to our treasury department to know whether free admission would be allowed these articles, as they would not be offered for sale. Here is how the matter was decided, according to the report of a high tariff organ, the Bulletin of the American Iron and Steel Association:

Assistant Secretary Spaulding has informed Sir James Kitson, president of the iron and steel institute, that there is no provision of law under which free entry could be allowed of certain silver candelabra and other silver ornaments which the institute proposed to forward to certain gentlemen in the United States as testimonials of their complimentary services to the president, council and members of said institute, on the occasion of their visit to the United States in October, 1890.

—The cotton plaids used in this country are made principally in the cotton mills of the south. There is a high protective duty on this cloth, and an effort is reported to organize the plaid mills in the south into a trust.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA 5 CENTS

Drop a Nickel

in your grocer's hand and get a package of PYLE'S PEARLINE—the original and best Washing Compound. It will save you time, trouble, health, wear and tear, which cannot be computed in dollars.

It's better—easier—quicker than soap for washing clothes and housecleaning; if that's not true, what becomes of the many, many millions of packages sold annually? What induces the hundreds of imitations? Did it ever occur to you as strange that almost every imitation of Pearline is given a name ending in INE? A "wolf in sheep's clothing" trick; depend upon it, their tricks don't stop there. Peddlers and unscrupulous or misinformed grocers will tell you this (an imitation) is as "good as Pearline," "same as Pearline," etc., etc. It's false—there's nothing like Pearline—nothing as good as Pearline. Why?—that's our secret—but you will recognize and share the benefits of that secret when you use Pearline. 168 JAMES PYLE, New York.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

MAYOR SARGENT'S MESSAGE.

One of the most remarkable inaugural addresses ever made by the mayor of a city was that of Hon. Joseph B. Sargent, who, on January 1, was sworn into office as mayor of New Haven, Ct. Mr. Sargent is a well-known manufacturer and a student of political economy who has advanced views on social questions, and he evidently has the courage of his opinions. The first part of the message relates to the improvements necessary to New Haven's growth and prosperity. He recommends the ownership by the municipality of gas, water and other works and the street car lines, and the establishment of new public parks and public comforts and conveniences.

The message closes with a discussion of the relations of labor and capital, and a flat-footed declaration for the single tax in the following words:

"Capital is absolutely necessary to the civilized employment of labor.

"None of the operations of business, manufactures, building or farming can be carried on successfully without the friendly union of the three elements. Labor without capital is the labor of the crude barbarian working without tools.

"A country with no capital, but with labor and directors of labor (or chiefs), is in a savage stage. A country with all three of the elements harmoniously united is civilized, enlightened and prosperous. Civilization can not exist without capital.

"No civilized community would for a moment think of taxing labor nor managing ability. No intelligent community would attempt to tax either of those two elements of all successful industry and business for fear of driving them away. Why should civilized society punish successful industry by taxing the results of it? Why should civilized society punish capital, the savings from successful labor, and try to banish it and leave labor unemployed?

"Capital is timid and flies away on the first approach, or apprehension of danger. 'It worketh where it listeth and we know not whence it cometh nor whither it goeth.' It surely will not remain when in danger, nor will it work in any community except at market prices over and above all charges and risks.

"It seems to me that it would be for the benefit of all labor and all enterprise in the city of New Haven and would greatly increase its growth in business, population and capital, if capital were as free of taxation as is labor and as is managing ability. If such were the permanent policy of New Haven, capital would make its home here and work at a lower rate with labor, securely free from punishment for coming here and feeling safe in abiding here. Neither labor nor enterprise is taxed, nor should capital be taxed.

"Land, as our forefathers found it, is not capital. It was not created by the labor of the hand or head of man. Nature's God gave it to humanity and to the animals without price. It should supply funds for all needs of government, and the rate of taxation on the land in the various localities should be in proportion to market price. It can not be concealed and all owners can be served with exact justice. No encouragement should be given, through low taxation, for the holding of land out of use in order to compel the land-needy to pay profits to the early possessor.

"In the taxation of land only, for all necessary public revenues, the distribution of the tax over the whole community would be equitable and in proportion as nature's God intended.

"Capital may be driven away and labor paralyzed by the taxing of capital, but the land can not be driven away. The owner can annually or monthly recover from the user or renter the tax he has paid on lands used or occupied, but the tax on lands not in use, but held waiting till the increase in population compels its purchase at an expensive price, can not be recouped by distribution over the people in the form of rents or otherwise. The owner of unprofitably used or vacant lands would thus be tempted to sell for occupancy or use, and thus poor men might get homes and the city would grow in consequence.

"It is claimed by students on the subject of taxation that the taxation of capital and all other personal property is unequal and unjust to the conscientious and truthful, because only the few give true statements of their personal wealth. One of the commissioners of taxes in New York has recently testified, under oath, that 'the taxation of personal property is almost an entire failure; that it leads to efforts, and very strenuous efforts, on the part of capitalists (all owners of personal property are capitalists) to remove their property beyond the jurisdiction of the city and State. It offers no encouragement for capital to come here; that the law, as construed by the courts, enables any one who chooses to so dispose of his personal property that the tax department can not reach it. Those who understand the law and can take advantage of it, do so in a majority of cases. Those who are ignorant of the law and do not understand their rights pay taxes.' The foregoing testimony was given concerning the present tax laws of New York which were made for the express purpose of increasing and equalizing the taxes on capital or other personal property, but resulting, as usual, in harm to enterprise and labor, and in no corresponding gain to any other property nor to the body politic in morals or wealth.

"It is claimed by investigation that tax on buildings discourages the erection of buildings, and that old, small and unsuitable buildings are allowed to remain on valuable city lands, because of the fear of taxes on expensive and more useful buildings, and thus building enterprise and employment of builders' labor is not encouraged, and the land is not put to the best use for the interests of the whole public. Chapel, State and Church streets in New Haven are evidences.

"It is [illegible] of personal property, liberal expenditures in proper articles of use, or art in all forms, and home adornment are discouraged to the injury of labor.

"That if personal property in a city were free from taxation more people of wealth would permanently reside in that city, and there expend their incomes and invest, or lend, their capital for use there, to the great benefit of labor.

"That much capital now invested in other States or foreign countries would come to the place of security and of freedom from taxation, to the great benefit of enterprise, labor and permanent wealth.

"That all mechanical, manufacturing and commercial industries would increase to the great benefit of labor, the necessary co-partner of capital in all such enterprises.

"Any disadvantage or harm attempted to be put upon capital always reacts upon labor, while capital silently flies away to a place of security if not of profit.

I do not point out nor consider what is sometimes claimed to be the inherent wickedness of forestalling the distribution of land to the whole people, but only its remedy, and the good of the city as a whole.

"Equitable taxation is most surely and easily arrived at by putting all taxation upon one article of such universal use that no person can exist without its direct or indirect use. Pig iron might be selected as the article, or pig iron and other metals. The taxes, if all of them were collected from metals, would be immediately and equitably spread over the whole community in just proportions. But the difficulty in taxation upon metals is first that there might be concealment of quality, and, second, it would interfere with the manufacture of metal goods for export.

"Taxation of land only has no valid objection in equity, can not interfere with manufactures and labor, and would tend to wider distribution of land and homes among the people.

"But whatever may be the future methods of taxation or sources of revenue for the support of local, State or National Governments, let us hope that there be no more collected than is absolutely necessary for the proper and economical administration of governmental affairs, and that there may be no direct nor indirect imposition of unnatural and therefore unjust burdens upon the whole for the benefit of any favored or grasping few."

Spurious Land Reform.

William Wolff, formerly an active worker of the Manhattan Single Tax Club, of New York City, is now in Germany. In a letter to Mr. Klein, of the club, he describes a so-called "free land" movement that is being vigorously pushed by a Dr. Hertzka, of Vienna. Mr. Wolff heard that free land societies were being started in Germany and Austria, and literature was being distributed, and he wrote to Dr. Hertzka for information. He learned that the whole social problem was about to be solved and the millennium forthwith introduced—unfortunately, however, not in Germany or Austria, but in Central Africa or the Islands of Polynesia, or wherever the societies could get some free land on which to start socialistic communities. The scheme is not to make land free, but to find some free land, to stave off the struggle at home by shipping the malcontents to foreign shores.

From the days of the Roman republic, when the soldiers and citizens were kept quiet by gifts of land in the conquered provinces, down to these times of Salvation Army colony schemes, this form of soothing syrup has been prepared and administered to the people by statesmen, philanthropists and knaves. In the present instance the socialistic idea of common ownership of land and capital, and of every body belonging to a trade or professional guild, is introduced to make the drug more palatable. Germans, however, are fond of their fatherland, and whenever they realize that all the people need is access to the land, they will find the necessary land a good deal nearer Berlin than Central Africa. The Single Taxers of Germany, of whom there are now quite a number, will do their part in correcting this bogus "free land" idea, and common sense will do the rest.

The Detroit Free Press on the Farmers and the Single Tax.

In response to a letter written by L. W. Höch, of Adrian, Mich., the Detroit Free Press defends the income tax as a step toward compelling the very rich to bear their share of the burden of taxation, and in answer to a question concerning the single tax the paper says:

"As to what the effect would be of the operation of the 'single tax' it is pure speculation, and involves so many considerations that in the absence of any pressing question of its present adoption it can hardly be worth while for us to take the time and space necessary to discuss it. One thing, at least, can be said for it. It is the only method of taxation, probably, which would enable the government to collect the entire amount of tax levy without any discrimination between those on whom the levy falls. We are inclined to think, moreover, that the imposition of the entire tax on land—not necessarily in the Henry George fashion—would eventually make the burden of taxation press more evenly all around than can be done in any other way. This is a hard doctrine for the farmer to accept with his present notion that the exemption of personal property from taxation would make him pay the tax of the merchant, who has only personal property. It is not improbable, however, that at a comparatively early day the farmer will be foremost among those asking for the single tax on land as the only method of compelling the dwellers in the cities to bear their just share of the burden of taxation." * * * *

REVIEW OF THE QUARTER

LESSON XIII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 29.

The Unity of the Israelitish Nation Destroyed—Rapid Decline and Demoralization of the Two Sections Despite the Labors of Elijah, Elisha and Others.

The quarter just completed and the next together cover one of the saddest passages in history. Borrowing a term from profane history, it might be called the "Decline and Fall" of the divinely established nation. Every gracious promise to Israel had been coupled with a condition, expressed or clearly implied. Again and again had the people been warned; again and again had they disregarded the warning, violated the laws against idolatry and entangled themselves with neighboring nations, until their measure of iniquity was complete and the judgment came.

For convenience it is customary to divide the history of the kingdom into three stages. Samuel may be said to have organized the nation, but with so poor an instrument as Saul he could not organize the kingdom. That was the work of David, who was, in the broadest sense, a man of war. He brought the national spirit to its highest development. He repelled all the attacks of his neighbors and compelled them to respect Israel. To his son and successor he left a united people, whom no other nation dared to attack, and a fair field for the arts of peace. Solomon brought the kingdom to its highest point of glory. Education, agriculture and commerce were brought to a flourishing condition. This was the golden age of Israel. The fame of Solomon filled the earth. He is still the theme of a thousand legends among the nations of southern Asia, and the Jews through all the twenty-nine centuries since his day have pointed with mingled pride and sadness to the glory of Solomon.

The third stage—the four centuries of almost continuous decay and demoralization—began with Rehoboam, though the seeds of decay were thickly sown before. For some reasons not well understood there had long been a division in feeling, the tribe of Judah and some fractions of other tribes standing together, and the rest of the nation occasionally breaking away. Again and again during the life of David did this spirit produce dangerous or bloody results, nor did David succeed in uniting the tribes till the heir of Saul, Ishbosheth, had been assassinated. Twice during that reign there were bloody insurrections. It is but reasonable to conclude that the men of Judah were greatly favored at the court of Solomon, and that the jealousy of other tribes smoldered all through the forty years of his glorious reign.

Nevertheless the kingdom left by Solomon extended northeast to the Euphrates and south as far as the Red sea. His death was the signal for the old jealousy to revive, and the folly of Rehoboam completed the division. There were thenceforth two kingdoms and internecine strife, and the hatred on both sides was so intense that even the prophets were affected by it, as we see in many of their utterances. Against the dark background of war and apostacy stand out the mighty figures of Elijah and Elisha, heroes and patriots, almost martyrs, yet miraculously sustained and preserved, struggling mightily but in vain to bring back a deluded people to their duty to God and their native land.

As the northern kingdom began its career under Jeroboam by systematically excluding the Mosaic institutions, so its downward career was most rapid. Idolatry, despotism and corruption were its methods; conspiracy, revolt and regicide determined the choice of rulers through most of the 250 years of its troubled existence. Once Elisha succeeded in restoring a faint spirit of piety and patriotism, and under the dynasty of Jehu (who was anointed by Elisha) there was a show of order during the reigns of Jehoahaz, Joash, Jeroboam II and Zachariah; but the latter was murdered by Shallum (773 B. C.), who was murdered a month later by Menahem, whose son Pekahiah was slain by Pekah, who was in turn assassinated by Hoshea, with whom the kingdom was destroyed amid unspeakable miseries. The ten tribes were taken into captivity, and so disappeared from history. Many fanciful accounts of them have appeared, and many learned men, whose learning was not tempered with judgment, have maintained extravagant theories concerning "The Lost Tribes," but there is every reason to believe that they were never reunited. Their idolatry and neglect of the Mosaic law would naturally cause them to be absorbed and lost as a race in the nations among whom they settled.

The history of the other kingdom, commonly called Judah, is far more important and interesting; for it continued a kingdom till 588 B. C., was partially restored after the captivity, and maintained a desperate struggle for nationality for nearly five centuries longer. Nor was the Jewish community completely broken up and the people scattered till the reign of the Roman emperor, Hadrian, about 131 A. D., when the last insurrection under Bar-Cokheba was suppressed in frightful massacres, after which the Jews were forbidden to enter Jerusalem under penalty of death, and the dispersion was complete. Nevertheless it is Judah that has preserved the national name and blood, and the Jews remain a people apart among all nations to this day.

It is fitting to cite here a few facts as to that portion of Jewish history between the close of the Old Testament and opening of the New. Cyrus decreed the return of the Jews, but of the whole dispersion certainly not more than a third, and some think no more than a fifth, came back, and these completed the new temple about 516 B. C. Ezra somewhat later brought a colony from beyond the Euphrates, and Nehemiah another in 445 B. C. There was a long peace, during which the sacred books were completed, and the canon of the Hebrew Scriptures made up. Nor was this peace broken till Alexander the Great conquered the Persian empire (334 to 331 B. C.).

Palestine remained a Greek province, though under various rulers, for a century and a half; all the educated people read and to some extent spoke Greek, and the Scriptures were translated into that tongue (the Septuagint). In 170-160 B. C. the land became again independent under the Maccabees, but a century later a horrible civil war resulted in an appeal to the Romans, who took the country.

The lessons just closed, the careers of Elijah and Elisha, cover the first stages of this dreadful history, and it may with reverence be said that they deserve the study of those who would be statesmen almost as much as that of those who would be enlightened Christians. In these chapters is portrayed God's method in dealing with an apostate and decaying nation. The moral is set forth in Scripture language, which cannot be improved, "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God."

"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton N. Y."
REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure d[illegible] The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.
"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for some years and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain 10 years and then move up to second place in 1900 where it will rest for one hundred years.
There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.
The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.
The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years,
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

SOME RESULTS OF AGITATION.

Paper Read at the Farmers' Institute in Tecumseh by Mrs. Marshall Reed.

If we may judge from the wide spread discussion of popular questions in newspapers, periodicals, and various organizations where the consideration of supposed ills of the body politic and the social system receive attention, we shall conclude that so many reforms are under way as to make this conspicuously a reform age. Reformers advocating many changes are numerous, owing to the great diversity of opinions on all popular subjects, and the desire on the part of many intelligent and energetic men to agitate those subjects in which they are interested. It is too early to pass judgment on many popular movements now undergoing extreme agitation, but upon those great measures of the past, which amongst many efforts have been pressed to a successful issue, we may comment with freedom and certainty.

William Lloyd Garrison of Massachuetts stands forth preeminently as a successful agitator in American politics. His mission, to which he devoted himself with the zeal of a religious enthusiast, was to agitate society upon the subject of slavery; and to create a public sentiment in the north against that odious institution.

Beginning in 1824 he attacked the system in various news letters, endeavoring to arouse New England people from their apathy towards this great evil. In 1833 the first Anti-slavery Society was organized with Garrison as president, and his paper, The Liberator, was established in Boston. Struggling against every discouragement that could be placed in his way, notwithstanding mob violence, from which he was rescued with difficulty, and threats of personal injury, Garrison persevered, attracting to his support many sympathizers who took up and pushed forward the work of agitation. It is unnecessary to recount the struggles of the Antislavery Society for the thirty years preceding the liberation and enfranchisement of the black race. I wish only to point out results of the efforts of that agitator who carried on his righteous warfare persistently and with the inflexibility of a stern religious duty.

In the early part of this century drunkenness became so marked that in 1808 a temperance move favor as thement was started in New York, which grew in merits of its objects became known. Gradually the public attention was directed to the voic of intemperance; moderation and abstinence grew in favor; the clergy disseminated the tenets of temperance orders: the press discussed their principles, until in 1830 the cause was well under way as a national reform measure. The various organizations then had many thousands of members. So strong became the sentiment against the liquor traffic that Maine in 1846 suppressed the sale of intoxicants, and five years later adopted more stringent measures. In 1851 the order of Good Templars was organized and soon had thousands of members. The Temperance cause has been forwarded by the constant agitation of many earnest advocates.

Miss Frances E. Willard as leader in the W. C. T. U. has done much to advance the truth in the dissemination of temperance literature and the reclaiming of fallen women through the order of Social Purity. Results are seen in the prohibitory laws of several States, the restrictive measures of others, the pronounced public sentiment against drunkenness, and the general unpopularity of wine using in communities. Temperance advocates have many reasons for encouragement. Their efforts are crowned with numerous successes and are still reaping rewards of well directed labor and earnest conviction. Constant agitation has done much, and will do more of the good work.

The cause of Woman's Rights which had its beginnings in 1851 has made sensible advancement; although not allowed the full right of sufferage, except in Wyoming. Woman has been granted the elective franchise in educational matters in several States. Mary A. Livermore, Julia Ward Howe, Lucretia Mott and many other noble women have agitated this subject and kept it well before the public, in spite of scorn and ridicule, until much of that sentimentality concerning woman's work has given place to good sense, and at present, industrially, she is admitted to all suitable occupations to coordinate privileges with men. It will be observed that agitation brings about desired results by gradual concessions and compromises, and by such steps reform measures are established.

The organizations of Granges, Farmers' Clubs, and Mutual Benefit Associations are having great influence on the public mind. When the farmer was regarded as an ignorant and incompetent person, his claims were considered lightly in the distribution of political favors, but now that these movements have brought the agriculturist prominently forward, the farmers' influence has become important. The Farmers' Alliance, so popular in the West, the single tax followers of Henry George's theories, the advocates of the free coinage of silver, are pushing their claims with commendable zeal, and the changes sought are being agitated. We cannot pass judgment upon these movements at this time. I have not attempted to discuss the reforms which in other countries and in other centuries have changed the apparent course of civilization nor to touch upon all important movements in our own century in this country. Much might be said with reference to educational interests every where. The world seems to be awaking more and more to the necessity of practical education in every line of work. One of the first duties undertaken by the French Republic under Marshall MacMahon in 1873 was the reorganization of agricultural education.

The first agricultural school was established in Switzerland in 1806, and her example has been followed by other countries in a greater or lesser degree. The United States had up to 1877 forty-one agricultural schools which had received the national endowment of land scrip under the act of July second 1862. No one in our land of free schools can plead want of means as an excuse for ignorance. I would that very heart might be filled with an earnest desire for knowledge. All great reforms have had small beginnings, have been impressed upon the public mind by constant and tireless agitation until the culmination is success. The mission of the reformer in assisting those changes which shall improve the public weal, benefit communities, and carry blessings to a grateful posterity, should be to agitate righteous causes, trusting that time will vindicate the justice of his motive, and believing that truth must prevail.

A NEW ENTERPRISE.

Beginning March 3, 1891, THE DETROIT FREE PRESS Company commenced to issue a SEMI-WEEKLY edition of that paper. It is an eight page paper and contains practically all the matter of THE DAILY FREE PRESS. Moreover, it is classified and made up with all the care that has so long been a distinctive feature of THE WEEKLY FREE PRESS.

It is believed that the new semi-weekly will be especially valuable to Michigan readers, inasmuch as it will give full and accurate telegraphic news from all quarters of the globe and be a mirror of all interesting Michigan happenings, including reports of the doings of the State Legislature. In short it will meet the wants of all classes, for in addition to the features named it will address itself as a family paper with equal persuasiveness to the Father, the Mother and the Children through its solid information, its Children's department, its puzzle Column and its indispensable Letter-Box. The farmer will likewise find in each issue full reports of the produce and other markets; the Farm and Garden departments will continue to receive the careful attention which has made it so welcome and valuable; and last, but not least, it will reflect all those literary features that have made the world-wide fame of THE SUNDAY FREE PRESS.

Those who live beyond the reach of daily mails will find the SEMI-WEEKLY FREE PRESS a convenience and a boon.

Two papers a week—sixteen pages of solid reading—will thus be placed in the hands of the reading public for the unprecedentedly low price of $1,50 a year. Particular attention of present WEEKLY subscribers is directed to the further proposal that by paying the difference in price they can be transferred from the WEEKLY to the SEMI-WEEKLY list. The new issue is published every Tuesday and Friday. Specimen copies on file at this office.

"SING SOMETHING"

This stereotyped expression is heard on every hand, but the difficulty seems to be—to get something to sing. This difficulty is now removed by The Charles A. Vogeler Co., Baltimore, Md., to whom our thanks are due for a generous supply of popular songs and ballads, issued in full, regular, sheet music size, finely embellished. It is a novel and effective means of reminding the public, that so long as the great remedy for pain, St. Jacobs Oil, exists, there is something else that "soothes" the pains and aches of suffering humanity. Our readers can now offer no excuse when asked to "sing something," as you can obtain a list these fine selections from the above firm, who will also furnish any one or more of them at the rate of a two-cent stamp for each copy desired upon application to them or your druggist. Let us sing.

To look upon a bright, beautiful baby and remember that the only medicine it ever takes is Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup, certainly converts another family to the use of the remedy. Price 25 cts.

Wherever you find sudden changes of climate or very damp, unwholesome air, there you find nasal catarrh. Old Saul's Catarrh Cure is a specific for this ailment. At all dealers, 25 cents.

THE CONWELL LECTURE.

The interest in our Entertainment course continues unabated. It seems as though every number surpassed in interest the one preceding, and the lecture by Rev. Russell H. Conwell last Monday evening was no exception to the rule. Mr. Conwell is a born orator. He is a man of impressive appearance on the platform, over six feet tall, erect as an arrow, a perfect picture of physical health and manly strength. He has a powerful voice, which has been admirably trained, and in a literary point of view his lecture was a gem. He began by paying a tribute to the citizens of Tecumseh for sustaining such an excellent course. He found few places where he met such an intelligent audience. The idea running through the address was this: That we are surrounded by Acres of Diamonds right here where we are. They are all around us; they are in our own yards, but the trouble is we are constantly looking beyond. This feeling of unrest is the cause of many failures, both among merchants and farmers. We have talented men and women here in Tecumseh; we have fine opportunities here; we have acres of diamonds all around us, if we would only find them and take them.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

Last Thursday evening, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Sizer, 87 Locust street, Adrian, there was a very pleasant assemblage of guests, the event being the marriage of their daughter, Miss Laura, to Arthur B. Harding of Tecumseh. The friends assembled at an early hour, and at 6:10 Miss Vila Field began the wedding march, and soon after the bride and groom appeared and took their position at the bay window, under a festoon of smilax and a horse-shoe of geranium leaves and blossoms. Some of the flowers came from Alabama, including a beautiful orange blossom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. F. Harding, of Kendall, Mich., brother of the groom, in the presence of about 60 friends. The bride was neatly attired and carried a boquet of white carnations. The presents were very fine, numerous and useful. Mr. and Mrs. Harding came to Tecumseh on the evening train. They expect to engage in farming north of town. The bride has a host of friends in Adrian, where her home has been, and the groom is equally esteemed here in Tecumseh. The best wishes of all follow the young couple.

THE LOYAL LEGION.

The Loyal Legion will give an entertainment in the new Temperance Parlor Saturday evening, March 28th, commencing promptly at 7 o'clock. It is hoped that the parents and friends will come out and encourage the young people by their presence. Admission, 5 cents.

THE HOUSEKEEPER'S FRIEND.

The pioneer friend to the American House-wife is "THE HOUSEHOLD," a monthly publication founded by Geo. E. Crowell in 1868, and printed at Brattleboro, Vt., until last January, when it was moved to Boston, that it might better serve its rapidly increasing list of subscribers.

"THE HOUSEHOLD," as its name implies, is devoted to the family, and contains helps and suggestions fitted to every department of the home, and to every member of the family.

Practical women contribute practical articles to the kitchen, dining room and sewing room. Mrs. D. A. Lincoln, author of the famous "Boston Cook Book," furnishes "Practical Kitchen talks," and a "Menu For One Week," in each month's issue.

The Easter—March—issue contains the offer of three costly presents to the three subscribers who obtain the largest lists of new subscribers to the HOUSEHOLD between March 1st and August 1st. The first present is a $700 Horse and Carriage; the second an upright Miller Piano, and the third a Columbia Bicycle.

Another special feature is that every bride in the county, of six months or less, can have "THE HOUSEHOLD" for one year, by sending ten two cent stamps and a printed notice of her marriage enclosed in the letter, addressed to The Household Company.

I had a severe attack of catarrh and became so deaf I could not hear common conversation. I suffered terribly from roaring in my head. I procured a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, and in three weeks could hear as well as I ever could, and now I can say to all who are afflicted with the worst of diseases, catarrh, take Ely's Cream Balm and be cured. It is worth $1.000 to any man, woman or child suffering from catarrh.—A. E. Newman, Grayling. Mich.

OBITUARY.

On the 6th of February he received a severe injury from a colt, and although the wound healed, he never recovered strength enough to resist the encroachment of disease, which came in the form of acute inflammation of the bladder, and after nearly five weeks of intense suffering he peacefully passed to rest. The deceased was born in Burlington county, New Jersey, on the 21st of February, 1827, and was the son of Samuel and Hannah Satterthwaite, who with their seven children removed to Michigan in the year 1831, and settled on the farm now occupied by N. M. Sutton. They all grew to manhood and womanhood except one, who died in his 15th year. Sarah A. married the late Asa U. Sutton; Joseph C. was well-known in this village; William lived on a farm in Raisin; Elizabeth married Elwood Comfort and resided where her husband now lives; Daniel is Professor in a school in Canandaigua, N. Y., and he with Mary E. Sutton, an adopted niece who came to live with them at three years of age, are the only surviving members of the family. Samuel M. married Jane Comfort in 1854, and lived on his father's farm until 1862, when he removed to the farm he has since occupied. Of the two children given them, Edward B. and Anna, only the latter, with the wife and an adopted daughter remain to mourn the loss of a faithful father and husband. The circumstances of his life have been such that it required diligence and prudence to meet the demands of the present in the way of home expenditures, and secure something for the future, which he was enabled to do. But this never satisfied his natural disposition, or answered the claims he believed his Heavenly Father demands of his children. It was his greatest delight to help the work of the Lord, and to relieve the poor and needy, fully carrying out the golden rule, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." Although born a birthright member in the Society of Friends, and strict in his moral life and church observances, in the year 1871 he saw in the clear light of the truth that to be a child of God there must be a birth of the spirit in the soul, which was given him thro' faith in Christ. The holy bible was ever after the blessed book to him, and Christ Jesus his blessed Saviour, the joy of his life and sustainer in his last suffering illness. The few sentences he was enabled to say to his family the day before his death are the richest legacy he has left them. He spoke of the uncertainty of life and the certainty of death, and the great necessity of preparation for the change, and said, "The dear Lord is so good that I am sure you will always put your trust in Him; not living unto yourselves, but unto Him who died and rose again; and when you come to die you will have a building eternal in the Heavens and glorious beyond all comprehension. I have been looking at my life from all sides since hearing what the doctors said, to see if I was honest and sincere in my profession, and I can find only honesty and sincerity in my heart, and have been led to accept my Heavenly Father's will, and can see only peace and joy and happiness ahead."

A TESTIMONIAL

To Aaron Welch Post at Trenton, G. A. R., Dept. of N. J.—Greetings by Beers Post No. 140, at Tecumseh, G. A. R., Dept. of Michigan.

As the electric wire flashed the message from New Jersey to Michigan that our comrade, John Lee, late of Co. D, 18th Mich., had fallen, summoned to that eternal camping ground from whence there is no retreat. He did not fall among strangers, but among loyal old comrades of New Jersey. And by unanimous vote of Beers Post we extend to you our heartfelt gratitude for the willing hands and brotherly love extended to our esteemed comrade and the aid given the bereaved widow. May the tie that binds us together in Fraternity, Charity and Loyalty never be broken. And as years roll on and we hear the bugle sounding "lights out!" may we all be ready for inspection and prepared to enter that eternal camping ground up yonder.

EXCURSION TO HARVEY.

Everybody that wishes to see the wonderful growing town of Harvey, is invited to join our excursion party which will leave Adrian on Tuesday, March 31st, at 3 o'clock p. m., over the Lake Shore. Without a doubt this will be the largest and most interesting excursion party that has yet gone to the "Magic City." All who have seen the new town, have been surprised and pleased with its growth and prospects. Two per cent. on investments will be paid on expenses to and from Chicago and Harvey to all that buy property of Waring Bros., 161 La Salle St., Chicago. The fare from Adrian will be $4,25 each way, provided ten go and return on the same train. This number has been secured on all previous excursions to Harvey. S. Young will be at the MESSENGER office to give information and secure tickets.—Michigan Messenger.

Rev. and Mrs. Oscar Heck, of Rome, came out Monday to attend the Conwell lecture.

Geo. W. Stacy was at home last week, returning to East Buffalo Saturday afternoon.

H. E. Fink, who lived in Tecumseh fifteen years ago, has returned to the old home again.

Mrs. Jas. Wilson, of Detroit, is spending a couple of weeks at her father's, N. M. Sutton's.

Miss Minnie Thompson and Miss Florence Reynolds of Adrian, were the guests of Edith Ingersoll the fore part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. David Burger started for Elgin, Ill., Tuesday afternoon, on a week's visit, and to spend Easter Sunday with their six children in that city.

Rev. W. F. Harding gave an entertaining lecture before the Epworth League on Friday evening. He returned to his home at Kendall on Saturday.

Brig. Gen. H. B. Lathrop will inspect Co. C. on Wednesday evening Apr. 1. He inspects the clothing, books, and other State property during the day.

Ed. Hollister has moved his family down to the Tecumseh Celery Co.'s farm. He proposes to rush the celery business for all it is worth during the coming season.

Harper's Weekly of March 25th will contain illustrations of the scene of the recent occurrences in New Orleans, with portraits of some of the principal actors in the tragedy.

It will take 22,000 brick to build the foundation for the new Corliss engine at the Clinton woolen mill. A number of bricklayers from Toledo are working on the new addition.

A. W. Slayton has just closed a contract with Chicago parties to furnish them more than 1,000,000 feet of maple lumber this season. He has the logs banked for nearly all of it now.

Mrs. Mary A. Smith died at her residence in this village on the 19th inst. The funeral services were held on Saturday, the 21st, at the Baptist Church, and the burial took place at East Raisin.

A special communication of Tecumseh Lodge No. 69, F. and A. M., will be held this evening for work in the third degree. Invited guests are expected from Adrian, Clinton and Manchester.

The entire family are down with the grip at Abner Wilson's house. The grip is not considered dangerous, but it is awfully aggravating when it gathers in a whole family at once.

Mrs. T. H. Mosher, having rented the Bardwell store, will put in a stock of millinery and fancy goods about the first of April. Mrs. Mosher has had considerable experience in this line of trade and we bespeak for her a fair share of the public patronage.

Alexander Blake, 79, who died at Grand Rapids a week ago, was a pioneer of Medina village. He left there in 1853, however, and had since been successful in lumbering in the north woods. His surviving wife is a sister of Mrs. Hiram Wakefield, of Morenci.

The Clinton Local is in the self-wringing mop business. Every subscriber gets a mop; also the fellow in arrears. Local intelligence, like godliness, is next to cleanliness, and there is no excuse for not having a mop stick in the house, with which to straighten out the old man, and a newspaper with which to build—your bustle.—Adrian Times.

Peterson for April opens with two large fashion sheets, giving all the most novel and graceful designs for spring costumes. "The Tree of the Desert" is a beautifully illustrated article on palm-trees and gives much interesting and out-of-the-way information in regard to the numerous varieties.

We have received the initial number of the Michigan Statesman, a new Patron's paper just started at Lansing. It is a very creditable sheet, both editorially and typograghically, is a six column, eight page paper and is sold for $1.00 a year. We bid the Statesman welcome and wish it the best of "good luck."

We want some wood.

All maple sugar growers, in order to take advantage of the bounty afforded by the McKinley bill, must file their notices and execute the bonds between April 1 and July 1, 1891. The bounty will begin on the product of the spring of 1892.

Editor Kempton, of the Addison Courier, is making his brothers on the county tripod green with envy, by taking a trip to Florida, and writing letters home to his paper every week about the beauties of Southland. Uncle Charley Spafford is spreading the shears.

Our old friend Geo. Smith, of Toledo, who sold out his paper store a few months ago, has again embarked in business, at the corner of Monroe and Ontario streets. He now buys and sells scrap iron, metal and old rubber. It is impossible for Mr. Smith to keep out of business long and we learn that he is doing well in his new line of trade.

A meeting to organize a White Rose Club was called at Mrs. H. L. Stewart's, March 24th, and a club organized with the following officers:

Chairman—Mrs. N. M. Sutton.
Treasurer—Mrs. N. R. Merritt.
Secretary—Eunice Davidson.
Executive Com.—Miss E. Cora De Puy, Mrs. N. M. Sutton, Mrs. N. R. Merritt, Mrs. Anna Bryant Smith, Mrs. H. L Stewart.

The next meeting will be held at the W. C. T. U. rooms on Friday, March 27th. All ladies, young and old, are cordially invited to join the organization.

The farmer is being victimized again. That is, those of him who are susceptible. Here is the way it is done: A firm advertises in the papers that a first-class farm is wanted, and of course receives replies almost without number, as a great many are just now ready to dispose of their farms. The game is, on receipt of these letters to write to parties, saying that if railroad fare to and from the farm is sent to the advertisers, some one would at once come out, as from the description it is judged the farm is about what is wanted. Quite a number of people forward the railroad fare, which, of course, they never hear of again. The scoundrels skip out, and their victims are apparently without redress.

The young people of the M. E. church will give a maple sugar festival next Monday evening, at the church parlors. Supper will be served from 5 to 7, for 10 cents. Pancakes five cents extra. Every one cordially invited.

Miss Allie Warren returned from Detroit on Tuesday, bringing with her a large and well-assorted stock of spring millinery, which she desires the ladies of Tecumseh to examine. Rooms over Anderson & Co.'s dry goods house.

Don Bowen was in town yesterday, having recovered from the measles. He was kept in the house for three weeks and every member of the family except his father was down with the epidemic. During the siege the Bowen family became decidedly aristocratic, having received the ministrations of nine different nurses within the space of three weeks.

Religion is getting pretty badly mixed in this town. The Friends have been, for the past two weeks, holding revival meetings at the Universalist church. Last Thursday evening Rev. D. J. Lewis was necessarily absent, and so Bro. Arnold took his Baptist prayer meeting over in a body and assisted the Friends at their revival services. Practical friendliness of this character exercises far more influence for the cause of true religion than quarrelling over creeds.

Tecumseh Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 60, held their election of officers Monday evening. The following were elected:

W. M.—James Elliott.
D. M.—John Lowery.
Sec.—John C. Hazlett.
Treas.—Robert Elliott.
Chap.—Joseph Mellon.
D. of C.—John Linton.
1st Com.—Andrew Linton.
2d " —Wilson McClure.
3d " —James E. Lowry.
4th " —Peter Young.
5th " —Thomas Kerr.
Tyler—David Young.

While taking a short spring stroll yesterday among the village stores, we dropped into Harris and Hiteshu's, on the old corner. We were quite surprised to see the immense stock of goods on their shelves, as well as the variety. Their stock now comprises dress goods in all the latest styles, notions of all descriptions, curtains and fixtures, lace curtains in all the latest patterns, boots, shoes and rubber goods of all the best makes, the latest fashions in gents' hats, genuine Dunlap and other styles. And the low prices they give on all lines is astonishing. The gentlemen who run that store make a mighty strong three-horse team and they are laying plans to lead the procession during this year of grace 1891.

Card of Thanks.

I wish to thank the friends and neighbors, also the sisters of the Baptist church and the Women's Relief Corps of Tecumseh for their kindly assistance in the care of my mother, Mrs. Mary A. Smith, during her sickness and death, and for the beautiful florals. F. N. SMITH.

Sacked a Convent.

Two Monks Murdered by Robbers,

AND SEVERAL OTHER FRIARS ARE SEVERELY WOUNDED.

A Deed of Sacrilige and Blood in a Catholic Convent on the Island of Santa Rosa—Other News From Foreign Lands.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Advices from the Carolina Islands report the attempted pillaging of the Catholic convent on the island of Santa Rosa, the murder of two friars and a porter, and the wounding of several other friars.

While the friars were at supper about 7 o'clock on the evening of January 15, one of them, Friar Ragara, had occasion to leave the dining room, and in the dimly-lighted hall he stumbled over the body of Thomas, a native who acted as porter. Thomas was bleeding profusely from a long, deep gash in his throat and from several wounds on the body. "Robbers," he gasped, as Friar Zagara raised the poor fellow's head. A moment later his head fell back. He was dead. Friar Zagara shouted an alarm, and the friars came trooping from the table.

While Friars Gomez, Morales and Gonzales were searching on the second floor of the convent they came upon two men who were ransacking the closets of the room. The robbers sprang at Gomez and Gonzales with uplifted knives, and before they could defend themselves the knives were buried to the hilts in their breasts. As Gomez was falling he was again stabbed by the murderer. Morales ran down stairs with the robbers in close pursuit. When he was at about the middle of the stairs he suddenly threw up his hands, toppled over and fell dead. On of the robbers had thrown a sharp knife with such accurate aim that it had pierced the base of the skull and caused instant death. By this time the alarm was given and several officers of the garrison near by came hurrying to the convent and met them with a crowd of natives.

The two robbers tried to get to the side of the convent which looks on the river, open a window and jump out. They were foiled in this, and then they jumped at the crowd of friars and tried to hack and hew them to death. They were finally overpowered and bound.

The guard house, where the robbers are imprisoned, is doubly guarded for fear an attempt may be made by the natives to free them.

News From South America.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The Bureau of American Republics furnishes the following budget of South American news: The Brazil Mail Steamship company has has recently made a contract for the transportation of forty-six locomotives recently ordered from manufacturers in this country by the railway companies of Brazil.

The government of Venezuela has made a contract with a syndicate of Belgian financiers to improve the water supply of Caracas.

The official returns from Venezuela indicate that the foreign commerce for January, 1891, was the largest ever known in the history of the country.

The congress of Chili having failed to make appropriations for the government, the president of that republic has issued a decree declaring that the expenditures for the current year shall be upon the same basis as the appropriations of congress for the year previous.

The president of Chili, has given a gratuity equal to a year's pay to all the officers of the navy of that republic who refused to join with their comrades in the revolution.

Recent newspaper advices from Valparaiso report that nearly all of the traffic upon the railways of Chili has been suspended because of a coal famine in that country. The price of coal on the 17th of January was $55 a ton, and the supply was almost exhausted. Unless the blockade of the coal ports is soon raised, railway traffic and all industries requiring fuel will have to be entirely suspended.

The Official Gazette of the British colony of Barbados of February 19, contains a verbatim report of the proceedings of the legislative council of that colony, including the annual speech of His Excellency Sir Walter Joseph Sendall, governor general, and commander-in-chief. The governor-general devoted his attention almost entirely to the subject of reciprocity with the United States. On the following day a resolution was introduced into the colonial legislature for the appointment of a committee to prepare an address to the secretary of state for the colonies, setting forth the commercial situation of the island, its trade relations with the United States and the necessity of prompt action in the direction of a reciprocity treaty.

Reciprocity Conference.

TORONTO, ONT., March 23.—The Globe's Ottawa dispatch says that Messrs. Tupper, Foster and Thompson are only going to Washington for an informal talk about reciprocity. Secretary Blaine insisted upon hearing the Canadian proposals informally before he would enter into a formal conference.

A Victim of Monte Carlo.

BERLIN, March 23.—Albert Gruenwald, a leading citizen of Essen, has been missing since October last. His relatives fear that he either committed suicide or has been foully dealt with at Monte Carlo.

A Bride Blows Out the Gas.

ST. LOUIS, March 21.—Mrs. Mary Ross, a youthful bride of White Hall, Ill., had a narrow escape from death by asphyxiation at the Tremont Hotel, in East St. Louis. She came to East St. Louis in company with her husband, John Ross. They are a very young couple, the husband being only 20 and the wife a few years his junior. Before daybreak Ross arose and went downstairs, leaving his wife in bed. Later she arose and lighted the gas, but finding that it was still early she concluded to return to bed, and did so, first blowing out the gas.

Some time later Mrs. W. Hayes, proprietress of the hotel, passed Mr. and Mrs. Ross' apartments, and detected the smell of gas, and by listening attentively she could hear it escaping from the pipe. Her discovery was the means of saving Mrs. Ross' life, for she had been partially suffocated and was very near death's door.

Desperate Battle.

Thieves Run to Bay Show Brutal Courage.

ONE DETECTIVE KILLED AND ONE MORTALLY WOUNDED.

Fiendish Temper of a Female Thief—The Chief Crook Makes His Escape—A Posse in Pursuit.

PITTSBURG, PA., March 22.—Three months ago Rupert's jewelry store at Homestead, Pa., was robbed of several thousand dollars worth of goods by a man and woman. A few days later Skelly's dry goods store at McKeesport, was robbed of a quantity of silks and other valuables, it was supposed by the same persons. Both cases were placed in the hands of a detective agency in this city. detectives located the supposed thieves, and at 7 p. m. Chief Detective D. H. Gilkerson and his assistant, P. J. Murphy, went to Bull Run, a small mining village near McKeesport, to arrest a man named Fitzsimmons suspected of the burglaries.

The moment the officers entered Fitzsimmon's house and arrested him, his wife, from the folds of her dress handed her husband a self-acting revolver. Fitzsimmons began shooting at once and at the first shot Detective Gilkerson fell dead with a bullet in his brain. There was a regular fussilade between Detective Murphy, Fitzsimmons and his wife, which continued until their weapons were emptied. When the firing ceased, Fitzsimmons was lying on the floor, bleeding from several wounds, while Detective Murphy was also badly hurt and somewhat dazed, having received a shot in his left shoulder, another in his breast, and a deep furough ploughed through his chin by a third shot. The woman stood by like an infuriated animal at bay uninjured, with an empty pistol in her grasp.

A crowd soon collected. Detective Murphy placed Mrs. Fitzsimmons under guard and she was taken to McKeesport jail. Before Detective Murphy had fully recovered from the shock and excitement Fitzsimmons jumped from the room and under cover of the darkness made his escape to the river mountains. A search party was organized and are in pursuit. Dr. Black was called and accompanied Detective Murphy and the remains of Chief Gilkerson to McKeesport.

LATER—Murphy's wounds are more serious than at first supposed, but he will probably recover. Fitzsimmons and his wife are comparatively unknown here, and are believed to be a pair of New York crooks. Mrs. Fitzsimmons was seen at the jail but refused to make any statement.

THE CROPS.

Excellent Wheat and Fruit Conditions Reported.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The weekly crop bulletin for the week ending yesterday, issued by the signal office, says: Cold weather has continued during the week, generally throughout the northern states, over which the ground is generally frozen and spring work delayed. In the northwest the ground is generally covered with snow, which is disappearing rapidly and which will furnish an sufficient moisture in the spring wheat region to assure an excellent start for the crop. The weather was favorable throughout the fall wheat region, extending from Virginia and Ohio westward to Kansas and Nebraska, over which the conditions are reported as favorable and prospects excellent. Farm work is in progress as far south as Kentucky, Missouri and Southern Kansas, although the season is backward. In New England the weather was unfavorable for sugar making, but favorable for fruit, the latter conditions extending over the fruit regions of the middle Atlantic states, where the low temperature occurred in time to delay the budding of fruit trees without injury.

The week was cold in the South Atlantic states, and too much rain has retarded farm work. Frost injured early vegetables in southern Virginia on the sixteenth. North Carolina reports winter wheat and oats in good condition, and South Carolina reports little work yet accomplished. Generally throughout the cotton region the week has been the most favorable of the season. Corn planting is being pushed vigorously and gound is being prepared for cotton, except in Texas, where cotton planting is well under way, and grain doing well. The week was very favorable in Arkansas and Tennessee, where conditions are all reported favorable; work is progressing rapidly, and fruit generally uninjured.

The special telegrams have not been received from the Pacific coast, but the weather during the week, as shown by daily reports, was generally favorable, well-distributed showers having occurred throughout California, and heavy rains on the North Pacific coast.

FOSTER'S FIGURES

Seem to Indicate that Gold Coin is Getting Scarce.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The amount of gold now on hand in the treasury department is $296,000,000. Against this there is in circulation in gold certificates $145,000,000. In treasury cash, there are $28,000,000 in gold certificates. This leaves net gold in the treasury, coin and bullion, or, as it is called, "free gold," $151,000,000, In March, 1888, the net gold in the treasury was $219,000,000. In the same month of 1889, the net gold was $198,000,000. In the corresponding month of 1890, the net gold was reduced to $185,000,000. The figures for 1891 show a reduction for the past three years of $68,000,000. The claim of the treasury department, that its gold is scarce, would seem, from the above, to be well founded.

EVA HAMILTON

Offered $20,000 to Settle Her Claim Against Robert Ray.

NEW YORK, March 22.—It is said that Eva Mann or Hamilton has been offered $20,000 as a settlement of all her claims against the estate of Robert Ray Hamilton, and that, while she insists on more, she will be compelled to take this amount or make a fight in the court for a dower, in which the Hamilton family believe they can defeat her. The $20,000 is offered more for peace than because of any fear of her compelling payment of any sum.

Another One Gone

General Joseph E. Johnston Is Dead.

NEARLY ALL OF THE PROMINENT MEN OF THE CIVIL WAR

Are Now Passed From Earth—General Johnston's Life—Circumcumstances of his Death.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—General Joseph Eggleston Johnston died of heart failure at his residence in this city at 11:15 o'clock p. m. With him at the last moment was Ex-Governor McLane, of Maryland, and the nurse. His death was very sudden and a few moments before dissolution there was no outward appearance to indicate it. He then gasped feebly once or twice and the great leader of armies had himself obeyed the last summons.

General Johnston had been confined to his room for several weeks past and during the last few days had gradually grown weaker. During the past twenty-four hours he had remained in a semi-conscious condition and was aroused with difficulty. His death was so peaceful that Governor McLane, who was at his bedside, could not for several moments believe that the general was dead. There was no sigh, not a movement; his heart ceased to beat and he sank to rest as peacefully and as quietly as a babe to sleep. In addition to his heart trouble the general had contracted a severe cold, when he recently acted as pall-bearer at the funeral of Admiral Porter and General Sherman.

General Johnston was born near Farmville, Va., February 3, 1809. He graduated in the same class with General R. E. Lee from West Point in 1829 and outranked Lee at the outbreak of the war of the rebellion, being his senior as a general in the Confederate army. After the war he served in congress from the Richmond, Va., district, and was subsequently commissioner of railroads, being appointed by President Cleveland.

The Funeral.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The preparations for the funeral of the late General Johnston are practically completed. It will take place at 11 a. m. at St. John's church tomorrow and the remains will be transferred to Baltimore for interment. The active pall bearers will be members of the ex-Confederate Association of this city. List of honorary pall bearers includes Senators Morgan and Daniels, General Parker of the United States army, Admirals Rodgers and Temple and others distinguished in military and civil life.

MOONSHINE WHISKY.

THE FIRST STILL OF THIS KIND EVER FOUND

In the Buckeye State is Unearthed in Putnam County—The Proprietor is Arrested and Taken to Toledo—Prominent Parties Interested.

FINDLAY, O., March 21.—A moonshine distillery making five gallons of 90 per cent. pure whisky per day, was surprised and captured last night near Port Jennings, Putnam county. The proprietor, Anton Rollinger, who has been running the illicit stills five years, was taken to Toledo by the United States revenue officers for a preliminary examination. A number of prominent persons are said to be interested in his stills, which is the first of the kind unearthed in Ohio many years.

RESTORED TO LIBERTY.

Pathetic Scene Between a Convict Mother and Her Child.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 23.—A pathetic scene was enacted in the governor's office on the application for the pardon of Mrs. Mary A. Anderson, a life prisoner in the state reformatory, for the murder of her second husband. In 1870 Mrs. Adams and family lived in Jennings county, and she caused her husband's death by poison, She was the mother of three children, the youngest a girl aged 5, and after her conviction the little ones were distributed among friends and the youngest found a home in Missouri When she grew to honored womanhood she married a wealthy man in St. Louis. Throughout her girlhood she supposed her mother was dead, and this week she went to Columbus to attend the funeral of her sister.

While there she asked to be shown her mother's grave, and in this way she first learned of the life imprisonment. She went to the reformatory and met her mother, and for a time the old lady could not recall her, as she had slipped entirely from her memory, but when she did there was an intensely dramatic scene. Mrs. Adams is old and mentally and physically weak, but the daughter is abundantly able to provide for her for the remainder of her days. The governor acted favorably upon the application for pardon, and she left the institution in care of her daughter. It was the first time she had been beyond the prison walls for many years, and she was overjoyed beyond description over her release.

LA GRIPPE IN CHICAGO.

The Hospitals Are Becoming Overcrowded With Patients.

CHICAGO, March 20.—La grippe continues its ravages, with no signs of abatement. Wednesday forty-four persons suffering with the disease, complicated in some cases with pneumonia, were admitted to the county hospital, and Tuesday fifty-five were taken in.

The hospital was so crowded that many of the patients were compelled to lie on mattresses placed on the floor. Up to the present time all those who have been taken in have been well cared for, but if the applications continue in such numbers there will not be room for them.

MAKES HIM TIRED.

The President Out of Patience With Commissioner Morgan.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Private Secretary Halford says that he had no idea that the president had demanded the resignation of Indian Commissioner Morgan. It is believed, however, that President Harrison is annoyed at the continual friction growing out of Commissioner Morgan's administration of Indian affairs.

TONSORIAL DELIGHTS.

I lay in the barber's chair;
"Shave!" I said.
'Round my neck the artist rare—
(Count, high-bred),
Tightly tucked a towel thin,
Daubed some lather on my chin,
With his fingers rubbed it in
Till it spread.

Then he stropped his razor blade
For awhile,
And some squares of paper laid
On a pile;
Then he took me by the nose,
Scraped me where the whisker grows,
Chatting sweetly, I suppose,
To beguile.

Then he sponged my face and scraped
It some more.
And, when not a hair escaped,
Bay rum o'er
Mouth and ears and eyes he sopped,
Fanned me till the moisture stopped,
Then some baby powder slopped
On galore.

Then he tapped me on the pate
With his comb,
Meaning me to sit up straight
As at home;
"Hair wants cutting, sir," he said,
Over me a gown he spread,
Then his scissors on my head
'Gan to roam.

Said he, having clipped with speed,
"A shampoo
For your dandruff, sir, you need,
Tonic, too."
With more towels I was bound,
Then in soapy suds was drowned,
While his nimble fingers found
Work to do.

O! how nice that scratching seemed
On my head;
I just shut my eyes and dreamed,
As in bed.
Soon, too soon, it stopped, and I,
Blinded with the dripping rye,
To a marble basin nigh
Straight was led.

Phew! came water hot and cold
On my crown,
While the artist, taking hold,
Rubbed it down.
Then returned I to the chair,
Where he oiled and brushed my hair
So to hide the spot that's bare
From the town.

On his comb my mustache lone
Then was laid,
And he waxed it till it shone
With pomade;
Then he, to my looks assist,
Gave the ends a stylish twist,
Which the ladies can't resist,
I'm afraid.

"Next!" he grandly called as I,
Scented sweet,
Feeling young again and spry,
Left my seat.
While my hat and coat were brushed
In the glass I gazed and blushed—
Then a dollar paid and rushed
Down the street.

HIS STRANGE BRIDE.

How Max Rutherford Married, Lost and Found a Wife.

It was a dingy, scantily furnished room in a second-class boarding-house, and as Max Rutherford glanced around a sense of disgust filled him.

"Will it be like this, always?" he sighed. "Will I ever reach the goal? Here I am head over heels in debt—wish some good fellow would advance me a few pounds until I finish this brief. If I could only win this case I believe I could see my way clear. However, I'll hope for the best." And he lit a cigar and prepared to enjoy it.

Max Rutherford was alone in this world, as far as near relatives were concerned, although he could count his friends by the score.

He was educated for the bar, but before that education was completed his father died, bequeathing his little fortune, a few thousands, to Max. As Max was an uncommonly generous fellow, as his friends were fond of saying, and being somewhat extravagant in his tastes and mode of living, he did not find it at all difficult to spend those few thousands in a very short time. And so, at the age of twenty-five, we find him handsome, honest, good-hearted, and bravely striving to reach the pedestal of his ambition, but poor.

"Now for the club-room. I don't want to stay here longer than necessary," and he picked up his hat.

The landlady met him at the door.

"A lady to see you, sir. She is in the parlor."

"A lady? All right; I will go down immediately."

At the parlor door, which was wide open, he suddenly stopped. There, sitting beside a table, back to him, was the slight, black-robed form of a woman. Her head was bowed low and her hands were tightly clasped. She looked the very picture of grief and despair.

As he crossed the threshold she arose, and with a quick, girlish grace moved toward him. Then Max saw that she was heavily vailed, and she made no movement to throw the vail back.

"You are Max Rutherford, are you not?"

Max started as the low, musical tones fell on his ear.

"I beg that you will pardon me for this intrusion, but truly," and the voice grew more earnest, "I felt obliged to come, my trouble is so great. Nay, I was driven to it, and no one but yourself can aid me. Will you listen to my story?"

"Certainly. Pray be seated."

"I am Helen Castleton, and an orphan, and, doubtless, a stranger to you."

"You are? I have never had the pleasure of meeting you before," he answered.

"For ten years I have lived with my uncle, my mother's brother. He is immensely wealthy. I am supposed to be his heiress. But my life for the past three years has been most unhappy. I am not of age, and shall not be for a year to come, and my uncle is determined to persuade me to marry a man old enough to be my father. He, too, is worth his millions, and for that reason my uncle bids me marry him. This man follows me wherever I go, professing to love me, but those professions fill my soul with disgust and fear. I hate him! I'll die before I consent to wed him!" and her voice trembled so that Max longed to snatch away that vail and gaze on the possessor of that pleading, tearful voice.

"I ran away from home two years ago," she continued, "but my uncle and the one who claims to be my lover found and brought me home. Home! ah, heaven! what a home! All the home I have had since I was a child; yet it is little better than a prison. I have never had any girl acquaintances. He would not allow me to see any one excepting his own friends, and they were old money-seeking men. I disliked them all.

"To-morrow morning my uncle says I must marry this man—that I shall be forced to do it. I can not! oh, I can not! Heaven let me die first!" And with a piteous movement she held both hands out to Max.

He clasped them in his, and as he did so, a pitying yearning tenderness filled his heart for this vailed stranger.

"Tell me how I can help you," he murmured.

"You can help me, and you only."

"How?"

"Max Rutherford, will you—marry me?" Then, as if deeply ashamed, she turned from him, clasping her hand over her eyes.

As for Max, if a bombshell had exploded at his feet he could not have felt more astonished or bewildered, but before he could articulate a word she turned to him again.

"Listen, please. I have seen you day after day, as you passed my uncle's house. You looked so honest and kind that somehow I felt that you could and would help me. Am I right or wrong? You are only a struggling lawyer."

He smiled bitterly at that.

"I have many thousands in my own right. My father willed it to me. They can not touch that. I have drawn it all. Here it is," and she laid a roll of bank bills on the table beside him. "I ask you to accept it. It may help you. You wonder why I do not take it and flee. I do not because my uncle and that man would follow me, even to the end of the world, so it would be utterly useless. I have turned to the only refuge left me. I have crushed my pride and begged you to marry me. I was spurred on by my uncle's last threat. I realize what I have done only too well—realize that I have abased my womanhood by coming to you, a total stranger, but oh, be pitiful!" and then, completely exhausted, she turned to the table and bowed her head on it, and sobs, deep and bitter, convulsed her form.

Max hesitated, but for only a moment, then laid his hand on her head.

"I will do as you ask; but I can not accept your money. No, keep it. But why do you not allow me to see your face?"

She lifted her head and eagerly clasped his hand.

"You must accept the money," she said; "and I do not remove my vail, because it is best for you never to see my face. I was unwomanly, unkind enough to ask you to marry me, but I can not and will not ask you to link your life with mine, except in name. No, we will part at the church door; then if we should meet in the far future, you will not recognize the face of your wife."

"I shall never forget your voice!" he exclaimed half passionately.

"Life will not be very much changed to you, unless—you love another. Tell me, do you? It is not too late. Better—far better that I should wed the other rather than tear you from your love."

"No, I have no love," and his quick, frank answer reassured her. "I am perfectly free and my own master, therefore I am yours, because you wish it."

"Thank you," she said, simply but earnestly. "Then follow me now, for to-morrow will be too late."

He did as she bade him.

There was a closed carriage at the door, and as Max stepped inside he heard her order the driver to proceed to St. George's parsonage.

"If you are willing," she said to Max in an humble tone, "we will have Rev. Janues marry us. You will ask him to follow us to the church."

Then, as if it had suddenly dawned on her that she was asking this man to give up much for her sake, she clasped her hands appealingly.

"Oh, how you must hate me!" she cried. "Truly, I am frightened now at the step I have taken! Shall we turn back—shall I marry the other?"

"Never! You shall marry me. You wish it, and—yes—I wish it also."

He could not see the glad light that flashed into her eyes.

They soon reached the parsonage, and a few minutes later were on their way to the church, accompanied by the pastor—a kind, benevolent looking gentleman, who gazed in silent wonder at the vailed girl.

It was over at last. Max took his mother's wedding ring off his own finger and placed it on Helen's, and thus the bonds were sealed. Helen Castleton and Max Rutherford were husband and wife.

At the altar, as they were turning to go down the aisle, Max bent low and whispering said:

"My wife, will you not allow me to see your face? once—just once."

Without a word, she tore the vail from her face, flung off the long, black cape that encircled her form, then, throwing back her head with a proud, graceful movement, she faced him.

Max gave a faint cry of astonishment when he saw the glorious face that was revealed to him—a sorrowful face, as white as marble, large, dark, plaintive eyes that looked at him frankly yet pleadingly—eyes that thrilled him through and through. It was a face that Max Rutherford never could forget.

He made a movement as if to clasp her in his arms, but she started back, and, with a frightened cry, snatched up her cape, then turned and fled down the long aisle. And before Max could realize it she was driven away.

Nothing was left now for him to do but to return to his boarding place.

Three years have passed and Max Rutherford has reached the goal at last. He has made for himself a name and has attained a position to be proud of. He won not only that one case, but many more. His briefs were concise yet eloquent, sharp yet truthful and powerful, and success crowned these fearless, untiring efforts.

London society now greets him with extended arms, yet he turns away and shuns all such advances.

He is not happy or even satisfied—there is something wanting. He yearns with all his soul to make one other plea—longs to win one other case, and then he will rest content.

He has never seen or heard one word from his wife since that strange marriage occurred. His search for her has been untiring but fruitless.

Not a penny of her money did he touch, but carefully treasured it, hoping to be able to restore it to her ere long.

One day he was called to the bedside of a dying man, who wished to make his will. As Max entered the room the attendants were sent out.

It was not an ill-looking face that Max gazed on, but it was aged by suffering and there was a haunted expression in the eyes painful to see.

"Before the will is drawn up," he said, "I wish to make a confession. You have a good face, and I have heard of your merited success as a barrister. Perhaps you can help me."

"I will endeavor to do so."

"Three years ago my niece, Helen Castleton, was living with me. She was a good girl and I did not appreciate her. I tried to persuade her to marry a man old enough to be her father, but a man worth even more than I am, and I can count my wealth by the millions. She refused to marry him. At last I said she should be forced to it. I remember that she replied that she would sooner die. And that night she fled. We found her the next morning, just outside of London. She proudly held up a folded certificate, saying that we were too late, that she was already married. Then I—wicked sinner that I was and am—I cursed her, adding that I never wished to see her ungrateful face again, and I never have. May Heaven forgive. I would give much now to see her once more—little Helen, my dead sister's child!" and his eyes glistened with tears. He continued more slowly:

"I wish you to search for her. Find her, and I leave the sum of ten thousand dollars to you. The remainder is Helen's. If she be dead I bequeath it to her husband and her heirs. I wish to sign a will to that effect. Make haste! Send for the housekeeper to witness. Quick! I can not live much longer." And the dying man gasped for breath.

The will was drawn and signed.

"You will search for her?" he pleaded.

"Yes, and Heaven helping me I will find her," and Max turned away struggling to master himself. As he did so, the door opened, and a woman's form flew to the bedside.

"Uncle!" she cried, "they told me you were dying. Uncle! uncle! do not die without taking back that terrible curse—for mother's sake bless your niece."

"Helen, thank God! I bless you—forgive your uncle. Pray—for—pardon!" and with that last word his soul passed away.

For a moment longer she knelt in silent prayer, then pressing a kiss on the closed lips she arose, and turning noticed Max for the first time.

He stood there with outstretched arms.

"Helen, my wife, come to me!"

With a pitiful cry she tottered towards him, and he folded her in his arms, pressing warm, passionate kisses on her face.

"Let me go, Max," she pleaded. "You shame me! Think what I did—I—"

"I do. You asked me to marry you, my precious love, now I ask you to strive to love your husband. My wife, I love you! I have loved you from the moment you unvailed your face to me."

"Max! You can not mean it! Don't, for you torture me!" and she strove in vain to free herself.

"Listen," she said. "After I left you I traveled as companion to a lady. Lately I heard that my uncle was dying, and that curse troubled me so that I returned to London, just in time to receive his blessing. I was hoping that I would not meet you. Let me go and hide my face from your sight."

"Never! I have mourned your loss more that you can know. Now that I have found you do you think I can give you up? No, my love shall hold you. Darling, try and love me."

An incredulous joy shone in her fair face.

"Is it true, Max—husband; do you mean it—do you want me—me?" and she flung her arms around his neck, and he saw the glad love-light beaming in her eyes.

"Yes, I want you—my wife."—Lillian May Leslie, in Boston Globe.

The Average Man.

One of the most galling tyrannies of modern life is that of the average man. Did you ever see the average man? No. Are you acquainted with any one who ever did? No. Have you any reason to believe that the average man ever existed? No, again. The fact is he is a myth. He never did and never will exist. He is a philosophical abstraction, a stage property of the metaphysician, a straw man, set up to be worshiped or reviled, as the case may be. And yet we all bow down to him and talk in hushed whispers about his thoughts, deeds and desires. We are rejoiced when he is supposed to smile, and tremble when he frowns. Statisticians burn the midnight oil in order to do sums about him. Statesmen give up their lives in his service. Political economists look solemn as they take his measure. Physicians tell us how he may keep well, and preachers adjust the messages of the Gospel to his comprehension. And yet, of all the myriads of men who have ever lived, every one differs more or less from the supposed average man. Who will deliver the world from the tyrannical rule of the average man?—N. Y. Tribune.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.

Dr. Brown Sequard's elixir of youth may be an important discovery, but every one knows that Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure certainly is. It has given thousands afflicted serious heart disease a New Lease of Life. Druggists who can observe its effects on many customers everywhere speak very highly of it. Mr. John Weaver, Knightstown, Ind., says: "I have sold much of Dr. Miles New Cure and have received many good reports." O. Monroe, of Dunkirk, N. Y., reports large sales. "And the best part of it is every bottle has given satisfaction." Sold and guaranteed by Baker & Hall.

ONE DOLLAR WELL INVESTED.

If you have bad breath, constipation, pain in the small of the back, discolored skin, nervousness, or dizziness your only wise course is to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. It will cleanse the blood of all impurities, regulates the Kidneys and Liver, and thus restore a healthy glow to your checks again. All druggists; one dollar a bottle.

Remember that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has no equal as a specific for colds, coughs, and all affections of the throat and lungs. For nearly half a century it has been in greater demand than any other remedy for pulmonary complaints. All druggists have it for sale.

DON'T GIVE UP

The use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One bottle may not cure "right off" a complaint of years; persist until a cure is effected. As a general rule, improvement follows shortly after beginning the use of this medicine. With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Perseverance in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradicated."—L. W. English, Montgomery City, Mo.

"My system was all run down; my skin rough and of yellowish hue. I tried various remedies, and while some of them gave me temporary relief, none of them did any permanent good. At last I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, continuing it exclusively for a considerable time, and am pleased to say that it completely

Cured Me.

I presume my liver was very much out of order, and the blood impure in consequence. I feel that I cannot too highly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla to any one afflicted as I was."—Mrs. N. A. Smith, Glover, Vt.

"For years I suffered from scrofula and blood diseases. The doctors' prescriptions and several so-called blood-purifiers being of no avail, I was at last advised by a friend to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and now feel like a new man, being fully restored to health."—C. N. Frink, Decorah, Iowa.

Measles in the vicinity are like the wind which "bloweth where it listeth.' It attacks men, women and children and lays them low. Mrs. George Hard, Mrs. Ed Seamark and Miss Lizzie Kirk are the last on the list of the afflicted.

Calvin Ellis had his head and face badly cut at the woolen mill Monday. He was trying to get out of the way of a lot of bricks he saw was about to fall and slipped from the platform he was on, striking on a pile of bricks below. His injuries were not serious.

One of the hod-carriers working at the woolen mill fell from a ladder last Saturday and struck his head on a heavy timber. He was unconscious when picked up but soon rallied and is now able to be about. He was just recovering from the effects of a fall of seventy-five feet when in Kansas City.

Married, Wednesday evening March 25th, at the residence of the bride's mother, Miss Ida McConnell to Mr. George C. Miller of Chicago. There were about forty guests present to witness the marriage ceremony, offer their congratulations and partake of the excellent refreshments. The bride has always lived among us and leaves many friends here. She was a graduate from the Union School of the class of '80, and immediately after secured a position in the primary department. She remained in the school as instructress nearly seven years. For the last two or three years she has been among friends away from here a great deal of the time, and for several months in Chicago. We learn that Mr. Miller has held the position that he now occupies in the post-office department, about 28 years. Mr. and Mrs. Miller left Thursday morning for Chicago. The good wishes of many friends are theirs.

AN UNCOMPLETED STORY.

From a late copy of the Springfield Sunday News, we clip the following item which will interest Dr House's old Tecumseh friends:

Dr. R. B. House is a friend of the newspaper-boys and on dull days they sometimes hang around his office until I fear they make life a burden for him. The other morning he was besieged in his castle by three of them at one time, all hunting items. In a confidential tone he told them he had a piece ot news for them of a most startling character. He had intended keeping it a secret but the patient did not object and he would tell. The boys pulled out their pads and pencils and in great expectancy prepared to take down every particular, as the doctor went on:

"I was last night called to attend one of the most curious cases I have ever met with in all my practice. A little boy on the North Side was taken with convulsions, and upon inquiry I found that the little fellow had been playing that afternoon with some young frogs that he caught from Warder's mill-race and in some manner had swallowed one of the little creatures! An examination revealed the fact that the frog was still alive, in the boy's stomach! Emetics failed to have any effect upon the boy—the stomach-pump was useless and I was in despair."

The doctor stopped to write a prescription, and the boys were at fever-heat with visions of a double-headed display article before their eyes. The M. D. at length continued:

"At last, in desperation I remembered that an ordinary garter-snake lives to a great extent upon young toads and frogs. Now, if I could only procure one of the reptiles, and by holding to its tail, allow it to crawl down the lad's aesophagus and capture Mr. Frog——"

But the story was never completed; the boys had fled and didn't go near the office again for a week. One of them, however, occasionally asks the doctor if it was really and truly true.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Linna Allen has had an attack of grip.

The business of the present hour is measles.

There are about 500 logs, many of them 3½ and 4 feet in diam., awaiting the saw in the Deming boys' woods.

William Lambkin is recovering from a severe attack of measles. Artie and Ormy have been down with them also.

Among the latest victims are Leon, Nina and Earl Allen, Alton and Hoyt Whelan, Carl Wisner, Wilfred Allen and Lulu Hanns.

THE SPRING ELECTIONS.

ATTORNEY GENERAL ELLIS, in reply to Lawson C. Holden, City Attorney of Saginaw, says the Lansing correspondent of the Detroit Journal, has given an opinion of interest in view of the approaching spring election. Mr. Holden asked "whether the names of our candidates for Supreme Judges and Regents must be on the same slip or ballot with the ward constables."

Mr. Ellis has received so many other queries of a like nature that he goes into the subject at great length, arriving at the following conclusion:

1. The constitution provides for the "township meeting" and the "general election." The biennial election for a time was held to be the only general election; but the Supreme Court has decided during the present term, in the case of the Attorney General vs. Burch, that "any spring election at which Justices of the Supreme Court and Regents of the University elected is necessarily also a general election, and is so regarded." But there is a broad distinction between the "township meeting" and the general election.

2. The ticket containing the name of the Supreme Court Judge and Regents, being a general ticket, must be printed under the supervision of the Secretary of State.

3. He would recommend the names of candidates for Circuit Judge be placed on the general ticket.

4. All the provisions of act 263 of the session laws of 1889, must be carried into effect by local officers concerning the state ticket, and the booth arrangements should be observed in voting any ticket at such election.

5. The general ticket should be put in one box and the local or "township meeting" ticket in another, and if there should be other tickets they may be placed in their respective boxes.

It is not extremes of heat and cold so much as the sudden changes in temperature that cause certain climates to be unhealthful. When, however, the system is invigorated with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, these changes are rarely attended with injurous results.

"Othello's occupation's gone." He used to spend days and nights cursing the fates and the rheumatism. Now he only lies down and laughs to think how easily he was cured by Salvation Oil. at 25 cts.

Wm. H. Vanderford. Esq., Editor of the Democratic Advocate, Westminster, Md., writes, that he has used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and knows it to be a good medicine. Buy it. Try it. 25 cents.

MICHIGAN NEWS.

Items of Interest Gathered From Michigan Cities and Towns.

The Michigan Salt association is defunct.

Jacob Jager, of Detroit, aged 69 years, suicided. Drink and despondency.

"Garland" Petoskey, the champion roller-skater of Michigan, is dead.

Detroit and Cleveland navigation companies have agreed not to open navigation until May 15.

A planing and shingle mill at Luther, belonging to W. L. Atwood, burned. Loss $6,000, insurance $500.

The ladies of the Methodist church of Muskegon served the G. A. R. with dinner last week and secured $250.

Iron Mountain has 2,000 Italians who have sent in a protest against such business as the New Orleans massacre.

The Kalamazoo division headquarters of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern have been removed to Grand Rapids.

The Seventh-day Adventists at their conference at Battle Creek are considering the matter of establishing an orphans' home there.

There were over 1,000 people who suffered loss in the Fowlerville fire. The calamity, it is feared, will prove a death blow to the town.

The Detroit opera house, the finest theatre in the city, was partly destroyed by fire. The loss will reach $50,000, but is covered by insurance.

Rev. Caroline J. Bartlett, pastor of the Unitarian church, at Kalamazoo, has resigned and her work will be continued by Rev. Marion Murdock.

A badger killed 14 hens, three ducks and six roosters in a poultry house near Bancroft the other night and then buried the whole lot of them in a single grave.

Geert Saggens, a pioneer of Holland, is dead. He was eighty-one years old. His father lived to be 107 years, and several relatives passed the century mark.

The heaviest snow storm of the season raged in the vicinity of Kalaska. Traffic on the railroads was delayed several days and the country roads were impassable.

The Bay City, Caro & Port Huron road is a project in which Albert E. Boone and a party of Ohio men have interested Bay City capitalists. It is a scheme to tap the Sebewaing coal fields.

Lieutenant W. L. Simpson, professor of mathematics and civil engineering at the agricultural college at Lansing, has been promoted to first lieutenant U. S. A. in Arizona. His resignation at the college has been tendered.

The Saginaw poor house burned yesday and the forty-two inmates, many of them maimed and imbeciles, had a narrow escape for their lives. Nothing was saved from the building, and it was with the greatest difficulty that Charles Peace, who died at night, was dragged out. Two of the inmates escaped.

The Michigan legislature is considering a curious railroad bill. The bill, which was favorably reported by the house committee on railroads, requires all railroads to transport members of the legislature free of charge while they are engaged in legislative duties and further provides that each member shall be allowed 150 pounds of baggage. The bill does not accord with another now under consideration in the House, which makes it a penal offense for a legislator to accept or use a pass.

At the trial of Dennis Hubbard, in Detroit, a remarkable scene occurred. He was accused of felonious assault. As his trial progressed the evidence became so strong against him that the lawyer conducting the defense arose and washed his hands of further participation. The attorney gave as his reason that he believed Hubbard guilty and thought he ought to be hung. Spectators in the court room were so enraged that Hubbard narrowly escaped lynching.

Mrs. William Edwards, of Lansing, has bequeathed her body to the dissecting table. Nearly a year ago Mrs. Edwards became ill, and it was found that the trouble was caused by an internal cancer. When she learned the cause of her sufferings Mrs. Edwards exacted a pledge that after her death her body should be turned over to the physicians and dissected, in order that the medical profession may be hereafter better equipped with information regarding the malady in question. Her death is hourly expected.

That the Seventh Day Adventists are energetic and persistent workers at home as well as abroad no one who attends the meetings of the conference can doubt. Rev. S. N. Haskell, who has labored in all lands, urged upon his hearers the need of more workers, particularly among the laymen. In China these had more influence than ministers. Home missions were discussed, especially in Michigan. At Petoskey, where thousands gather every summer, it was suggested that a church be built. The suggestion was favorably received and $700 was donated for that object by the Michigan delegates. Mrs. E. What, a prominent anthor in the denomination gave an entertaining address. The International Sabbath School association held a meeting for the discussion of plans, reports showing the membership to have increased 5,000 during the past year.

TELEGRAPH TICKS.

The president has not yet accepted Treasurer J. N. Huston's resignation.

The Republicans nominated John R. Mosby for mayor of Cincinnati Saturday.

Walter F. Hoge, aged 30, was caught in the shafting in a mill at Philadelphia and killed.

A man named Williams, from Boston, fell from a flying trian at Bethlehem, Pa., and was killed.

The correspondence bearing upon the resignation of Land Commissioner Lewis A. Groff, is given to the press.

McLaughlin defeated Dodds in the billiard tournament at Pittsburg, Saturday night by a score of 300 to 187.

Robert Willink, while engaged in a prize fight at Savannah, Ga., received injuries that resulted in concussion of the brain and death.

A government official is investigating the report of the abuse of Hungarian laborers employed by railway contractors near Pocahontas, Virginia.

William Dougherty, said to be a brother of Daniel Dougherty, the well known lawyer and orator, was found dead in a cellar at Philadelphia Saturday.

The L. & N. "cannon-ball" train leaving Louisville at 2:45 p. m., south bound, ran into an open switch just out of the city Saturday. The engineer was killed and the train badly smashed. No passengers killed.

THE BOOK TRUST KNOCKED OUT.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

Some six months ago we began the publication of our reprint of the famous Encyclopædia Britannica in 25 Volumes, which we issued at $1.50 per volume. The price of the English edition always has been and still is $8.00 per volume, and the Scribner edition $5.00 per volume in the cheapest binding.

That the public appreciate so great a bargain is shown by the fact that over half a million volumes of this reprint have been sold in less than six months.

This elegant new edition we still offer at the same price, $1.50 per volume. This is the greatest bargain ever known in books.

Better still, we will deliver the set complete on small easy payments, to suit the convenience of customers.

Remember this is not an abridgement, but the great Edinburgh ninth edition, reproduced page for page, with important articles on American subjects rewritten to date by eminent American authors, and new maps, later and better than in any other edition.

We further announce that we have in preparation three volumes of "American Additions and Revisions," thoroughly supplementing the original work. With these supplemental volumes you will have at small cost an Encyclopædia unapproachable in completeness; a thorough "digest of the libraries of the world," and a complete record of current progress and events.

SPECIAL OFFER.—We claim that our reprint compares favorably with the high priced editions in every respect, and in respect to maps, and strength and beauty of bindings is superior to them. In order that this claim may be tested by a personal inspection we make the following proposition: We will furnish volume I. at 60 cts.—a fraction of actual cost—if sent by express. Add 40 cts. postage if wanted by mail. Amount paid for Volume I. will be credited on price of set when ordered.

MARVELOUS ENDURANCE.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3 000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time.

No wonder there are so many HEART FAILURES. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swolen aukles, etc. Dr. Franklen Miles' NEW HEART CURE is the only relirabler emedy. Sold by Baker & Hall.

DO YOU WANT A PENSION?

Do You Want Your Pension Increased.

There is a New Pension Law and nearly every soldier is now entitled to a pension.

DR. J. H. REYNOLDS

Late a member of the Board of Examining Surgeons at Adrian, Mich., and who has examined over two thousand soldiers for pensions, will hereafter devote two hours each day to

ENSION BUSINESS

The Doctor was a soldier and is a pensioner, and with his five years' experience as Examining Surgeon for Pensions, believes he can make it PAY YOU to come and see him.

He knows the RATE on every known disability.

Knows what Diseases or Disabilities are the results of any other.

Knows (as every EXAMINING SURGEON will tell you) that many men do not draw what the law allows them, because their claims are not presented in proper shape.

Knows how to put your claim in such shape that you will get pay for ALL results of the disease or wound for which you are pensioned.

Knows all the recent decisions made by Commissioner and how to give you the advantage of them in dollars.

Knows that some recent rulings are of vital importance to many pensioners, if their claims are only properly presented.

Knows whether you are entitled to Rerating, and how to get it.

I charge just the legal fees because I earn them ALWAYS BRING YOUR CERTIFICATE WITH YOU.

If you want the benefit of a Pension while you live go and see Dr. Reynolds.

I can get you from $2 to $6 more per month under the new law than other agents.

To any person examined by the board, at Adrian, before Aug. 1, 1889, I have something of importance to tell you.

Come and let us examine you (no charge) and will tell you all about it. About one-third of all the soldiers examined while I was on the board were rated for disabilities not claimed. You had better come and see me about it.

Correspondence solicited, with stamp for reply

15 East Maumee-st., Adrian, Mich.

ATTENTION, Soldiers & Sailors,

Under the new pension law just passed by Congress all Soldiers and Sailors who served 90 days in the Rebellion, and who are disabled from any cause permanently, (need not have originated in the service,) are entitled to a pension of from $6 to $12. All soldiers' widows, minor children and dependent parents come under this law. Being located at the Capital near the U. S. Pension office, we can give our personal attention to your claim and thus ascertain any defect quickly and supply the same.

Write for blanks. Give full description of service and disabilities.

The New Manufacturing AND Temperance Town

TWO MILES SOUTH OF CHICAGO.

Your Expenses Paid if You Want to Come and See it Before Investment.—[See Herald of March 19th.]

Within 20 Minutes Ride of the Location of the World's Fair.

Many questions are being asked about HARVEY, the new temperance and manufacturing suburb of Chicago. In an effort to answer some of these it can be stated that the manufactories and shops already located there are: The Automatic Mower Works, the Harvey Printing Company, the Grennell Wagon and Steel Header Works, (recently removed from Grennell, Iowa.) The Buda Foundry Manufacturing Company, building seven fine shops was ready for business in February. The Harvey Steel Car Company, to Manufacture railway cars out of steel instead of wood, will use thirty-nine acres of land for its shops. One building just completed being 400x300 feet with self-supporting roof.

The Connor Core Drilling Company, made to operate core drills for milling purposes, and the Hardware Specialties Manufacturing Company will occupy three acres of land and will be built soon.

Other establishments besides the seven above mentioned, five of which are now on the ground, are to be located on the east side of the Illinois Central railroad and will employ many thousand operatives. Stores of all kinds, boarding houses and hotels and hundreds of residences must be built in the next few months to accommodate this army of laborers.

HARVEY is located at the junction of the Grand Trunk, Illinois Central and Big Four railroad. Thirty-eight trains daily—very soon to be more. A street car line to Chicago is an assured acquisition.

Last August it had less than a half dozen buildings, to-day more than three hundred can be counted. Our faith has become so great in the town that we want all our friends to see it.

It is a great place for a young man to go who is just beginning a business career. It offers a fine prospect for the laboring man who has small means, if full of days' work. It has already become a great harvest for carpenters and masons, which will greatly increase with the opening of spring, with high wages and good pay. But the best of all is that the saloon, the gambling den and the house of prostitution cannot enter the borders of Harvey. With good schools, good churches, good water, good drainage in a good high and dry location, Harvey is soon to become an enviable place for a good home for industrious Christians and temperance people. A full history and description, with plats of the town, can be had by addressing us, also any information relative to work or investments. Lots have been selling rapidly, but good selections can be made now for first prices, in which case good profits will surely be realized within a year. Many lots purchased just before the holidays are now selling from FIFTY TO ONE HUNDRED PER CENT. IN ADVANCE of purchase price. Lots can still be had from $200 up in choice locations. Do not delay writing or coming to see Harvey. Now is the time to locate or invest as prices will advance soon.

JAMES LANE, of Holloway, who has been to Chicago and made an investment, will be in TECUMSEH, at H. L. JONES' Restaurant, every Wednesday and Saturday, to answer any inquiries in regard to our interest at Harvey or Oak Park.

P. S.—Excursion rates will be made again from Adrian, Wednesday, April 8, at 3 P. M. Fare will be $4.25 going; same returning, if 10 come on same train.

Address all inquiries or notices of your coming to Chicago to

Quite a number of the young people from Britton attended the Easter service given by the Sunday School on Sunday evening.

Wm. Beavers, having purchased the Lydia Miller property of E. C. Van-Vleet, has begun repairing the same and will move soon.

Harry Smith, our wide-awake tinsmith, having rented one of Mrs. Loree's houses, formerly G.W. Jackson's property, is moving in his new home this week.

David Coryell fell from the hay loft in his barn to the floor, Tuesday, receiving quite a shaking up. A broken round of the ladder was the cause of the accident.

The L. C. S. will be held at the home of the President, Mrs. J. F. Temple, on Friday evening of this week. Warm maple sugar and biscuit will be served at 15c a dish. A good attendance is desired.

Remember, the next and last entertainment of the Tecumseh lecture course is the Ariel Concert, and will be given Friday evening of next week, April 10th. Tickets may be had by calling at the Library.

Alfred Curry went to Ann Arbor last week to have his eyes treated and had a very large cataract taken off from one and will have the other eye operated on in a few days. He will be away nearly a month.

Mrs. Coonrod L. Lowe, after a sickness of only twenty-four hours with hernia, died on Saturday night. Drs. Loree, Nelson and Howell were called and did all in their power for her in her intense suffering. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Smith, and a native of England, having been born near the city of Leeds, Feb. 26th, 1839. Her parents moved to this country when she was but three years of age, and located in the township of Ridgeway, which has ever since been her home. She was united in marriage to Coonrod L. Lowe Oct. 29th, 1859, by Prof. Joseph Estabrook. Two children, a daughter and son, blessed their home, who are both married and live near the old homestead. She was a kind and loving wife and mother, a true and faithful friend. There are none who have known her but will join the grief-stricken husband and family in mourning their loss. She was converted and joined the Free Methodist church in February, 1867, and has ever since been a consistent and earnest worker for the Master. The Angel of Death called her home at the age of fifty-two years, one month and two days. The funeral services were held at the Free Methodist church Monday afternoon, Rev. Hoag officiating, and the remains were interred in the family lot in Hickory Grove Cemetery, near the village.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Muddy roads.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Most of the sick are convalescing. M. Yates is improving slowly.

G. V. Osgood remains about the same with not very flattering prospects.

The Prohibs had a very harmonious caucus Friday afternoon and put a full sized ticket in the field.

The neighbors turned out one afternoon last week and prepared 8 or 10 cords of stovewood for Mrs. L. Goodrich.

Cap. Cook is moving from the R. Vescelius farm back into Raisin Township. Vescelius will move back onto the farm.

The store has resumed business again under W. P. Cotton's management, with M. J. Harrington behind the counter.

C. F. LaFleur of Dansville has been shaking hands and chatting with old neighbors the past few days. He came out after his household goods, returning Saturday.

Andrew McCreary has moved from the Lew Martin farm onto the Pilbeam, Fred McCreary from G. V. Osgood's, into the house vacated by Andrew, and Bloom Sherman into the house vacated by Fred.

We trust that no one will be deceived by the "soft-solder" going the rounds of the press for the three-fold raising official salaries, when millions are starving in city and country. They "give it way" by saying that the Attorney General will not attend to business for want of pay. He knows what the pay is when he takes the official oath, and in neglecting duty perjures himself. Surely the amount of salaries has nothing to do with official duties or obligations, or the necessity for extra help. The Court cannot try but one case at a time and the Attorney General has nothing to do but attend to it; that is what he is hired for. We are overrun with extra official help at fabulous prices, unwarranted by the constitution or laws; which indicates the mockery in official oaths. A better policy would be to reclaim humanity from the incentives to crime and turmoil, thereby relieving the necessity for courts and lawyers. The present "cut throat" financial policy of the nation, in connection with the liquor traffic, is relegating the masses back into barbarism, as indicated by the successive robberies, murders, mobs, strikes, kid-nappings, insurrections and general demoralization. $800, will do; $1200, would be better; but $2500, is robbery.

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

Albert English was in Tecumseh, last Saturday afternoon.

Easter services at the M. E. Church last Sunday and three new members admitted by letter.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lamb went to Ann Arbor to visit relatives, last Friday, returning on Monday.

The Rev. J. R. Mowry is assisting M. D. Mack during the revival services in the F. B. Church at Iron Creek.

The W. F. Missionary society of the M. E. Church will meet with Mrs. Kingsley on Saturday afternoon April 4th.

John Fallowell has moved upon his new farm, the Roberts place, and his aunt, Mrs Phebe Silverwood will keep house for him.

Mrs. J. W. Patchin started for her new home in Shelby, Oceana Co, on Monday. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. L. D. Watkins as far as Jackson.

Miss Maude Baldwin, daughter of L. M. Baldwin, of this township, is very sick with pneumonia at Chicago. Her mother started for Chicago last Saturday night.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION.

THE attitude of the medical profession toward what is known as patent medicines is not at all unreasonable. Thousands of these nostrums are offered to the public every year. Some of them are dangerous, and most of them are futile. Swift's Specific (S.S.S.), we are all glad to say, is not classed among these nostrums. It has over-come the wholesome prejudices of physicians in all parts of the country, and some of the strongest testimonials in its behalf come from medical men who have used it in their practice, and who do not hesitate to endorse its wonderful results. This is extremely gratifying, but by no means astonishing, for every claim that is put forward in behalf of S.S.S. is based on a series of actual experiments extended over a long period of time.

TIPTON TOPICS.

John Jeffery is moving on his recently purchased farm.

Frank Pitcher has returned to Buffalo, after a weeks visit.

Mrs. Wm. Pentecost is very ill and the children have the measles.

The lectures given by Rev. Cooper, of Addison, were excellent and well appreciated by all who attended.

Robt. Russell, having bought a share of his brother's celery farm in Raisin, will move his family to that place.

The Easter Concert at the M. E. Church was very successful, notwithstanding sickness and bad roads conflicted with the arrangements.

EAST RAISIN ECHOES.

The School enters upon another year under favorable auspices and bids fair to increase in numbers and in influence for good in the community.

The Raisin Presbyterian Sunday School was organized about 57 years ago, in a log shanty. The same organization has continued until the present time. On last Sabbath the annual election of officers took place. The result of election was as follows:

Supt.—R. M. Boyd.
Ass't—E. R. Rogers.
Sec. and Treas.—Esther Binns.
Chorister—Wm. E. Doty.
Organist—Irene Belden.

The report of the secretary showed the average attendance for the last year to have been sixty-nine and the penny collection $43.35. The infant class presented their teacher, Mrs. J. L. Richard, a group photograph of the class, very nicely framed.

MACON MUSIC.

A Surprise Social was held at the parsonage of the Reformed Church of South Macon on Tuesday, March 31st. A large gathering of the entire community and a very enjoyable day it proved to all. The pastor, Rev. J. I. Gulick, and wife, were made the recipients of many tokens of love and respect of those present. A most bountiful collation was served, and nearly or about 100 partook of the good things provided by the ladies of South Macon, who know so well how to furnish and prepare and spread a feast. A beautiful couch, a large chair for the study and a splendid rocker for the pastor, besides cash and many articles that filled the larder and the buttery, were bestowed upon the pastor elect and his wife, which, together with many other tokens previously received, cause them to realize that the "lines have fallen to them in pleasant places" and that the beauty of the country, the fertility of the soil, the grand improvements of buildings in their artistic designs and elegance of finish, and all the marks of refinement and social purity and joy and general intelligence only outwardly show the real munificence of noble hearts. J. I. GULICK.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

There is all the sunshine of spring and the fragrance of flowers in The Ladies Home Journal for April; the exquisite Easter cover, designed by W. Hamilton Gibson, is a fair index to the charm of the whole number. The pervading Easter spirit finds perhaps its happiest expressions in the fiction, Mrs. Whitney's delightful serial, "A Golden Gossip," being continued, while Maud Burton and Caroline A. Mason contribute seasonable short stories. The "Mrs. Rossiter Lamar" of the latter, an exceptionally strong story, forms as attractive a feature as the clever sketch of Mrs. T. De Witt Talmage, which is accompanied by a fine wood-cut portrait. Other articles which will be widely quoted are Amelia E. Barr's "Mothers as Match-makers," dealing with a question of universal interest, and the third of George W. Cable's masterly papers on "Teaching the Bible." Among such an "infinite variety" it is difficult to mention everything that is good, but the article by C. F. Klunder, the New York florist, on "Flowers In the Home"; those upon "Bee-keeping as an Occupation for Women," and Mrs. Mallon's delightful pages of Spring Fashions will no doubt be especially appreciated. The number is complete in every part, and richly illustrated throughout. Issued at Ten Cents per copy, or One Dollar a year, by the Curtis Publishing Company, 435 Arch street, Philadelphia.

"Gentle Spring" loses many of its terrors when the system is fortified by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. With multitudes, this wonderful tonic-alterative has long superseded all other spring medicines, being everywhere recommended by physicians.

Go and do likewise. If your whiskers are grizzly and unbecoming use Buckingham's Dye and they will look as when you were younger.

FOR RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, NEURALGIA, CRAMP and Colic there is no remedy superior to the genuine Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, APRIL 2.

The only feasable and equitable method of taxing mortgages is not to tax them at all. So long as they are assessed, the rate of interest will be kept up by money-lenders on that account, and yet a large proportion of mortgages will escape taxation entirely. The present plan is simply a premium on dishonesty.

Hon. Jerry Simpson, of Kansas, better known as "Sockless Simpson," is proving himself to be a shrewd political leader. He has made several speeches in the East which were well received. A great free trade mass meeting is to be held to-day, April 2d, by the Manhattan Single Tax Club of New York, and Mr. Simpson will be one of the orators of the day.

The Western States are rapidly coming to the front in making an appropriation for the World's Fair. California leads off with an appropriation of $300,000, while the new States of Washington and Montana have voted $100,000 each. Michigan should be liberally represented at the Exposition, and a sum should be voted for that purpose commensurate with our leading position among the Northwestern States.

Judge Champlin ought to be re-elected as Justice of the Supreme Court. He is essentially a friend of the people. No member of the Supreme Bench for the past forty years can show a worthier record. Throughout his career Judge Champlin has been an upright, honest and fearless champion of the cause of the people. Leaving him off the Bench would be their loss. He has taken rank as a worthy successor of Justices Campbell and Cooley, and the people owe it to their own interests to re-elect him.

Among the reforms which the present Legislature should carry through is a thorough revision of the highway laws. Our present method of making and repairing the public roads is an unmitigated humbug. The haphazard manner in which the road work is done in a majority of country districts is a public disgrace. In some districts where gravel banks are convenient of access, the highways have been much improved during the past few years, but in most of them the highways are in no better condition than they were forty years ago.

Few gatherings of men have taken place in this country the deliberations of which were more carefully watched than will be those of the Commercial Congress of the Western States, which will assemble at Kansas City, April 18. When this movement was started it was not intended that it should be in any sense political, but owing to circumstances it may turn out to be a very important factor in the political events of the Presidential year. Many politicians will be guided by the action of this body, and it will be well for everybody to note its action.

Judge Champlin's decision in the Alger Diamond Match case would alone be reason enough for his triumphant election. This decision attracted the attention of the whole nation and stamped its author as an eminent jurist. It declared the illegality of the Match trust and proclaimed the general principles of law and public policy which are inimical to these plundering aggregations of capital, and leave them no better ground than pirac to stand upon. Senator John Sherman took this decision as his text in his speech against trusts delivered during the last session of Congress.

Ex-Congressman Ben Butterworth, of Cincinnati, is a shrewd, long-headed Quaker and a very practical politician withal. In a late interview he expresses his views about the Alliance movement, which the politicians of the old parties would do well to heed. He said:

"They are not wise who turn up their æsthetic noses and laugh at the demonstration the farmers are making. They should remember that in close affiliation with the agriculturists are the army of skilled and unskilled workmen of the country, who are not immediate beneficiaries of a high tariff, and that while the measures proposed by the Alliance and those who assume to speak for it are obviously unripe and not calculated to bring about the reforms desired, nevertheless in the attitude of these powerful forces there appears a deep and abiding protest against a condition of things which must be radically changed or else a social and political upheaval of unimagined dimensions must follow."

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S SALARY.

To the Patrons of Industry and other Farmers and Laboring Men of Michigan.

The legislature passed a resolution submitting to the people at this spring election, the question of raising the salary of the attorney-general to $2500. The present salary is $800. We favor the resolution and believe that it is important that the amendment should be adopted by the people; and after a careful examination of the matter, we are convinced that the change would not increase the taxes or expenses of the attorney-general's office, but would decrease them in a marked degree.

Our reasons are as follows: No attorney-general has yet been found who could devote his whole time to state business for $800 per year. The state has suits now pending involving nearly a million dollars, which demand the constant attention of the man the people have elected to that office.

Last year, as shown by the report of the senate committee, appointed to investigate this matter, $13,480.84 was paid out to attorneys to do the work of the attorney-general, at rates from $20 to $100 per day and expenses. It is proposed to change the laws and have more of the work done in the office, and pay out less for outside help. We do not claim that any man can do all the work, but we do claim that if a salary is given so that a man can live on it, and then exact his whole time, far less hired help will be necessary; and as the rate at twenty-five hundred dollars per year is only about one-third as much as the lowest wages paid hired help, the people would be at least that much the gainers.

There are a number of good bills pending in the legislature to change the laws governing these matters, and if the people adopt the amendment, legislation governing this matter will be passed. We believe in this way from five to ten thousand dollars can be saved yearly to the people of this state.

We were elected as patrons of industry, and we have no political axes to grind.

Knowing that the farmers are opposed to measurers that increase state taxes, and thinking that without explanation they might not understand this matter, and conclude that the change in the amount of the salary would increase the expense, we make this explanation, and earnestly advise the adoption of the amendment.

THE BEST POLITICS.

The lesson of the Illinois campaign is thus stated by Senator Palmer:

I not only learned a lesson in politics, but the occasion taught a lesson to the people in the science of politics. The lesson learned and the lesson taught was that any party in this country which hopes for success must win that success by an honest, earnest, manly, frank appeal to the people themselves. That is the true principle.

And thus by ex-President Cleveland in his letter replying to the invitation to be present at the Illinois ratification meeting:

I am sure that the atmosphere of the occasion will be inspiring to all who participate, and will re-enforce the faith of the Democracy of the State in the power and efficiency of a frank and courageous insistence upon Democratic principles.

The secret of success in Illinois is the secret of success in every State in the Union. It is the secret of making the issue for the rights of the people and forcing the fighting on it. When the Democrats do that, they can leave the Republicans the campaign funds, the hireling orators, the brass bands and the Blocks of Five. The people of this country have always a good general idea of direction. They may not know all about the untraveled parts of the route they wish to follow, but they know where they wish to go. It is not hard to stop them when they are going wrong or losing the road they wish to travel. But when they are right they will follow the party that leads in the right direction and nothing can stop them.

There was no bought service, no hired orators, no campaign fund in the fight for Illinois. The regular standing army of politicians held aloof from it. The national committee called it "rainbow chasing." But it was such a fight as the people love—a fight for conviction and for honesty. The men who make speeches at so many dollars a speech were not invited into it and they were not in it. The newspapers which have no opinions but such as are dictated to them had nothing to do with it. But the people had. The call for volunteers from among them was answered as it has not been in years in American politics. All difficulties went down before them. They crushed the Block of Five and the caucus auction out of the State with an irresistible forward movement which has given Illinois its rightful rank in the Union.

The "honest, earnest, manly and frank appeal to the people" is the best politics in America.—St. Louis Republic.

TAXATION OF MORTGAGES.

The following communication recently appeared in the Free Press, which states the case very clearly and concisely:

I presume that but few persons, who have given the subject serious consideration, believe that the taxation of mortgages is just. The evidence of its being a double taxation (where the value of the property is honestly assessed), is so readily shown, that it must be apparent to every one. "A" owns a piece of property assessed at $10,000. "B" owns another piece of property assessed at $2,000; "C" owns bank stock assessed at $8,000. Total assessment, $20,000. "B" borrows the $8,000 from "C," and gives it with his $2,000 piece of property to "A" for his $10,000 piece and as security gives "C" a mortgage of $8,000 on the same. The assessment then stands; "A," $8,000 on bank stock and $2,000 on property; "B," $10,000 on property; "C," $8,000 on mortgage; total assessment, $28,000. It is evident that the money represented by the mortgage has been assessed twice. The remedy is either to cease the assessment of mortgages or deduct the amount of a mortgage on a piece of property from the amount it would be assessed at if the mortgage did not exist. This could be done by the Legislature, but probably will not until such time as it is demanded or as the taxing of mortgages cease to produce a revenue. As the former course is not likely to be persued, by reason of professional money-leaders not really desiring it, the only other course is to make the taxation of mortgages unproductive, and a general understanding of the methods pursued by the professional money-lender will probably produce that result as quickly as it can be accomplished.

For persons who are both holders of mortgages and borrowers of money on other mortgages, a statement of the same to the assessors will reduce the amount assessed to the amount of the mortgage held, less the amount of money borrowed on the other mortgages. This only partially relieves the double assessment. The professional money lenders' plan is much more certain and comprehensive. It is simply to hide the fact that they hold any mortgages. It might perhaps be asked how that can be done, when mortgages to be safe must be recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds? If they will take the trouble to investigate, they will find that in that office a discharge of the mortgage is usually placed on record, accompanied by an "assignment" of the same, and if they will notice that "assignment" they will find that it almost invariably runs from a resident of Michigan to a non-resident of Michigan. Why? Simply because mortgages held by non-residents of the State are not assessable, and the professional money-lender, understanding this, loans his money through some person in another state, records the mortgage in the name of such non-resident, taking an assignment from that non-resident which he does not record. Thus, while being the actual holder of the mortgage, it is impossible for the Assessor to discover it, as the records show only one transaction, and that leaves the ownership with the non-resident. It may be asked, why do professional money-lenders desire to retain a system that forces them to adopt such methods to escape taxation? Simply because it makes a higher rate of interest procurable, under the plea that the mortgage, being taxable, produces to the money lender 1½ or 2 per cent less than the interest charged, which would be true provided the taxation was not avoided as described above.

JAMES VERNOR.

CITY AND COUNTY TAXES.

The Detroit Evening Journal, an independent Republican paper, recently printed an editorial article on taxation in Illinois, giving the results of the investigation made by a Chicago gentleman into the relative assessments on personal property in Chicago, and in the five agricultural counties of Hancock, Brown, Greene, Jersey and Pike. The united population of these counties is 113,000, while Chicago claims a population of 1,200,000. According to the assessment, residents of the agricultural counties have on an average 60 per cent. more personal property than the residents of Chicago.

The absurdity of the assessment is probably shown in no one item more clearly than in that of clocks and watches. These five rural counties appear to contain these articles to the value of $31,314, while all of the clocks and watches in Chicago are worth but $29,968. The Detroit Journal wisely remarks:

The attempt to tax everything throws a proportionately heavy burden upon the rural districts. The personal wealth of the cities escapes taxation, while in the country it is of such a nature as to prevent hiding and deception. The personal property of the farmer is usually all found and assessed fully. The only way to remedy this great evil is to abolish the taxing of personal property.

Such comments go to show that there is a rapidly growing sentiment against the foolish persistence in the futile efforts to equitably tax personal property, and this sentiment is thus far found in both political parties. The clamor for such taxation is due to crass ignorance, while the opposition to it, because of its inequality and inexpediency, is founded on experience, and not on any conception of the impropriety of levying taxes on the products of labor. Such instances as that cited by the Detroit Journal will ultimately have effect on the farmers, though their first response will be a demand for a still more inquisitorial search of pockets and bed rooms in Chicago for the discovery of watches and clocks.—The Standard.

THE BOOK TRUST KNOCKED OUT.

AC ARD TO THE PUBLIC.

Some six months ago we began the publication of our reprint of the famous Encyclopædia Britannica in 25 Volumes, which we issued at $1.50 per volume. The price of the English edition always has been and still is $8.00 per volume, and the Scribner edition $5.00 per volume in the cheapest binding.

That the public appreciate so great a bargain is shown by the fact that over half a million volumes of this reprint have been sold in less than six months.

This elegant new edition we still offer at the same price, $1.50 per volume. This is the greatest bargain ever known in books.

Better still, we will deliver the set complete on small easy payments, to suit the convenience of customers.

Remember this is not an abridgement, but the great Edinburgh ninth edition, reproduced page for page, with important articles on American subjects rewritten to date by eminent American authors, and new maps, later and better than in any other edition.

We further announce that we have in preparation three volumes of "American Additions and Revisions," thoroughly supplementing the original work. With these supplemental volumes you will have at small cost an Encyclopædia unapproachable in completeness; a thorough "digest of the libraries of the world," and a complete record of current progress and events.

SPECIAL OFFER.—We claim that our reprint compares favorably with the high priced editions in every respect, and in respect to maps, and strength and beauty of bindings is superior to them. In order that this claim may be tested by a personal inspection we make the following proposition: We will furnish volume I. at 60 cts.—a fraction of actual cost—if sent by express. Add 40 cts. postage if wanted by mail. Amount paid for Volume I. will be credited on price of set when ordered.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

BOSTON'S MAYOR ON TAXATION.

The mayor of Boston, in his inaugural message, discusses the problems of local government and taxation. He declares that the present condition of affairs is due "not only to defective administrative methods but to the loose, hap-hazard and unsystematic way in which public improvements have been undertaken, to a radically bad system of taxation, and to the dependence of the city government on the State Legislature." He complains that since the common law rights of abuttors in the soil of the highways has been taken away, and vested in the State, that successive legislatures have granted the use of these highways to private corporations without compensation to the abuttors, either as individuals or as members of the municipal corporation. The result is, he says, that the supposed business necessities of one generation have become a burden to another generation, and that a proper regard for public interests demands that the abuse shall cease.

He further says that if the city has the power to raise its taxes in such manner as it sees fit, it would certainly be profitable for Boston to levy its taxes less on credits and other forms of personal property than is done at present. The city might prefer, he thinks, to raise some portion of the $2,600,000 now collected from personal property by a tax on legacies and successions, but it would unquestionably decrease taxation on other forms of personal property. The Mayor further suggests that the city should have the right to undertake for itself all functions of a public character now commonly intrusted to private enterprise. He thinks the city probably would not exercise these powers, but its possession of them would enable it to make better terms with individuals and corporations seeking municipal privileges. Here again, we have the clear discrimination made by Mayor Sargent, of New Haven, between the resumption by government of public functions and duties and the assumption of the management of private enterprises. We have not been in the habit, in the past, of looking to the the Mayor's message for the elucidation of politico-economic problems, but the growing difficulties of municipal management, and the increasing burdens of taxation on urban populations is forcing all intelligent men concerned into a serious consideration of such problems.

There appears to be a note of regret in the allusion in the message to the taking away by the State of the common law rights, once possessed by abuttors, in the soil of the highways of the city. Does the mayor imagine that there are many owners of land lying along the street railways of Boston who have suffered pecuniarily by the construction of such lines? We doubt if many instances of the kind could be found. The real sufferers are the people of Boston, who rightfully own its streets, and whose property has been taken from them by the State and given over to private individuals to be used for their personal profit. The result is that the people thus robbed are now taxed on the products of their labor to meet public expenses that ought to be met out of a public revenue of which the city has been unjustly deprived.

The Single Tax and the Farmer Again!

A Mr. Connolly, United States consul to New Zealand, has been discussing the politico-economic condition of that country in the Brooklyn Eagle. In regard to the single tax agitation now going on in New Zealand he says:

There is considerable agitation in the colony at present as to the merits and demerits of a single land tax. But as the farmer, upon whom the burden must ultimately fall, has to contend with the many trials and vicissitudes which beset the farmers of other lands it is difficult to thoroughly understand how he is to survive and prosper under the additional taxation which must naturally follow the adoption of the single land tax system.

All of which goes to show that Mr. Connolly doesn't know what he is talking about. But Mr. S. D. Guion is determined that the readers of the Eagle shall not be misled by Mr. Connolly's specious reasoning, so he explains to them, and explains at Mr. Connolly, what the single tax theory really is and how it would really operate. It is to be hoped that the Eagle's readers, especially Mr. Connolly, have read and inwardly digested the following, which appeared in that paper lately:

It [the single tax] is not a tax on land but on the value of land, on the value of bare land without improvements, as a vacant lot in a city. It is not a tax on area, but on value. There is but little value on the bare land of a farm of 100 acres that would sell for $5,000. I have in mind one farm of 100 acres that would sell for $6,000, the owner of which computed the value of the improvements, the clearing, so as to fit it to be convenient and easy to cultivate, fencing, ditching, digging well, planting orchards, etc., house, barns and outhouses to be $5,300, leaving the value of the bare land but $700. His State and county tax was $46. Under the single tax it would have been $35. The profit made from using land is what gives it its value; the larger the profit the greater the value. From using some city lots a profit of thousands of dollars can be made. From some farms of a thousand times the area of the city lot, no profit can be made. Some city lots have great value. Some farms have only an improvement, but no land value. The greater the service the owner or user of land receives from the Government, the larger his profit can be. If he receives no such service he can make no profit. The service of government is as to the size and density of the community. The larger and more dense the community the greater the service of government. Each should pay a tax in proportion to the service he receives from government. The owner of a city lot from the use of which he can make a profit of thousands of dollars annually, receives from government all the service possible, while the service that the owner of a farm of 100 acres, the land value of which is but $700, receives is trivial. Therefore a tax on the value of land would be equitable. Each would pay exactly in proportion to the value of the land he was using. The farmer would be relieved of a great burden and not only survive, but would become prosperous under the conditions which would naturally follow the adoption of the single tax on the value of land. It is quite a mystery to me how any one can find it difficult to understand so simple a problem. Mr. Connolly, the United States consul to New Zealand, undoubtedly has given the subject considerable thought. He recognizes results, but ascribes them to causes from which they do not and can not naturally and logically in the first instance proceed. If Mr. Connolly will study the subject, argue it along the line of logical sequences, he will find that the evils of which he speaks and all the evils that affect the general interest of the people of New Zealand or any other country are caused by inequitable taxation and that the single tax is the remedy, because it is equitable.

Mr. George on Australia.

Henry George has an article on Australia in the Cosmopolitan for January in which he says: "Here is a country with as large an area as our own, and but one-twentieth of our population. They have the Australian ballot; they have responsible government; they have a permanent, non-political civil service; they have a most admirable and simple system of land registration and transfer; they have government ownership and operation of railroads and telegraphs. Trades-unionism has with them reached a more powerful development than anywhere else, and they have come nearer to the adoption of the eight-hour working day. They have State statisticians that shame our National and State bureaus, and they have carried paternalism in some respects to a length unknown in any other English-speaking country. They have, too, the same social and economic problems. They have great public debts. They have land monopoly in gigantic form. They have had land speculations that would equal, if not surpass, those of any 'boom town' of our West. And (for it follows) they have their 'unemployed,' their charity organizations, and strikes, that in relative magnitude and importance, are the greatest that have anywhere yet taken place."

This is a lesson for the Socialist. With far more than we have of what the Socialist cries for, labor troubles are worse than with us, and 58.05 per cent. of the population is in the cities. The reason of the excellence of the Government is perhaps explained in a later remark: "Fortunate above all other countries, Australia has never known war." Wakefield's plan of colonization by selling the land so high that the poor could not buy it and using the proceeds to assist emigration is described.

Mr. George gives a short and entertaining lesson in geography, with a map. To those who are long from school the facts seem fresh. Intelligent appreciation of institutions requires ability and constitutes the main interest of this paper. Mr. George thinks the Australians are much like the Americans.

The "Literary Development of California," also in this number, contains an excellent portrait of Mr. George. It has, besides, some forcible words by Edward E. Hale on "Education of Public Spirit," in which he takes the ground that government should come from the people up, not from the "upper classes" down.

Why are Wages High or Low?

Look over the world to-day. In countries the most widely differing—under conditions the most diverse as to government, as to industries, as to tariffs, as to currency—you will find distress among the working classes, but everywhere that you thus find distress and destitution in the midst of wealth, you will find that the land is monopolized; that instead of being treated as the common property of the whole people, it is treated as the private property of individuals; that, for its use by labor, large revenues are extorted from the earnings of labor. Look over the world to-day, comparing different countries with each other, and you will see that it is not the abundance of capital or the productiveness of labor that makes wages high or low; but the extent to which the monopolizers of land can, in rent, levy tribute upon the earnings of labor. Is it not a notorious fact, known to the most ignorant, that new countries, where the aggregate wealth is small, but where land is cheap, are always better countries for the laboring classes than the rich countries? Progress and Poverty.

Is Capital a Bad Thing?

The Indiana House of Representatives has passed a resolution proposing that Indiana shall co-operate with Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Kansas, Ohio, Kentucky and Pennsylvania in an inquiry as to how much capital is loaned in those States, with a view to taxing such capital. The resolution includes the other States named, because it has dawned on the Indianians that if one State begins taxing such capital, alone, the lending companies will withdraw from that State. It seems to us this ought to recommend the scheme. We take it for granted that the States that are trying to tax capital find they have too much of it and are trying to drive it away. If this be the case action by a single State is sure to be more effective than a joint action by a treaty between several States, which may perhaps be found violative by the Federal Constitution.

SAVED FROM FAMINE.

LESSON I, SECOND QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 5.

Text of the Lesson, II Kings vii, 1-16. Commit Verses, 8, 9—Golden Text, Ps. cvii, 8—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper, Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

After the Syrian army had been smitten with blindness at the word of Elisha he led them into the midst of Samaria, then prayed that they might see. Their eyes being opened, they found themselves in the presence of the man whom they sought, the king of Israel, who would have slain them; but at the command of Elisha he fed them, treated them well, and let them go, thus conquering them with kindness.

Today's lesson brings before us Samaria so besieged by the Syrians that there is a terrible famine, and mothers are so crazed by hunger that they eat their own children, and all because of their rebellion against God.

1. "Then Elisha said, Hear ye the word of the Lord."

The king of Israel professed to be so filled with horror at the doings of the people that he swore to kill Elisha, and proceeded forthwith to put his threat in execution.

2. "Behold, if the Lord would make windows in heaven might this thing be."

Thus spake a companion of the king of Israel, in reply to the word of the Lord by Elisha, that to-morrow there would be food in abundance; and thus speaks many a professed Christian today, in reference to the great promises of the Lord of Hosts. It is a fearful sin, but so common, to make light of the word of God or reject it altogether, because it seems impossible or unreasonable.

3, 4. "Why sit we here until we die?"

We are now introduced to four outcasts, without the city because of their leprosy, who are in a most pitiable condition. They are dying slowly of disease; hunger is now hastening their death—there is no relief from the city; the Syrians can only kill them, and thus shorten their misery, but possibly may take pity on them and save them. It is their only hope, and their minds are made up. The condition of these men was sad indeed, but what about those in all Christendom who are on the way to the second death and are indifferent to it?

5. "And they rose up in the twilight to go unto the camp of the Syrians, and, behold, there was no man there."

Tremblingly and stealthily, under cover of the twilight, they moved toward the camp of the enemy, but enemy there was none, no one to be seen. Their fears vanish, their hearts leap within them; they expected death, but they find life, food and riches in abundance. The change in their circumstances is an illustration of the difference between an unsaved person seeking satisfaction from this world and a saved soul rejoicing in the fullness of the redemption and life eternal.

6. "The Lord had made the host of the Syrians to hear a noise of chariots, and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host."

He did not open their eyes to see the hosts of the Lord as He did the eyes of Elisha's servant (vi, 17), but He caused their ears to hear, and their hearts to imagine a great host pursuing them. It was not a host of Hittites and Egyptians, as they thought, but the unseen hosts of the Lord. What rest there is in the soul that can say, "Though an host should encamp against me my heart shall not fear!"

7. "Wherefore they arose and fled for their life."

How many ways the Lord has of overthrowing His enemies and sending deliverance to such as He desires to bless! The Lord knoweth how. It is not for us either to make suggestions or have any anxiety, but just abide in Him who is our sufficiency in all things.

9. "We do not well; this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace."

Thus spake the lepers as they perhaps paused in their overwhelming joy to consider the famine stricken city so near by. What a word this is for all who have heard and received the glad tidings of salvation.

"If we tarry till the morning light some mischief will come upon us."

Who can tell what the loss will be in the resurrection morning to all believers who have done nothing to spread the glad tidings, when at the judgment seat of Christ their iniquity has found them out (R. V., margin).

10. "So they came and called unto the porter of the city."

They did not stop at good resolutions, but immediately put the same into effect. Let all believers who are thinking of telling or sending the good tidings to others, at once do something about it and the work will move on.

11. "And he called the porters; and they told it to the king's house within."

Thus the good tidings are passed on from one to another, no one thinking of himself, but only of the message of joy which he bears.

12. "And the king arose in the night and said unto his servants, I will now show you what the Syrians have done to us."

Neither does the king wait till the morning. It is a time of sore trouble, and perhaps sleep had forsaken him. But he does not believe the good tidings; he imagines mischief. Had he believed the word of the Lord by Elisha he might now have said humbly and gratefully, "This is the Lord's doing and marvelous in our eyes."

13. "Let us send and see."

This was so unlikely; how could it be true? We tell people of the forgiveness of all their sins and the possession of eternal life by just receiving Jesus Christ as their Saviour (John i, 12; v, 24; Rom. iv, 5; Acts xiii, 38, 39), but they will not look up the passages in their Bibles to see if it is really so.

14. "The king sent after the host of the Syrians, saying, Go and see."

A willingness to investigate is so much better than imagining or believing an evil report. God asks us to search the Scriptures, to read, to hear, to believe, to prove Him.

15. "And they went after them unto Jordan; and the messengers returned and told the king."

Evidence all the way to Jordan is suggestive of all the way to the cross, where the last trace of our enemy, sin, is seen; for there Jesus made an end of sin for all who accept Him, so that dead and risen with Him, sin shall not have dominion over us.

16. "So a measure of fine flour was sold for a shekel, according to the Word of the Lord."

Whether men will hear or forebear, the word of the Lord will stand. No matter how seemingly impossible, all things are possible with God, and nothing is too hard for the Lord.

"The Lord of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed so shall it stand" (Num. xxiii, 19; Isa. xiv, 24).

A DYSPEPTIC'S ARGUMENT

Is a growl, and that growl marks the limit of argument with him. The best way to get him to try a medicine would be to advise against it—but notice how different his tone after using Burdock Blood Bitters.

"I have suffered with Dyspepsia for the last two years. Not long ago I commenced taking B. B. B. I am now on the second bottle and feel like a new man. G. KNOX, 12 Sherwood Ave., Binghamton, N. Y."

REPEATED TESTS WITH UNIFORM SUCCESS prove the fact that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure. The reason is plain, it tones the stomach to natural action and keeps the sluice ways of the system free from clogging impurities.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and heart disease for nine years, and found no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. Now I am well after taking two bottles. MRS. ETTIE FRAZIER, Bowne, Mich."

THE FIGURE "9."

The figure 9 in our dates will make a long stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using the figure 9. It stands in the third place in 1890, where it will remain ten years and then move up to second place in 1900, where it will rest for one hundred years.

There is another "9" which has also come to stay. It is unlike the figure 9 in our dates in the respect that it has already moved up to first place, where it will permanently remain. It is called the "No. 9" High Arm Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine.

The "No. 9" was endorsed for first place by the experts of Europe at the Paris Exposition of 1889, where, after a severe contest with the leading machines of the world, it was awarded the only Grand Prize given to family sewing machines, all others on exhibit having received lower awards of gold medals, etc. The French Government also recognized its superiority by the decoration of Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, President of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

The "No. 9" is not an old machine improved upon, but is an entirely new machine, and the Grand Prize at Paris was awarded it as the grandest advance in sewing machine mechanism of the age. Those who buy it can rest assured, therefore, of having the very latest and best.

Sold by J. S. Kinney, Tecumseh.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by druggists and dealers in medicine.

SMALL FRUIT FOR HOME USE.

The words "Small Fruit" in the title of this paper, does not mean a small amount of fruit for home use. Neither does it mean small of its kind. If it did, there would be no need of my writing a paper on this subject, for, I am sorry to say, there are too many of our farmers practicing on that theory already.

For years a great portion of our farmers have gone along with not half fruit enough for their own families, being entirely without any kind for more than half the year. Yes, and more than half the summer season; just when they are most needed, you will seldom find a dish of fresh fruit on their table, and when they do have any at all, it is confined almost exclusively to apples, when a very little expense, time and energy would give them an abundant and continuous supply of the various kinds of what are called "small fruits," from early June until November. After that our delicious Michigan apples, with proper care, will keep up the succession until April. So that unless the season is extremly unfavorable, there is no excuse for being without an abundant supply of fresh fruits gathered from our own vine and tree, for more than two months in the whole year. That so many farmers live year after year without a supply of small fruits of their own raising, which not only adds so greatly to the luxury of living but is so beneficial to the health as well—that such multitudes raise only unsightly weeds in the various small patches around their buildings, when a few hills or rows of berries, properly tended, would not in the end take half so much time nor be half so expensive, and would not only beautify and make pleasant the home and home surroundings, but would yield an abundant return for all the care they received, is one of the strongest proofs of their thoughtlessness in regard to their own home needs and comforts.

In a paper on "Small Fruits for Farmer and Gardener," read by a professional fruit grower at one of the Farmers' Institutes in our State, the writer, after saying everything he could to discourage the raising of small fruits by the farmer, concluded by saying; "Raise your sheep, cattle, hogs and colts, and sell your surplus. Market your wheat, your apples, and whatever your experience proves most profitable, and then with the money * * * buy more and better fruit for eating and preserving than you will be likely to secure from your own garden." What sage advice? What wisdom? As well might the Dakota or California wheat grower ridicule our small patches of wheat as unprofitable and laborious, and advise us to quit raising wheat and buy our wheat of him. Or our market gardeners might as well say "your farm gardens are very insignificant and unprofitable affairs; you neglect them and they grow up to weeds. They take your time from your farm work. You had better let the garden go, and buy your vegatables." So might the specialist in sheep raising, butter making, or any other branch of our mixed husbandry advise with equal propriety, and the advise would be just as good in one case as the other.

One farmer says: "I raise my farm products and sell them and get what little fruit I want and pay for it." Yes, and I will venture to assert without fear of contradiction, that it is but precious little fruit that either he or his family get. Another says: "I never have any luck raising berries; I never get time to attend to them;" and says it as though the subject was of so little importance that it was not worth his thought or attention, and was a mere matter of luck, when in fact it is of more importance than any thing else on the farm, requiring no more time or space.

I would not by any means advise farmers to raise berries in small quantities for the market. If they want to go into the market business they had better go into it on a large scale and make it worth while to give it their time and attention, so that they can secure the best prices in the best markets. But this I do not advise. I am only advocating the raising of small fruits by each and every farmer in sufficient quantity for his own liberal supply, and if in the short space of time allotted me, I am able to say something that will induce some one of my brother farmers to raise two quarts of berries for home use, where he now raises one, I shall be abundantly satisfied, even without the award given to the man who causes two spears of grass to grow where but one grew before, as being a public benefactor.

If I was obliged to abandon either my vegetable garden or my small fruits, the garden would have to go. I have repeatedly had fruit fresh from the vine and tree on my table every day and almost every meal—and that in no stinted measure, but all we wanted to eat—from the last of May until the middle of October. Think of that, you who occasionally smack your lips over a dish of stale berries purchased at the grocery store, or of the professional fruit grower. The idea of going away from our own rural home to buy stale fruit, when we can have that which is fine and fresh on our own plantation, and that in great abundance, so easily, if we only will. Then too, think of the berry and peach short cake, pies, puddings and many other delicious dishes that the ingenious housewife can prepare, with which to give us a feast and send us out to our work again, joyous and happy as though we had been to a banquet. And the good wife is also made happy and her burdens much lighter by knowing that she has prepared a meal fit for a King, without being put to her wits' end to know what to do to make a change.

Yes sir, Mr. President, your cabbage and turnips, summer squash and cucumbers, string beans and greens, beats and radishes, and even green peas as delicious as they are, all sink into insignificance, both in value, importance and economy, when compared with these.

It surely would not be expected in a paper like this to enter into detailed instructions how to raise small fruits. Nor indeed would it be necessary, for surely every farmer knows how to raise them. If he only will live up to his knowledge and do as well as he knows how, it will be all right, and he and his family will have abundance of fruit. But it may not be amiss to give some general directions.

A patch of ground as large as an ordinary kitchen garden—say, an eighth of an acre—if given the same care that is usually bestowed on a well kept garden, planted with the different kinds of berries, (including currants and grapes,) will furnish all the fruit of that kind a family can use during their season, and enough to can for winter use. Now, have you a piece of ground on your farm five times that size, that will repay you so well for the labor bestowed upon it, and furnish you and your family so much pleasure, profit and luxury, providing as it does a healthy, life-giving, invigorating and luxurious diet?

In briefly enumerating the kind of fruit necessary for a continuous succession, I will commence with the strawberry, the queen of all the berries, which comes earliest, and just at the time when our natures most require its peculiar qualities.

Why so many live without this delicacy I cannot see, when a few rods of ground, with the care and labor given to a cabbage patch of the same size, will furnish all the berries a family can use.

By a proper arrangement of varieties the season will last for about four or five weeks. And this fruit never fails to reward you for all the care you give it. But do not think you can set out a few plants late in the fall or early spring and have an abundant crop of berries without giving it any more attention. You would not be so silly as to expect a crop of corn, or potatoes, or anything else, if treated in that way. Why, then, expect a crop of berries under such circumstances?

Select for your berry patch any good garden soil, the richer the better. You cannot raise nice berries on poor ground. Set in September and watered so as to give a good start, and mulched in winter, they will yield a fair crop the next season, but ordinarily it is better to set in the spring. I would set—say six rows—four or five rods long, and the next year after picking turn under and reset the next spring. The plants you set last spring will furnish a better and more abundant crop next summer and with less labor than ever after. Then, after they have borne, turn under and reset the following spring with runners from the six rows set the previous spring; and so on with the two plats of six rows each, turning under and resetting one of them every spring. In this way you will never fail to have a good, strong, vigorous vine, and more and better berries from half of the patch than you would have from the whole, if left to fruit year after year without resetting, and will take much less labor.

The first season after setting they will need frequent cultivating and hoeing. But how long will it take to cultivate and hoe six rows of strawberries five rods long? The second season they need but little care except to pick the fruit. If kept clean the first season, and cultivated in early spring, or mulched, the weeds and grubs will not start enough to do any harm until after you have got done with them.

As to kinds of strawberries, if I had but one variety, it would be the Sharpless. If two, I would add the Crescent, for early. If three, either Cumberland, Kentucky, or Charles Downing. But do not have too many varieties. In getting plants, do not go to some one and get some stunted, dwarfed plants that have grown in the weeds and grubs until they have "run out," and mixed up so that you do not know what they are, simply because you can get them for nothing. Better pay for a few hundred good plants to start with. It will be cheaper in the end.

Next after strawberries come the raspberries, and you will be surprised at the amount of berries a few well-kept bushes will furnish. Better have a score of bushes, and take care of them as they ought to be, than a hundred and neglect them. Doolittle's black cap or Tyler will commence ripening before the strawberries are gone. The Ohio or Mammoth Cluster follow, and then the Gregg—the latest, largest and most productive of all the black caps. Three rows—one early, one medium, and one late—will furnish all the berries a family can use for several weeks. I would also add one row of red raspberries. There are a number of very fine, large varieties, but I doubt if there are any as hardy, healthy and prolific as the Turner and Cuthbert, for these seldom fail. After the plants are once set they will last for years without resetting, but they must be kept clean and in the hills, the new canes cut back in August and the old canes cut out. If they are given a few hours' attention just at the proper time they will take no more time or attention than so many rows of potatoes; but if left until they are more like a neglected hedge fence they had better be cut down and burned up, for no amount of labor will ever make them profitable.

The last few times you go to pick the Greggs, look over to that row of Snyder blackberries next to them, and see how the bushes are bending down with their loads of fruit, some green, some turning red, and some already black. Just in time so you need not skip a meal without your berries. One or two rows of these, cared for the same as raspberries, will continue the berry season another two weeks, and before they are gone the plums and peaches will be ready for use.

Now don't say you can't raise plums, for you can. That is what they told me twelve years ago when I set out a few plum trees, and one man said he would be willing to contract all the plums I would raise at one dollar each. But for all that I have never failed of having a supply of plums. Set out a few trees of the common blue plum and a few of the larger varieties that are hardy and productive, such as Lombard or Washington. A half a dozen in all are a plenty. Set them in the hen yard or hog yard, if convenient. If not, then somewhere else where it is convenient and they are handy to get at. When the blossoms begin to fall give them a good spraying with London Purple, at the rate of a quarter of a pound to fifty gallons of water, and then again after the fruit is about the size of a small pea. (i. e., providing the sentimentalists in our State legislature do not pass a law to prohibit the spraying of fruit trees, for the purpose of protecting the insects.) If it should rain soon after spraying they must be sprayed again immediately. If you have not the conveniences for spraying (or if prohibited by law), you can protect your plums from the curculio by jarring the trees. In fact, I think the jarring, if properly done, is more effectual and produces better results than spraying. Early every morning (or every other morning will do) while the curculio is yet sluggish, give the tree a sudden jar. You can do this with your hand when the tree is small, but when larger you will need a wooden mallet well padded. Commence when the blossom begins to fall and continue until the plums are as large as peas. If the trees are where the hens and chickens can run under them this will be sufficient, but if not you had better spread some old sheets or a canvas under the tree before jarring it, and then gather up the little Turks and give them a bath in a convenient pail of water. Now this appears to be quite a job, but if you have only a few trees, properly located, it will take but a minute, as you pass along to the barn or hog house, and it is only for a short time that it has to be done. And recollect that this is all the labor you have to bestow on your plum trees in a whole year to secure an abundant crop. I have tried smoking and all the other methods that have been going the rounds of the press for the last twelve years, and they have all failed, but this method has never failed to reward me with a good crop of nice fruit.

Fifteen or twenty peach trees, located—not in what is called a sheltered position,—but on some high point of ground, near a bank or ravine if possible, will, if a proper selection of varieties has been made, commence ripening the most delicious fruit of them all about the middle of August, and will furnish a continuous supply until the last of October. As to the culture and care of these, as well as that of two or three cherry trees, a few grape vines and current bushes,—all of which furnish us their fruits at their appointed time during the season, to bestow upon us a gracious and more bountiful variety, and which are necessary to make the collection complete,—I need not say anything, as it is well understood by all.

Thus we see that the great and good Creator has arranged all these delicious fruits for our use, so that we may, if we will, have a continuous feast of Nature's luxuries from spring till autumn, and He has promised that seed time and harvest shall not fail. Are we not, then, sinning against ourselves, our families, and the great Giver of all blessings, if we neglect to put forth the little effort that is necessary on our part to secure them?

OBITUARY.

The Evening Journal of March 24th, published at Jersey City, contains the following notice of the death of Mr. D C. Farley—The deceased was a brother to P. J. Farley of Tecumseh—This is the third member of the family who has passed over to the other shore since last New-Years. Mrs. John Wishart and himself are the only members of the family now surviving.

Mr. D. C. Farley, one of the most respected merchants of the heights, died yesterday after a three days' attack of pneumonia. He carried on the business of hardware opposite the court house for upward of a quarter of a century. Previous to this he was in business in New York in partnership with Mr. Patch, the firm being Patch & Farley. He was a highly respected member of the Berkeley Club. He was greatly admired for his unostentatious charities. He had resided at 349 St. Paul's Avenue for upward of thirty years. He leaves an only son, E. S. Farley, who was his confidant and business right hand man for years. The family is a very old one in the northern portion of New York state. Mr. Farley's death caused no little sorrow to day among hundreds who knew and liked the sturdy old merchant, whose word was as good as his bond.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

WHEREAS, Our divine Master, in whom we believe is all wisdom, justice and mercy, hath once more bereaved us as a Club by taking our worthy friend and neighbor, Mrs. John Rector, to join those who so recently passed in silence to that mysterious realm whither all mankind are journeying, thereby freshing the wound of broken ties; therefore

Resolved, That we meekly bow to the inevitable and realize that the Club has lost a true friend and the community a respected citizen.

Resolved, That we as a club tender the children and grand-children of the deceased our heartfelt sympathy in this sad bereavement and wish Heaven's choicest blessings to attend them.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Club and be sent to the TECUMSEH HERALD for publication.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN FISHER,
MR. AND MRS. GEO. GRISWOLD,

TRIP TO CHICAGO.

Business called us to Chicago, Harvey and LaPorte last week, and I landed in the "boss city" in time for tea Monday evening. The absorbing topic at the hotel was LaGrippe, and the horrid detail of this pest in the unfortunate city was not calculated to help the healthy digestion of a weary traveler. The evening papers reported 810 deaths the week previous and the prospects of over 1000 the present week. Nothing but the genuine Russian Grip could produce such fearful results, and I am convinced we know but little in our village of this dreadful epidemic, and I hope we never shall. A single carriage following the remains of a dear friend conveyed in an ordinary express wagon is not a pleasing sight, but an ordinary one at the Chicago cemeteries. The city railway, the stores, the shops, in fact everything is sadly affected by this fearful pest and the citizens are earnestly praying for sunshine to rid them of their horror. We decided to change our program to strict business methods and go east.

Among the new acquaintances formed we passed a few happy hours at the type foundry of Messrs. Shniedewend & Lee Co. Mr. Lee, Sr., we recognized an "old timer" who is trying to make this life a success if he is obliged to work six days a week. His son took us in charge and we visited their manufactory, and we do not wonder that so many excellent printer's tools come from this house. The hand press, awaiting repairs, made us a boy again. A new style of heating the shop consisted of a large coil of steam pipes, in the basement, containing live steam and the heat from these pipes is boxed and fanned through large tin tubes to different parts of the shop, supplying an even temperture at 60°. Our visit was indeed beneficial, instructive, etc., and we hope to shake hands with Mr. Lee again in the near future.

The Boston Store is decidedly Chicago from basement to annex and balcony. Our friends should visit this immense establishment, whether they purchase or not. You can buy anything but a glass of lager. The manager and assistants have a peculiar faculty of making a stranger perfectly at home. Time spent with these people you can set down on the profit page of the ledger.

The Auditorium we can only describe by saying that you must see it by daylight and electricity to comprehend the idea of splendor entertained by Solomon, the Queen of Sheba, and other wise people of the east. The Thomas Orchestra entertained the audience. Mr. Thomas has just received his appointment as conductor of music at the World's Fair.

We intended to visit many Tecumseh friends of the "colony," but found the grippe had got the start and spoiled many pleasant greetings. I hope they may pass through this severe ordeal and enjoy the many blessings associated with a social chat.

We looked over the town of Harvey where so many of our people are buying prairie mud. Of course this is the worst time in the whole season to look at any new town, but Harvey certainly has a bright and prosperous future. Old printers who have grown up with the city are profuse in their praise of the Harvey investment, either as home or as a safe investment for idle money. Take the excursion train at Adrian and you will escape the annoyance of wise men and their imps.
